ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

WEDNESDAY JULY 9, 1890.

General Intelligence.

[BY OVERLAND MAIL.]

THE Overland Mail brings us letters and advices from Bombay to the 20th June; from Allahabad and Madras to the 18th June; and from Calcutta to the 18th June.

THE Viceroy went out to Mashobra on Saturday evening, June 14th, as the guest of the Commander-in-Chief, and returned to Simla on Monday.

LADY HARRIS, accompanied by Dr. Martin and Captain Jervis, Aide-de-Camp, have arrived in Poona.

SIR GEORGE GREAVES, Commander-in-Chief, Bombay, has arrived in Poona.

A RESOLUTION will shortly be issued by the Government of India, re the preservation of insectivorous birds.

A DESPATCH has recently been sent home by the Government to the Secretary of State on the gauge question.

THE despatch advocates that all future lines in India shall, as far as possible, be constructed on the broad gauge system.

THE annual Royal Engineers' dinner was held at the United Service Club, Simla, on Saturday evening, June 14th. Some thirty officers sat down to the table, with the Commander-in-Chief and Sir George Chesney as guests.

GENERAL ELLES, Adjutant-General, has gone into the interior on short leave.

THE post of Brigade-Major to General Luck, Inspector-General of Cavalry in India, will be filled by Captain Pollard, 7th Bengal Cavalry, during the next cold weather.

THE Government of Bombay has ordered a reduction of the Deccan College fee from Rs. 120 to Rs. 80, and in the case of students holding a junior scholarship to Rs. 60.

COLONEL CONWAY GORDON'S Administration Report on Railways in India is published. In all fifty-six railways are being worked, including twelve State lines worked by companies and seventeen State lines worked by the State. The actual financial results to the State for working the Indian railways represent a net loss of Rs. 2,09,03,454 on guaranteed railways, showing a loss of Rs. 87,84,950, and State lines leased to companies Rs. 69,81,766.

THE proposed change in the mobilisation scheme—viz., massing by divisions instead of ~~of~~ corps, has been sanctioned by the military authorities.

IN their final reply re the Simla-Kalka Railway, the Government of India positively decline to give any guarantee to the Company. They offer a subsidy of one and a-half lakhs per year for ten years, and one lakh a year for a further term of another ten years if they undertake to construct the line.

THE French authorities at Chandernagore are issuing notices to French subjects to conform to the terms of the French Conscription Act and reside in French territory and bear arms and serve for the time in the Army. This has caused considerable consternation among the Native community, and some have moved into British territory.

THERE is great excitement among the Jain community of Calcutta regarding one of their number who has recently returned to India from England.

THE Russian authorities have reported to the British Home Department that Dad Mahomed, Mr. Dalgleish's murderer, has committed suicide in captivity at Samarcand.

THE force despatched by the Ameer against the Sheik Ali Hazarus has not yet succeeded in coercing them.

THE Governor of Kandahar is now at Sheukai, but in spite of rumours there seems to be little truth in the report that the Tarakis and Andaris, two sections of the Gilzais, are rebelling against the Ameer.

MR. SCOTT'S report on the mission to Kyaington has been submitted to the Chief Commissioner, Burma, and is shortly expected by the Government of India.

PRINCE LUANG DEVAWONGSE, eighth brother of the King of Siam, was interviewed the other day by Mr. Norman. He states that a boundary question is shortly to come on with the French.

AMONGST 200 returned emigrants from Mauritius landed by the steamer Warora at Calcutta were, it is stated, several lepers—some of them in a very advanced stage of the disease.

THE Mahomedans of Dindigul and Madras propose petitioning the Queen-Empress for an extension of Lord Connemara's tenure of office.

COLONEL PEMBERTON, of the Marine Battalion, retired from the service on June 11th. He will probably be succeeded by Major Forjett, of the 4th Rifles.

THE ponies of a tonga, in which Lieutenants Gallie, Brookshank and Holmes were driving in Secunderabad, having been breasted by an African cavalry guard, who was riding in front of the Nizam's carriage, shied and upset the tonga.

THE trooper deliberately made a cut with his sword at Lieutenant Gallie, who only escaped a serious wound by dodging the blow as the cart was being upset.

THE eclipse of the sun was seen most successfully at Simla, the weather being perfect for observations.

THE Bombay Millowners' Association have re-affirmed their decision to close their mills for eight days per month for three months owing to the slackness of trade. The operatives, who had asked them to reconsider the matter, have been told that at the expiration of the three months the mills will be closed one day in every seven, such day to be Sunday, unless some general Native holiday occurs which would justify another day being chosen.

THE Pension pay-offices of the Bombay and Poona Circles will be abolished at the close of the current month. The payment of military pensioners from July 1st will be made by Civil treasuries, except in the town of Bombay, where pensioners of the Native Army will be paid by the Accountant-General, Bombay, and all other military pensioners by the Presidency Paymaster. The Paymaster in the Southern Konkan districts is not to be disturbed.

THE reversion of the post of Agent to the East India Railway, in view of Mr. D. W. Campbell retiring at no distant date, which has for some time been under offer to Lieutenant Colonel Firebrace, R.E., has been declined by that gentleman. An endeavour since to enlist the services prospectively of Lieutenant-Colonel Marryat, at present Secretary in London of the Bengal and North-Western Railway Company, has been equally unsuccessful.

THE official returns of the foreign land trade of British India, for the eleven months ending February, 1890, show a falling off in the value of imports amounting to 35 lakhs of rupees, and an increase of exports valued at 31 lakhs. The decrease in the imports is more than accounted for by an extraordinary decline in the importations from Karenji and Zimme, which fell by some 42 lakhs; while the increase in the exports is mainly due to a rise of 25 lakhs in the value of the consignments to Kabul, and of six lakhs in the value of those to Kashmir.

THE annual Report of the Bengal Presidency Rifle Association, which has just been published, shows that steady progress is being made all along the line. A large increase in the number of members, subscriptions from 21 instead of 14 regiments, and 89 local meetings as compared with 64 in the previous year, are the most satisfactory points to be noted. Financially, too, the Association is in a good condition. It has Rs. 13,000 to its credit, though the value of the prizes presented last year was Rs. 43,500, as against Rs. 28,000 in 1888.

NOTES.

THE news from India continues to be quiet and uneventful. The rainfall at Bombay when the present mail left had been more than double what it was at the corresponding period last year. A city can have too much of a good thing, and Bombay had then already received a fourth of its normal quantity of rain.

BUT it had received good, also, in another way. The mortality for the week was the lowest ever recorded there—being only 17·26 per thousand per annum. The Bombay papers rejoicingly add that this will most probably be found to be lower than that of London for the corresponding week, but will certainly beat the best record that the mortality returns of the Continental cities can show.

AT Simla everyone is reported as being bent on amusement. One evidently new hand, finding on his arrival that he had just come in time for an amateur theatrical performance, writes to his favourite paper that this discovery was "a perfect godsend" to him. The gods at Simla give liberally gifts of this kind.

IN other ways they are not always so generous. In their final reply re the Simla-Kalka Railway the Government positively decline to give any guarantee to the company, but offer a subsidy of one and a-half lakhs per year for ten years, and one lakh a year for a further term of another ten years, if they undertake to construct the line. The cart road is to remain untouched, and there is now some idea of bringing the line up via Siri, over the Naldara Ridge, and making the terminus at Mashobra. The rates first quoted by the company are said to have been eleven times as great as the charges quoted by bullock train service, and the rates have been greatly reduced.

IT is reported that the French authorities at Chandernagore are issuing notices to French subjects resident there, requiring them to conform to the terms of the French Conscription Act and reside in French territory and bear arms and serve for the time in the army. This has caused considerable consternation among the Native community, and some have moved into British territory. Others are taking legal advice, and others are making applications to the Bengal Government to become naturalised British subjects.

IN reply to the letter of the Bengal Chamber of Commerce, pointing out defects in the present system of obtaining public opinion on proposed rules and laws, and urging that greater care be taken to obtain non official opinion on projects of legislation, the Government of India remarks that measures of legislation which especially affect the mercantile community often have their origin in representations made by that community, and that Chambers of Commerce are invariably consulted through the local Governments on such matters. The Government also states that ample time is given for discussion of bills introduced into the Council between the date of introduction and that on which they become law, and that the greatest weight is attached to the opinions of representatives of the mercantile interests. The Government concludes by saying that the practice hitherto followed appears to be in complete accordance with that desired by the Chamber, but that any specific recommendations which the Chamber may make will receive careful attention.

IT is stated that affairs on the Chitral frontier of Kashmir are not going too smoothly. The newly trained troops recently ordered to Gilgit, while employed in choosing a suitable place for cantonments, are said to have been interfered with by the Chitralees. The Kashmir State Gazette informs us that the "raghbeer" and "fatah" regiments previously directed to leave for Gilgit will not go there, but will await further orders.

THE statement that the military authorities have been moved by the prevalence of typhoid to decide upon establishing dairy farms at the principal cantonments in Upper India, with the idea of supplying the British troops with pure milk, appears to be, says the Pioneer, an absurd exaggeration of a very much more modest suggestion. For the Government to start as milk supplier to its army would obviously be a very big business, involving a great outlay in the first instance for the purchase or hire of cattle and the taking up of ground to keep them on; while a new Department would be required to look after the experiment, for without strict supervision it would be worthless. Nothing of this sort has ever been contemplated; but it is intended, we believe, to start experimental dairy farming on a small scale for the supply of the hospitals, and it is probable that a beginning will be made at Rawal Pindi.

THE Bombay Gazette, which has been distinctly friendly to the Congress, concludes an article in the following words:—"Had the campaign been carried on with more prudence and with a little less ostentation; had the counsels of moderation which were heard in Bombay last December been listened to, the fiasco in Madras would have been less noticeable. As it is, the contrast between the programme in England and the cash book in India is too striking for the enemies of the Congress not to find in it an occasion for bitter railing, which no consciousness of the potential usefulness of the Congress, when it is more wisely counselled, will modify. And the leaders in India should face the fact that one more 'such secret and confidential circular as that which has been brought to light in Madras will bring the whole enterprise to an end.'" The Times of India says:—"The Indian National Congress would appear to be slowly dying of inanition. The letter from the Secretary of the Madras Committee is quite piteous in its appeal for funds. Outside the enthusiastic atmosphere of a Congress meeting there is neither vitality nor genuineness in the movement. 'What words,' asks Mr. Hume, 'can I use strong enough to pierce your hearts and to sting you into exertions such as Englishmen would make in like cases?' Not any; for when an agitation becomes so pathetic as this, the chances are that nothing will stir it up again."

THE Lahore paper makes the following observations upon the latest and perhaps the most foolish of Mr. Bradlaugh's questions:—"What our correspondent describes as Mr. Bradlaugh's 'extraordinary' question in the House refers of course to the vapouring of the Times of India some time ago on the subject of its own journalistic chastity. If we remember aright a little jealousy of the Pioneer was at the bottom of the business; and with a 'we could and if we would' air the Bombay paper hinted to the world that it had been approached, and advances had been made to it to become the official organ. These insidious advances the Times of India repelled with the righteous horror of the proper-minded spinster who sees in every passer-by a violent pretender to her maidenly affections; and 'the subject'—such, we believe, was the unromantic termination to this thrilling romance—

'dropped.' We do not suppose for an instant that the Government of India or of Bombay—even in Lord Reay's time—ever made any improper proposals to any paper; but the Times of India wished to nurse the severe pride of unassailable virginity in public. Still, there would not have been much that was very comic in the situation if Mr. Bradlaugh had not been put up to 'ask a question' in Parliament about the alleged shocking proceedings of our bold, bad Government. It was either after or before the incident alluded to that the haughtiness of the Times of India broke out in a new place, and dubbed Bombay a 'kingdom.' Will Mr. Bradlaugh now kindly relieve the agitated two hundred millions of India by asking a question in the House of Commons; whether Government has created an independent kingdom in the west of the peninsula; whether the Secretary of State has bribed a Bombay paper to announce the fact, and whether Government will lay papers on the table? Until this is done we shall not, perhaps, quite realise what excellent fooling the 'Membership for India' is."

CALCUTTA, JULY 6.

The National Congress delegates returning from England are expected to arrive at Bombay to-day. It is proposed to hold a public meeting to welcome them, but, notwithstanding such occasional outbursts of activity, the movement seems languishing and in danger of dying of inaction. The leaders complain that funds are not coming in, and the Hindoo upper classes show a want of interest, if not absolute hostility, which is likely to imperil the success of next winter's Congress. Meanwhile the Mahomedans are working quietly, and their National Association has published a long list of meetings, held in various parts of the country, at which the introduction of the elective principle has been strongly condemned.

The summer session of the Legislative Council opened at Simla on Thursday. Mr. A. R. Scoble introduced a Bill to amend certain provisions of the Indian Evidence Act, which have been severely criticised by judicial authorities—namely, those which permit the prosecution to prove previous conviction of the accused for purposes of raising a presumption that he committed the offence charged. A Bill amending the Cattle Trespass Act was the only other measure introduced.

The Commission of Inquiry as to the alleged outrage on British officers was sitting at Secunderbad all last week, and is not yet concluded. The evidence is conflicting. The officers maintain that a trooper of the Nizam's escort deliberately charged their tonga and cut at them with his sabre, while the witnesses on the other side say that the trooper's horse bolted, and that the collision was purely accidental. It is reported that the Nizam will be asked to give evidence.

The news that the Secretary of State has sanctioned the construction of the East Coast railway from Cuttack to Bezvada as a State line is received with much satisfaction, especially in Madras. The length is estimated at 507 miles, and the total cost for a broad gauge at 482 lakhs, including bridges over the rivers Mahanadi and Kistna. The Madras public are already proposing a continuation of the line from Bezvada to Madras. It will also, no doubt, be eventually extended northwards to Calcutta.

The heavy rains have caused a large breach in the embankment of the Damooda river in the Burdwan district. It is stated that the crops are much injured, and that houses have been destroyed and cattle carried away. Another serious result of the recent rainfall has been a great landslip on the Darjeeling-Himalayan railway about two miles below Darjeeling. The mass of earth which slipped from the hill-side is estimated at 250,000 cubic feet. Two rocks 30ft. high fell across the line, and the traffic was interrupted for a week, but is now resumed.

The Government has published a summary of the reports of last year's wheat crop in all the provinces. It says that the out-turn over the whole of India was less than the average, but not much below that of the previous year. It will be safe not to expect a larger export than last year.

A strange shipping accident occurred in Calcutta Harbour on Thursday evening. The ship Main, while being moored at Garden Reach, was swept from her moorings by an exceptionally high tide and drifted against the steamer Regius, which was moored close by. The Regius was severely damaged and sank in a quarter of an hour. All hands were saved.

Two hundred Punjabees, recruited for the East Africa Company's police, have left Bombay for Mombasa, under the command of Lieutenant Budd. They are described as fine stalwart men. They were unarmed at embarkation, but arms were sent in the same steamer.

BURMA.

RANGOON, JULY 5.

The Rangoon Gazette publishes a letter from a correspondent at Fort White, on the Chin frontier, giving a deplorable account of the health of the troops. Fifty-four per cent. of the total strength are in hospital. The garrison consists of the 2nd Battalion 4th Goorkhas. Europeans, Goorkhas, and Natives are equally affected. The site of Fort White is singularly ill-chosen. There are no detailed accounts of the health of the troops at Haka. It is understood that their condition contrasts favourably with that of the garrison of Fort White. An arrangement has been effected with the Chins to carry the post from Haka to Kan, and vice versa.

Mr. Collins, Deputy Commissioner at Katha, has returned from Wunthoo, where he had an interview with the Tsawbwa. This is the first occasion on which the Tsawbwa has met any high English official. The local Government consider this satisfactory, as showing that the Tsawbwa is abandoning the attitude of distrust and suspicion hitherto maintained towards the Government.

The condition of affairs in the district adjacent to Wunthoo, however, continues highly unsatisfactory, owing to the shelter afforded to dacoits in Wunthoo. Katha is disturbed by a number of dacoit gangs, one led by the brother of the notorious Hlaoo, who gave so much trouble after the annexation. These gangs have committed numerous and serious outrages. One gang "rushed" the police guard and captured twelve rifles. The Commissioner of the northern division reports, "As to Katha, no doubt dacoity has considerably increased."

The family of the Mingoon Prince have left Pondicherry to join the Prince at Saigon.

Fresh complications are likely to arise over the Burma-Siam Boundary Commission. The Siamese Government complain that during the recent insurrectionary disturbances at Zimme the chief of Chiengtong supplied arms and ammunition to the insurgent leader, Phayap. The Chiengtong State is claimed by the British Government. The Chief, however, repudiates British suzerainty, alleging that he was never feudatory to Burma.

The slave trade between Madras and Rangoon still continues. The police this week found forty coolies for sale, confined in one house. The coolies were being sold at twenty-five rupees each. The owner of the house has been arrested. Several persons engaged in this nefarious traffic have been recently convicted before the Recorder of Rangoon, receiving severe but well-deserved sentences.

TRAVELLING ALLOWANCES.

At the request of the Board of Revenue the Madras Government has addressed the Government of India regarding the inadequacy of the present travelling allowances of officers in case of transfers from one district to another. Under Article 1,093 of the Civil Service Regulations it is impossible to charge to Government the cost of the carriage of camp equipment and horses by rail and steamer in all cases in which it is to the interest of the public service that such method of conveyance should be adopted, and strict application of the provisions of the code will operate very hardly, and give cause for discontent. It is absolutely necessary, when an officer is moved from one district to another, that his horses and camp equipment should accompany him and be ready for use on arrival at his new station. Otherwise the officer concerned will be much hampered and at a loss to go on with his duties should he have to go out into the district on arrival. Frequently it takes weeks for horses and camp equipage to be marched from one station to another, and the loss of time thus incurred by the officer, who has to remain at headquarters pending their arrival, militates against the interests of the public service, especially if it be during the jama-bandi season.

PRICES AND WAGES IN INDIA.

(Times of India.)

We dealt the other day with the new Government return relating to Prices and Wages in India, and in analysing an important section of its figures showed that so far as regards some seventy per cent. of the artisans, mechanics, and labourers of this country, wages have not increased one pie in twenty years. To the student of economics this will be a somewhat startling deduction, and one which finds parity in probably no other nation of the world. Remarkable as it is thus simply stated, it becomes more noteworthy still when we remember that while wages have remained stationary, prices have gone up. Stated in terms which embrace the consideration of the latter fact, a plain review of the case is that in 70 per cent. of the instances citable wages have decreased, in 20 per cent. have remained stationary (i.e., have advanced in identical ratio with prices), and in only 10 per cent. of instances have increased. Of the 10 per cent. of increases, 7 per cent. relate to the big cities; but even in the cities many industries show a very remarkable decline, while in the mofussil certain employments display here and there an equally striking and very erratic advance. In a small town in the Madras Presidency, for instance, the wages of a syce have risen from Rs. 4 to Rs. 15 per month, while taking the average of seven cities (including Bombay, Calcutta, and Madras) we find that in the twenty years ordinary blacksmiths' wages have declined fully 30 per cent. These, however, are exceptional instances, though without doubt they point a very strong moral. Looking at the returns as a whole, we find few cases so marked as these; but we find quite enough to show that the tendency of wages is distinctly retrograde. Taking a few instances at haphazard we find that throughout Bengal, wherever the wages of colliery smiths and miners have not remained stationary, they have decreased. Stonecutters' wages on the Orissa Canal have only advanced since 1869 from annas 4/37 per day to annas 5 in 1875, at which figure they have ever since remained. Carpenters' wages, it is true, have gone up considerably on the same works, but these are the only instances of an increase in the slightest degree commensurate with the increased cost of living. In the army boot factory at Cawnpore, again, wages for skilled labour show a decline from annas 3 p. 3½ to annas 3 p. 3; while in the harness and saddlery factory in the same city wages in twelve departments have shown a slight increase within the last two years, while in ten departments they have neither advanced nor declined. The conclusion, then, that has to be faced is that the enormous majority the wage-earning classes of India have for twenty years not bettered themselves by the addition of a single pie to their pay, and that, as living in the same period has become dearer, they are actually worse off to-day than they were in 1869.

TRANS-HIMALAYAN EXPLORERS.

(Pioneer.)

In the reprint of the annual address to the Asiatic Society of Bengal, delivered by Colonel Waterhouse of the Survey Department, some interesting particulars are given of the various exploring parties roaming the country beyond the Himalayas and the Hindu Kush. The Russians, it is noted, have displayed unusual activity for some time past, and if perseverance can win the day one or either of their officers should reach Lhasa eventually, or at least explore Tibet almost to the walls of that city. Colonel Pevtzoff, on whose shoulders the mantle of Prejevalski has fallen, must by this time have crossed the Tugus Daban Range, and be on that plateau 12,000 feet about sea-level which he is so anxious to examine for routes leading to the Tibetan capital. He has with him a small but well-equipped party, not the least important of which is a geologist. Another Russian explorer is M. Grum-Grjimalo, whose objective is Lake Lob Nor, his work being much less pretentious than that of Colonel Pevtzoff. M. Bonvalot, whose adventures on the Pamir and in Chitral will be remembered, is piloting Prince Henry of Orleans past the same lake, and intends travelling to the south-east in order to reach Yunnan and eventually French territory in Tonquin. A good deal of risk will have to be run on this journey, and it is very doubtful if the route indicated can be followed. Captain Grombchevski, who has received repeated rebuffs from the Afghans in Budakshan, has moved further eastwards, and is now believed to be somewhere in the neighbourhood of the Karakoram Mountains. We shall probably hear news of all these travellers during the next few months, particularly as two or three British officers are travelling in Yarkand and the Pamirs, but the late snowfall of this spring is rather against any great achievements in Central Asian exploration. Colonel Waterhouse, by the way, draws attention to the new field which is being opened to explorers by the extension of British influence in the far north of Upper Burma. Beyond Mogaung lies the unknown country containing what he describes as the upper waters of the great rivers of Burma and China. It is uncertain whether any trade routes traverse the hills through which the Irrawaddy finds its way, or whether any direct approach can be made along its banks to the districts lying to the south-east of Tibet. The wild tribes, such as the singphos, who hold the near hills, are not likely to give much assistance to travellers who may be adventurous enough to pass beyond our frontier, but experience in the Brahmaputra Valley shows that even the most suspicious savages can be won over if carefully handled. It is too soon in the day to send exploring parties out from Mogaung, as the local tribes have only just been brought under control, but in a year or two we doubt not that the mystery connected with the upper course of the Irrawaddy will be satisfactorily solved. Already some information has been gathered from native sources during the recent operations against the Kachins, and our Survey Officers may be entrusted to go forward whenever an opportunity offers.

CO-OPERATIVE STORES FOR INDIA.

(Statesman.)

The idea of a co-operative society for the services in India has not the attraction of novelty. It has been suggested more than once, and the opinion has freely been expressed, that such an organisation would be a financial success. No serious attempts were made, however, to float a company for the purpose till about the beginning of last month, when the "Army, Navy and Civil Service Co-operative Society of India" was formed in London under influential direction, and with a large capital. According to the correspondent of a Bombay contemporary, the committee of direction comprises a whole host of Admirals and retired Major-Generals, including Admiral Sir Reginald Macdonald, Major-General Sir William G. Davies, Major-General Lovelace Dumaesq, Rear-Admiral Robert A. E. Scott, Hon. Dudley Murray, and Mr. John D. Hannahill. All these gentlemen appear to have been connected more or less with India at one time or another, and are therefore, we suppose, presumed to be competent to judge whether a co-operative society of the kind proposed is likely to be a success in this country or not. Judging from the prospectus they have issued, the directors at least seem to entertain no doubt on the point. We are told that "the Indian Empire offers a very wide field for a 'Service' Co-operative Society," and "the establishment of this society will meet with the hearty approval of the highest military and civil authorities in India;" and so forth. The share capital of the company is set down at £100,000, in 10,000 shares of £10 each, of which 4,000 are reserved for issue in India. The following extract from the London letter of a Bombay contemporary explains more fully the object and prospects of the society:—

"The intention of the directors is to open well-appointed stores at Calcutta and Bombay. There is a large and profitable trade to be done with naval and military officers' messes, coffee bars, and canteens of regiments and ships stationed in India, many of which are at present sending to England very large orders in preference to purchasing at the high prices ruling in India. The directors say they have before them a report prepared by a gentleman who was sent to India for the purpose of personal inquiry as to the prospects of success attending the establishment of stores in that country, in which he states that he has carefully studied and given the subject his best attention, and is convinced of the prospects, and cannot too strongly recommend the opening of stores with as little delay as possible. Arrangements have been made with the firm of Messrs. James Finlay and Co., of London, Liverpool, and Glasgow, and Messrs. Finlay, Muir, Co., of Calcutta and Bombay, to act as agents to the Company; and Mr. T. G. Newton, who was closely connected with the management of the Army and Navy Co-operative Society in Victoria-street, is appointed General Manager."

We cannot say that we welcome this idea of establishing co-operative societies in our midst. The local tradesmen in our presidency cities will certainly not like it, and they have a reason for their dislike. They have, many of them, incurred great expense in establishing business in India, and they not unreasonably regard as their legitimate customers the small European population in the country to whose wants they have so long ministered. Co-operative trading societies may do well enough in large cities and towns in England, but in India the conditions are very different, and our sympathies are certainly with the tradesmen, who have a stake in the country and who have committed their fortunes thereto. However, if it is a fact that the "Co-operative Society of India" has already been successfully floated, our local tradesmen will have to make the best they can of it. Some consolation may perhaps be found in the assurance that the establishing of such a society in our midst will assist materially in breaking down the obnoxious credit system, with its consequently high prices.

FEMALE MEDICAL AID FOR INDIA.

(Advocate of India.)

The appeal that Lady Dufferin has addressed to the British public on behalf of the noble undertaking with which her name will ever be connected shows that, though she is now living under other skies, she has not forgotten the claims of the women of India on the sympathy of their more fortunate sisters. She tells people in Great Britain how gigantic is the task before the organisers of the scheme for providing female medical aid for the women and children of this country; but she also encourages them with a recital of what has already been done in four and-a-half years towards securing the object in view. Ten provincial branches have been formed under a Central Committee, and to these have been affiliated fifty local and district associations and committees. These associations and committees have succeeded in collecting no less a sum than twenty-one lakhs of rupees, of which ten lakhs have been spent in erecting hospitals and dispensaries for women, while eleven lakhs have been invested in order to provide a permanent income. "Thirty lady doctors are working in connection with this fund, and two hundred and thirty female pupils are studying in the medical schools of India." The number of women medically relieved during the past year is set down at two hundred thousand. When we remember how conservative are the people of India it must be admitted that this is a grand record of work, showing, as it does, not only that there are numbers of wealthy Natives who are willing to give their money to the Fund, but also that many thousands of women have been brought to see the advantage of trusting themselves to skilled medical treatment, instead of surrendering themselves to the tender mercies of ignorant nurses and quacks. Lady Dufferin's assurance that "millions and millions" of Indian women still remain without efficient help in time of their sorest need ought to elicit a satisfactory public response at this juncture, when Indian affairs are more than ever in evidence in England.

ADVANCES FOR AGRICULTURAL IMPROVEMENTS.

(Indian Daily News.)

It is satisfactory to find that increased attention is being paid in the Madras Presidency, or in some districts at least, to assisting the cultivators by Government advances for agricultural improvements and purposes connected with the working of their holdings. One of the greatest drawbacks to the agricultural prosperity of the country is the Native money-lender, who demands such enormous interest on his loans. Unless the Government steps in to help the unfortunate cultivator he must apply to the Marwaree, and once in his clutches it is long odds against the poor man ever getting free again. There are two Acts of the Government of India under which advances can be made by district officers to assist and encourage the ryots, namely, the Land Improvement Loans Act of 1883 and the Agriculturists' Loans Act of 1884. The object of the first measure is to enable ryots to permanently improve their holdings by such means as well irrigation, drainage, raising the level of the fields, &c., while, under the second, assistance is given for more temporary purposes, as the purchase of seed-grain in times of scarcity, re-stocking after loss of cattle, re-building houses destroyed by flood or fire. The Madras Government, during the last two years, has impressed upon its district officers the desirability of giving force to the wise intentions of the Legislature embodied in these Acts, with the result that in certain districts the officials have taken steps to make the provisions of the Acts generally known, and to place the benefits they confer within reach of the cultivators. Whereas, at the end of the year 1886-87, there were only Rs. 60,000 of such advances outstanding, the figure had been raised two years later to Rs. 52,17,023. Assuming that proper discretion has been exercised in sanctioning the loans, these operations should represent an enormous advantage to the agricultural population of the districts to which the figures refer. The new departure has not been by any means generally followed, and there is room for a much wider development of the policy to the advantage both of the individual cultivators, the Government, and the general prosperity of the country. Every rupee saved from the exorbitant money-lenders may be said to represent a rupee gained to some useful purpose; or at least that might be said if the people were only free from those social evils which constrain them to waste so much money in reckless and foolish expenditure. While efforts should be made to extend the operation of the Loans Acts for legitimate objects, the report on the working of the system suggests that there is room for greater care in some particulars. Laxity in enforcing the reasonable conditions on which loans are made is undesirable. For the good of the cultivators themselves they should be kept alive to a sense of their obligations and responsibilities, and the regular payment of interest and instalments should be strictly enforced, except under exceptional circumstances warranting indulgence. Such circumstances are not likely to account for the fact that the collections of interest for the last year reported on amounted to only 63 per cent. of the total amount due, and of instalments to only 75 per cent. It is bad policy to encourage the ryot in habits of thriftlessness to which he is too prone, and which have made him the prey of the unscrupulous bunnia.

TO MRS. GRUNDY.

Light eyelids that droop not in slumber,
Keen eyes that can pierce through a wall,
Strong brain no details can encumber
Of laps, indiscretion, and fall.
Hard heart that allows no gradation,
But sheds the full measure of shame
On the purest that bows to temptation,
Our Lady of Blame.

I have seen thee in Customs' cold forum
Dispensing thy judgments around,
From the glacial throne of decorum
With rigid formality crowned.
No mercy impairs thy decision,
Thy sentence is ever the same,
Sans hope of appeal or revision,
Our Lady of Blame.

One doom to the angel or devil,
A sun-mote thy balance will weigh;
Too high is thy standard in level,
Thy touchstone too keen in assay.
'Tis sin whether faded by weeping,
Or blazoned in letters of flame.
Alas! for the fame in thy keeping,
Our Lady of Blame.

E'en anger divine, grace may leaven,
Thus David when choosing his ban
Clung close to the scourges of Heaven,
And shrank from the mercy of man.
So I, when I fall or I falter,
Will creep with my broken-down fame,
Not to thee, but the foot of God's altar,
Our Lady of Blame.

Thou may'st snare the gazelle in thy springle,
May'st lay the wild horse by the heels,
Death comes in a dream of the dingle,
Or lays his cold hands on the wheels;
But we spurn thy reins and thy traces,
Our necks are too stiff for the hame,
Our limbs scorn thy finical paces,
Our Lady of Blame.

Ah me! we poor offspring of sorrow,
We daughters and sons of the clay,
Drear winter may come with the morrow,
The blossoms are blooming to-day.
So we wander through garth and through garden,
Though thou standest by to proclaim
Our trespass, and travers our pardon,
Our Lady of Blame.

Stern tyrant! our tears are thy treasures,
Our hearts when they ache are thy toys,
Tormented, we furnish thy pleasures,
Despairing, we flavour thy joys;
Our youth thou would'st winnow from passion,
Our life without laughter would'st frame,
Our world without sunlight would'st fashion,
Our Lady of Blame.

And thou, we, thou circumspect ever
When youth was at large in the vein,
Was life then a ceaseless endeavour
To stifle the heart in the brain?
Was it always the cult of to prepon,
Was obloquy ever thine aim,
Did'st ne'er lack a victim to step on?
Our Lady of Blame.

Thy virtues are iron-clad vices,
Thine ethics an ordered machine,
No human affection entices
Thy soul to leap over the screen,
The screen of a Prude's occultation,
Thy life would be vapid and tame
Were it not for the joys of damnation,
Our Lady of Blame.

Thine home is the realm of Cocytus,
Thy comrades the ghouls of the grave,
Then cease to convulse and affright us,
But cross thou the Stygian wave,
To the flame that for ever is burning,
The worm that no ravage can maim,
Depart without hope of returning,
Our Lady of Blame.

BULBUL, in the Madras Mail.

BENGAL.

(June 18.)

MR. WYNNE, Agent, Bengal-Nagpur Railway, has proceeded home last week on business connected with the affairs of the line.

THE young Maharajah of Murbhunj, aged eighteen, has successfully passed the F.A. Examination of the Calcutta University.

LEAVE was obtained by Mr. Bonnerjee on behalf of the Official Assignee, Calcutta, on the 11th inst., acting in re Elias H. Solomon, to file a suit against Sorab Suk Kotarhi for the recovery of three and a half lakhs of rupees, the value of Government paper, said to be in his possession and belonging to Solomon.

ELIAS H. SOLOMON was again arraigned on the 10th inst. before the Chief Presidency Magistrate, Calcutta, on the charge of having defrauded the Hong Kong and Shanghai Bank of Rs. 3,50,000, by means of forged opium passes. The case had been adjourned, at the last hearing, to enable Mr. Allen to read over the charges. That gentleman did not appear, but Babu Gonesh Chunder Chunder, on behalf of the accused, contended that only three or four passes bore the same date, and could be used for the prosecution. The Magistrate, however, held that a number of passes, presented on one date, constituted one offence. The evidence was then read over to the accused, who reserved his defence, after which he was committed to take his trial at the ensuing Sessions.

AT the Bengal end, the Bengal-Nagpur Railway is now, says the Englishman, open for traffic for 120 miles from Asansol without a single diversion. Mr. Barry, the District Engineer, is to be congratulated on the successful completion of the Damuda Bridge, the first brick of which was laid in October, 1888, and which has now been opened. The bridge is one of twelve spans, with a total length of 2,370 feet, and it is doubtful whether any work of like size has ever been constructed in so short a time before in India.

A SUIT was filed on the 10th inst. in Calcutta on behalf of the Official Assignee against the National Bank. It arises out of the insolvency of Leo Zander and Co., who failed in October last. They had a deposit of Rs. 31,000 in the Bank, and the Official Assignee claimed the amount. The Bank replied that they held current bills, and claimed a lien on the deposit as security. Eventually they rendered an account showing a loss of Rs. 19,000 on the bills, deducted that sum, and paid the Official Assignee Rs. 12,000 only. He now sues to recover the balance of Rs. 19,000.

A STRIKE of chief engineers in the employ of the India General Company is threatened. It appears that Mr. Keogh, chief engineer of the Shillong, was summarily dismissed on a report from the captain. Twelve other chief engineers submitted a protest to the agents, Messrs Kilburn and Co., asking for a full inquiry, and declaring that until such inquiry was held they would all refuse to sail in any steamer commanded by Captain Greyner. The agents refused to entertain the protest unless this clause were withdrawn. The chief engineers have held a meeting at the Institute of Mechanical Marine Engineers, and unanimously resolved to adhere to the position they had taken up. A circular has been sent out asking for the support of all marine engineers.

A PETITION was before the High Court, Calcutta, on the 9th instant, from the Hindoos of Phulbari, Patna, against an order passed by the Magistrate of Patna prohibiting them from carrying an idol in procession on the public road on Rath Jatra day, the 19th of June. There is a Mahomedan mosque on the road, and in 1887 and 1888 it was considered necessary in view of Mahomedan opposition to prohibit the Hindoo procession. Subsequently the Hindoos induced the leading Mahomedans of the place to enter into an agreement acknowledging their right to carry their idol in procession, on condition that they do not blow conches, &c., near the mosque, and the procession took place in 1889. This year the District Magistrate has again issued orders prohibiting it. Their lordships, Justices Macpherson and Hill, refused to interfere.

MADRAS.

(June 18.)

ANOTHER Hindoo widow re-marriage has taken place at Madras. The widow was sixteen. The relations and friends of the bride and bridegroom were present. Brahminical ceremonies were observed in the usual manner.

THE Victoria Caste and Gosha Hospital was occupied for the first time at Madras on the 15th inst. The financial position of the hospital is unsatisfactory. The indisposition of part of the natives to support the hospital continues. The committee appeal for funds.

THE news from Madras in respect of Major Gough, Military Secretary to the Nizam's Government, is more reassuring this week. He is said to have much improved by the change from Ootacamund to Madras, and hopes are entertained that before long he will be convalescent.

In the last Government Gazette H.E. the Minister at Hyderabad reminds all jagirdars of the necessity of giving their cordial aid in the coming operations in connection with the census. He hopes that all officers of the Government will help in the work, which must, in the end, be profitable to all classes of the subjects of the Nizam. Those jagirdars who oppose the work will, he threatens, be liable to pay for a special census.

AN offer been made by Dr. Bradshaw to award prizes to be competed for by each grade of students of the Teachers' College, and the Elementary Normal School, Madras, on the results of an examination based on the objects seen in the Museum by the students, has been accepted by the Director of Public Instruction, Madras. Dr. Thurston, to whom the matter was referred, expressed his cordial sympathy with the movement as one calculated to bring the Museum in direct touch with the Educational Department, and offered to go round the Museum with the students, and to value their essays.

THERE is said to be no truth in the statement that the Home Secretary at Hyderabad contemplates the exclusion of all English barristers from practising in H.H. the Nizam's courts except those who possess a thorough knowledge of Urdu. The Home Secretary has no definite ideas on the subject, and at any rate he is not likely to deal with it with haste, or without consulting those best competent to advise him. He contemplates, however, the formation of two important commissions: one a law commission to revise existing laws, and to compile a comprehensive code for the guidance of all the State courts in all matters; and the other a jagir commission, to inquire and devise the best means whereby the civil and criminal powers now exercised by certain jagirdars can either be cancelled or controlled more effectually.

BOMBAY.

(June 20.)

MR. W. H. LUCAS, C.S., does duty as Assistant Collector, Surat.

SUBJECT to the sanction of Government being received by the officials of the Southern Mahratta Railway, the section of the Bellary-Kistna Railway between Nandyal and Cumbum was to have been opened for traffic on Sunday, the opening of this connecting link affording direct railway communication on the metre-gauge between Poona, Mormugao, or Bangalore, and Bezwada on the Kistna River. The Bodell extension of his Highness the Gaekwar's Dabhoi system of 2ft. 6in. gauge railways was also to have been opened for traffic on Monday.

MR. COOPER, the Chief Presidency Magistrate, on Wednesday, at the Esplanade Police Court, recorded evidence in the case in which Mr. Symington, the Secretary of the Queen Insurance Company, charges P. M. Mody with the offence of cheating, Mr. Budroodeen Tyebjee opening the case on behalf of the prosecution. After recording a portion of Mr. Symington's evidence in chief the case was adjourned.

MAJOR H. W. IND, R.A., who died at sea early yesterday morning on board the s.s. Canning, and who was buried at sea off Bombay, was suffering from remittent fever. The deceased officer was Deputy Assistant Adjutant-General on the Burmah District Staff. He served in the expedition to the Soudan in 1884 under Sir Gerald Graham, and was present at the destruction of Temai, and was possessed of the Egyptian Medal with two Clasps and the Khedive's Star. He joined the Army on Jan. 9, 1873.

NORTH-WEST PROVINCES AND PUNJAB.

(June 18.)

A QUANTITY of boring plant and machinery is now on its way out from home for the Geological Survey Department, Simla.

A SELECT COMMITTEE is now considering the advisability of rebuilding the old Foreign Office, Simla, now occupied by the Forest, Horse Breeding, and Surveyor-General's Departments, in order to afford more accommodation for clerks.

At a meeting of owners of houses in Bareilly cantonments, held at the Cantonment Magistrate's office on the 9th, and in reference to the recent fires, one of the matters which came under consideration related to the adoption of ways and means for extinguishing fires.

THE portion of the Delhi-Umballa-Kalka Railway between Umballa and Kalka is all laid and ballasted, and, with the exception of a few minor bridges awaiting their girders, this portion of the line could be opened for traffic. The rapidity with which work has been done on the Delhi-Umballa-Kalka line is very creditable.

THE main suggestion in Mr. Younghusband's report on the Simla water question, which is expected to issue immediately, is that machinery shall be procured and set up on the present catchment area, which shall be powerful enough to raise 127,000 gallons of water daily. Colonel Le Mesurier, Consulting Engineer, Punjab; Colonel Forbes, Irrigation Department, and Mr. O'Callaghan are also considering the question.

ON the night of the 9th inst. a storm of unusual violence, the wind blowing alternately from the east and west, passed over Meerut. In the evening of the same day a duststorm of great density overtook all who were driving, and owing to the sudden darkness it was necessary to light the lamps of all vehicles. The storm reduced the temperature very suddenly, and gave great relief, as the weather for three days previously had been terribly hot.

ON the morning of May 30th two Sepoys of the 6th Punjab Infantry, with a mule and its driver, were attacked near Bannu by a party of five Waziris. One Waziri was killed by his own party. A Sepoy and the mule-driver were wounded, and were brought to Bannu. The Waziris followed, but the gates of the city were shut. The Waziris thereupon looted the shops outside the city and wounded two policemen. The assailants, while on their return, captured nineteen ponies of No. 4 Mountain Battery, which were bringing in grass at 5 P.M. A party of Sowars was despatched in pursuit by Captain Yate, but no capture was made. Manu Khan Waziri, who was ordered to be confined by the Deputy Commissioner, was released on the 1st inst. It is said that several thousand Waziris collected in the hills to attack Bannu should Manu Khan not be enlarged.

A VIOLENT thunderstorm, accompanied with heavy rain, burst over Lahore and outskirts on Monday night, uprooting trees and doing considerable damage along the line of the North-Western Railway. Two empties and a loaded waggon stationed on a siding at Phagwara were sent adrift by the heavy gale into Phillour, where the two former collided with a shunting engine and got fearfully telescoped. Happily no injury was done to the driver or fireman. The loaded waggon in the rear somehow got on to the main line and was carried away with lightning rapidity by the force of the wind, eventually colliding with a goods train between Ladhawal and Ludhiana stations. The waggon was completely wrecked, whilst the whole train shook ominously, the engine being much damaged. The driver escaped miraculously. This accident blocked the line for some time, and, in consequence, the Allahabad mail was five hours and eight minutes behind time in arriving here. Such a thunderstorm has not yet been known in these parts for years.

It is reported from Calcutta that a well-known Mahomedan merchant, who has a large business, has suspended payment and sought the Insolvent Court for protection. The house is an old-established one, and has branches in Jeddah, Mauritius, and Muscat, and its failure will affect the Mahomedan merchants in Bombay as well as elsewhere to a great extent, as most of them are large creditors.

THERE is one crocodile more in the Hooghly than there ought to be, which happens in this way. Some fishermen at Kidderpore caught a crocodile, and after various unskilful attempts to kill it, were dragging it to the police station for the usual reward, when a Native gentleman came up and made a bargain with them to return the creature to the river again. He, no doubt, hoped that by showing kindness to the crocodile he would induce it to refrain from attacking him and his family when they went to bathe. Pious Hindoos are not good naturalists, and are willing to believe that by restoring a crocodile to the river they are propitiating the entire mugger family.

MILITARY INTELLIGENCE

THE services of Lieutenant F. H. T. Alexander, 2nd Battalion Leicestershire Regiment, are placed at the disposal of Government in the Political Department.

LIEUT.-COLONEL WALTER SCOTT, Bombay Staff Corps, has been gazetted a Colonel.

MAJOR HOWARD MELLISS has been granted the local and temporary rank of Lieut.-Colonel whilst holding the appointment of Chief Inspecting officer of the Native States' armies.

HON. CAPTAIN AND DEPUTY COMMISSARY C. TYLER, Bombay Establishment, is granted the honorary rank of Major.

CAPTAIN J. E. WHITING, of the Poona Volunteer Rifle Corps, is gazetted a Major.

COLONEL FANE SEWELL, who has just vacated the command of the 5th Infantry, Hyderabad Contingent, commands the district of Secunderabad during the absence on leave of General East.

THE proposed change in the mobilisation scheme, viz., massing by divisions instead of by army corps, has been sanctioned by the military authorities. It is likely that the movements will be made in the cold weather, in order to test the power of the North-Western Railway, especially the Bolan and Sind-Peshin sections.

THE statement that the military authorities have been moved by a prevalence of typhoid to decide upon establishing dairy farms at the principal cantonments in Upper India, with an idea of supplying the British troops with pure milk, is an exaggeration of a much more modest suggestion. It is only intended to start experimental dairy farming on a small scale for the supply of hospitals, and a beginning will be made at Rawalpindi.

NEW cavalry drill by squadron divisions instead of by troops has been provisionally approved by the Commander-in-Chief in India, and sent home for sanction by the War Office authorities.

THE leave for three months recommended by General Tregear for officers who served in the Chin-Lushai Expedition has not been sanctioned, as the operations did not interfere with the privilege leave to which officers were otherwise entitled.

Apozai, the new cantonment in the Zhob Valley, is to be officially re-christened by the name of Fort Sandeman.

At Quetta General Sir George White and a large civilian gathering, including ladies, witnessed an eminently successful rocket practice by the mule battery in the hills surrounding the Henna Pass. Head-and-shoulder targets were placed at a distance of 800 yards, which were so distinctly outlined by the searching rocket light that companies from all the regiments in garrison made good rifle practice.

THE recent question in Parliament regarding the overcrowding of troopships and want of boat accommodation on board the Troopship Malabar (writes a correspondent) has been shelved upon the Government of India by Mr. Stanhope, and the gentleman has thought it the Government of India's duty to have seen the troopships were in no case overcrowded, while he forgets to mention who superintends the embarkation of troops at Portsmouth. It is a well-known fact that of the five Indian troopships which visit Bombay every cold season each one of them is more overcrowded with human freight than an ordinary mail steamer, and we question if any serious accident should by chance happen at sea to either an outward or homeward bound troopship whether the number of boats carried by such vessel would be available to accommodate with safety all the human lives on board. It is now time that the number of troops carried on board a troopship, whether outward bound or en route to England, should be reduced to a considerable extent: (1) for the purpose of preventing an overcrowding (which is a well-known fact that every trooper is more or less crowded to an extent), and (2) for the general health of those on board, as it is well known that several deaths are, as a rule, reported as having occurred on the passage of a trooper. With regard to the want of boat accommodation on board the troopship Malabar as well as other ships, it is reported on very good authority that the Naval Commander-in-Chief of the East Indian station, in conjunction with the military authorities in Bombay, a strict and private inquiry is to take place at an early date, and the proceedings with such suggestions as Admiral Sir E. R. Fremantle may make are to be sent to the Admiralty at home, and submitted in due course to Parliament. It is to be hoped that this will prevent the overcrowding of troopships in future.

~ The "attack and defence" portion of the new bayonet exercise for infantry (introduced last year) requires to be practised with what is called the "spring bayonet." The practice in question is chiefly intended to enable men to become more proficient in the use of the weapon. The front and rear ranks face each other, and one attacks while the other defends. Hitherto, in India, for want of spring bayonets, this practice has been neglected. A contemporary now hears that the Government of India has sanctioned the issue of a limited number of muskets with spring bayonets, helmets, jackets, gloves, and pads for each battalion of British and Native infantry in three presidencies, so as to admit of the new rules for physical drill with arms and the bayonet exercise being carried out in their entirety.

THE Government of India has sanctioned the issue of a packet of first field dressing, in lieu of a bandage, to every officer and soldier proceeding on active service, irrespective of whether the operations are undertaken against a European Power or not. Wounds received in an encounter with an uncivilized foe are just as severe, if not more so, than those inflicted by a highly civilised enemy, and it is curious that the authorities have only now recognised this.

UNDER some new orders received from home, and with the suggestion of the Commander-in-Chief in India, cavalry regiments proceeding home from India are in future to drop a squad of their regiment at Port Said for service in Egypt. The first cavalry regiment to which this rule will apply will be the 17th Lancers, which proceed home from Lucknow in November. This order will no doubt be received with great indignation and disgust by the officers and men of such a crack corps as the 17th (Duke of Cambridge's Own) Lancers, after such a lengthy time of service in the East, and more especially as they have to leave a squad in Egypt to face the scorching sun and oppressive heat in Africa. It is surprising that neither the home nor Indian authorities have thought it advisable to annually send a native cavalry regiment to Egypt who will be more fitted for the climate than the European soldier. There are many who will no doubt sympathise with the order which has been issued to the gallant "Death or Glory" Boys.

India in Parliament.

THE TIRHOOT STATE RAILWAY.

Mr. KING asked the Under-Secretary for India whether the Government of India propose to hand over the Tirhoot State Railway to the Bengal and North-Western Railway; whether inasmuch as the Tirhoot State Railway is owned by the Government of India and returns about 7 per cent. on the capital invested, and the Bengal and North-Western Railway is a private company and returns only 2½ per cent. on the invested share capital, he can explain for what consideration the Government of India is surrendering a valuable dividend-paying investment; whether the Tirhoot State Railway was to have been handed over to the Bengal and North-Western Railway in March or April last, and whether the reason why the transfer was not then made was because the Bengal and North-Western Railway insisted upon the Government completing the extension, then in progress, from Durbungah to the town of Seetamarhi; whether this transfer is against the advice of the Bengal Government and the Government of India, and against the wish of the inhabitants (Europeans and Natives) of North Behar, through which the Tirhoot line runs; and whether the Government will reconsider its determination.

Sir J. E. GORST: The answer to the first paragraph is in the affirmative, but for management only, and for the purpose of securing economy and efficiency. The answer to the second paragraph is that the last year's earnings of the two lines were not as stated in the question, but were for the Bengal and North-Western 4·18 per cent., and the Tirhoot State Railway 4·62 per cent. The division of profit between the Government and the company will be in proportion to their respective capitals. The answer to the third paragraph is in the negative. To the fourth paragraph, yes. So far as the Government of India is concerned, it was at first in favour of, and afterwards against, the arrangement. The answer to the last paragraph is in the negative.

BETWEEN snake-bites and their equally mortal remedies, few people could survive a snake attack in Behar. There is in Behar a cure for snake-bite which most people outside the province will shudder to hear. It is to swallow half a pound of pure mustard oil at one draught. This vicious idea, which seems to be the outcome of a malicious mind, evidently has for its object the killing of a man anyhow. If he escapes the snake poison, the oil is sure to settle him.

COLONEL NAPIER.

ALLAHABAD, JUNE 15.

The following particulars have been received of the death of Colonel Napier, King's Dragoon Guards. Captain Bates and he were riding a pig, and were a short distance in front of the others. Colonel Napier's spear first pierced the pig, which at the same time crossed under the Colonel's horse, so that the spear got entangled with the horse's legs. The horse fell, and Colonel Napier was thrown on to his head. He was wearing a small shikar hat, which fell off before he reached the ground, so that his head was quite unprotected when he struck the earth. He was picked up insensible. Medical aid was at once sent for from Muttra, but he never recovered consciousness, and died the next morning.

MR. BABER.

CALCUTTA, JUNE 17.

News has been received of the death of Mr. Baber, Political Officer at Bhamo, on Monday night. No particulars are to hand, but it is known that he has for years past been a great sufferer from fever. He entered the Chinese Consular service as a Student Interpreter, and soon rose to be Secretary to the British Legation at Peking. Fifteen months ago he came to Bhamo as Political Officer to the Chinese.

COLONEL COX.

BELGAUM, JUNE 14.

Colonel Cox, commanding the Somersetshire Light Infantry, stationed here, died yesterday after a short illness.

He was extremely popular in his regiment, and his sterling qualities were much appreciated by all who knew him. His unexpected death is very generally regretted, and has cast a gloom over the station.

Colonel Cox joined the Army on the 2nd July, 1855, and was made a Lieutenant-Colonel on May 8th, 1885, and promoted to Colonel on May 8th, 1889. He served in the Indian Campaign, and was present in the two actions at Almorah on April 17th and 25th, 1858, in the first of which he commanded the skirmishers in a successful attack on the enemy's left. (Medal.) Served in the operations against Sekukuni in 1873, and was present at the storming of Tolyana's Stadt. Served with Wood's Column in the Zulu War of 1879, and was present in the engagement at Zungin Nek and Kambula—severely wounded. (Brevet of Major, medal with clasp.) Served with the Burmese Expedition in 1886 with the Nyingyan Column in command of a wing of the 2nd Battalion Somersetshire Light Infantry detached from Head Quarters. (Medal with clasp.)

THERE passed away at Benares, on the 7th inst., a man of some note in the literary and scientific world, in Mahamahopadhyaya Pandit Deva Shastri, C.I.E., late Professor of Mathematics and Astronomy in the Sanskrit College, Benares. The late Pandit was also an Honorary Member of the Royal Asiatic Society of Great Britain and Ireland, and a Fellow of the Allahabad University. The title of Mahamahopadhyaya was conferred on him on Feb. 16, 1887, and he was made a Companion of the Indian Empire on Jan. 1, 1878. Pandit Deva Shastri succumbed to an attack of fever.

THE Geneva Telegraph announces, "with much regret," the death, at his residence, Bussigny, near Lausanne, on the 14th ultimo, of Captain Edward Gibson, "late of Her Majesty's Indian Army." Captain Gibson's case when, as a Political Officer, he was accused by certain Native intriguers of having demanded a bribe from an Indian Prince when engaged as settlement officer in defining the boundaries of his territory, may not have been altogether forgotten by Anglo-Indians. The Indian Foreign Office, for which he had for years worked hard and honestly, instead of fairly investigating the charges, "replaced" his services at the disposal of the military authorities—but the late Lord Napier of Magdala would not have an officer thrown back to him in this way, and insisted upon charges being formulated and Captain Gibson brought to a Court-martial. This was done, and after a protracted trial, in which all the cunning ways of Native duplicity were brought to bear against the prisoner, the result was a verdict of honourable acquittal. But this result had no effect, as it should have had, in restoring Captain Gibson to the Department in which he had proved his ability, and in which he might have risen to the highest position. The door of promotion was cruelly closed against him, and what might have been a brilliant career cut short. Broken in health and heart he accepted a pittance of a pension, and left India, hoping against hope that he might meet with redress at home. Clever, intelligent, and good-hearted, he leaves many friends to mourn his early death.

MANY Anglo-Indians will regret to hear the news which arrived by telegram of the death on board the P. and O. steamer Oriental on the 7th inst., from heat apoplexy, of Mr. Harold R. King, of the well-known firm of Messrs. King and Co., of which he was the managing partner, at Bombay. Mr. Harold King was the second son of the late Mr. Samuel King, M.P., of Manor House, Chigwell, Essex, and brother of Mr. H. S. King, M.P. He died young, being only 37 years of age. He will be missed by many friends here and in Bombay, where he was most deservedly popular.

THE annual dinner of the printers of Messrs. W. H. Allen and Co.'s firm was held at Chislehurst on Saturday last at the "Sydney Arms Hotel." Despite of the weather, the "comps" and the printing staff went by road in brakes, but the incessant downpour of rain prevented any carrying-out of the programme of outdoor amusements which had been planned. Notwithstanding that there were four other printers' feasts being held at the same hotel, an excellent dinner was served "a little after" the named hour, and full justice was done to an excellent repast. The chair was occupied by Mr. C. E. Johnston, the senior partner of the firm of Messrs. W. H. Allen and Co., and he was supported by Messrs. Randall, Parr, and Jebb, partners in the same firm. Mr. F. Pincott took the vice-chair, and amongst the guests present were Colonel Spalding, Major Fenwick, Mr. Paterson and son, and Mr. Finden Brown. After the loyal toast of "The Queen and Royal Family," to which the "National Anthem" was sung by the company, that of "The Firm" was proposed by Mr. B. Hogg, and was received with great enthusiasm. Mr. Parr briefly replied for the partners present and those unavoidably absent—Messrs. Heathcote, Danby, and Hill—and, whilst acknowledging the friendly relations which had always existed between the firm and their employés, he hoped the same would continue to the benefit of their mutual interests. The health of the chairman, proposed by Mr. Geleit, was received with cheers and the touching melody of "He's a jolly good fellow," and Mr. Johnston replied in his usual felicitous way. The toast of the "Vice-Chairman" was given by Mr. Blomfield, who spoke of Mr. Pincott in terms which were cheered to the echo—of his learning, his industry and his ready resource, but also of his kindness of heart, his even-handed justice, and his sterling worth of character, which made him the guide, counsellor, and friend of all under him. The toast was drank with "all the honours," and Mr. Pincott made a very modest but very effective little speech in reply. He was, he said, no theoretical printer—he had worked his way from the humblest position to the one which he was now proud to hold as head of the Printing Office of the Firm—which printing office he was instrumental in creating, and of which he could boldly say that no printing office in the kingdom turned out better work. Forty years' experience had taught him to sympathise with all printing hands under him, for he had gone through the same trials and troubles; but he had not only sympathy but respect for his men, some of whom had been with him for no less a period than twelve years—no little proof of the bond of good fellowship between them. The toast of the "Visitors" and "Sweethearts and Wives" were given by Messrs. Willis and Baker respectively, the former being acknowledged by Major Fenwick, and the latter in a very humorous manner by Mr. H. Brooks.

Between the toasts some excellent songs were sung by Messrs. Ben Hogg—who gave an excellent one, "It's all bogey," of his own composition—G. and H. Brooks, Baker, Bland, Forbes, Ede, and Willis. The pianist, Mr. Alfred West, played an excellent solo selection from William Tell; and after drinking the health of the stewards, Messrs. H. Brooks and Ben Hogg, who well deserved the compliment, the "order of proceedings" came to an end, and concluded a pleasant day, which nothing but the weather interfered with to spoil.

NOTICES OF BOOKS.

BY ORDER OF THE CZAR.*

"Nihilism"—the very name inspires feelings of loathing, contempt, and scorn—the bare mention thereof conjures up pictures of murder, destruction, and desolation. Ruin, havoc, misery, suffering, fear, torture, follow in the wake of the most terrible form of conspiracy which has ever cast a shade of anguish upon the civilisation of the nineteenth century of grace. Yet, withal, even in this direction there is something to be said in defence of this weapon in Satan's armoury. Let him that is without offence in Russia cast the first stone. Study, gentle reader, "By Order of the Czar"—see how, to select one instance out of many, the fire of fanaticism is stirred up by designing Governors; and Jewish families, to the extent of thousands upon thousands, are rendered desolate and without a home or shelter; how their possessions are plundered, their wives, their families—ay, and their very infants—are massacred at the threshold; how the "knout"—that most formidable of all punishments which the cruelty of man has ever devised—raises ridges and welts, patches of red, and weird daubs of grey, which blot out all remains and tokens of Nature's form and beauty; and this, too, not alone as regards the sterner portions of humanity, but even in the case of the sweetest and loveliest of the daughters of Eve. Read this; get but the faintest insight into the cruelty, the tyranny, the inhumanity of "Holy Russia," and then what will be the verdict of the most meek of critics? Each must form a personal opinion. For ourselves we are not ashamed to avow that while we have no part or parcel with the modern school of so-called patriotism, which seeks to attain political ends at the expense of suffering and crime, we do not wonder that when an oppressed and down-trodden people find their homes made hells of anguish and desolation, when the blood of all that is dearest in life runs down the street like water, then the demon of revenge enters the soul, and man rivals the very fiends of the regions where God has forgotten to be gracious; and be the means what they may, they are one and all utilised in a crusade where dynamite, poison, the dagger, the revolver, are the sole resources left to the hapless and the weak.

The fact that Mr. Hatton's tale has been prohibited from circulation in Russia is, perhaps, the most effective testimony possible to the truth of its charges, and the impossibility of rebutting its accusations. It may be gathered from the "author's note," at the conclusion of the work, that the greatest care has been taken to ensure accuracy as regards the general tenor of the narrative; and historical evidence is adduced that tends to exempt the writer from charges of exaggeration and idle fiction. It is hardly, perhaps, necessary to add that the tale is replete with incident, and the plot is developed in a manner which leaves nothing to be desired. Mr. Hatton's reputation as a novelist will suffer no diminution in his latest and, perhaps, most attractive flight of fancy.

THE status of the Hindu bridegroom is still being lowered by communal compacts regarding him. A Marriage Association at Taki in Bengal has ruled that its members should not respond to the invitation to a marriage, either party in which has committed the folly of contracting debt in order to meet the expenses, or where the bridegroom has demanded money from the bride's father for the honour of his hand.

The Madras Mail believes that negotiations with Government are progressing favourably, and that work on the Neilgherry Railway will soon be commenced. This railway will probably have a two foot gauge (like that of the Darjeeling Mountain Railway), but with a central racked rail, in which a cogged wheel, in the centre of the engine, will work, after the manner of the line which scales the Rigi Mountain. By this means very stiff gradients can be negotiated, and it is probable that the length of the line from Metapollam to Coonoor will not exceed twelve miles, or a little over half the length of the ghat road, by which the distance is twenty-three miles.

THE BOMBAY AND MADRAS COMMANDS.

THE debate, if it can be dignified by that name, which took place in the House of Lords on the question of placing the Madras and Bombay armies under the direct control of the Commander-in-Chief in India was apparently a fruitless one, as no definite result followed upon Lord Ripon's speech. But the time of the House and of the nation will not have been wasted if public attention can be drawn to this very important matter, and pressure be brought to bear on the Secretary of State for India to come to some decided action instead of allowing things to remain in their present most unsatisfactory condition. The House of Lords appear to have been quite satisfied with the Duke of Cambridge's protest against carrying out a measure so urgently recommended by the Government of India during a period extending now over ten years, after most minute and careful inquiry into all the bearings of the case. His Royal Highness is always listened to with attention in any assembly which he may address on military matters, and his opinions very properly carry considerable weight. For H.R.H. has been no idler in his profession; but, on the contrary, has, from his first entry into the Service, made a study of army matters in every detail. There are few regimental officers who could stand the searching examination into such details which his Royal Highness could. But with regard to the question of the Presidential commands in India, he can know little except from hearsay and in the House of Lords he could give little reason for the faith that was in him hostile to the proposed change except that the late Lord Napier of Magdala and "other distinguished officers" were opposed to it. But the House was not told who these other distinguished officers were, nor was it informed of the particulars of Lord Napier's views, nor of the date when he gave expression to them. The last consideration is not unimportant. Immediately and, indeed, for some time after the suppression of the Indian Mutiny it was held by a number of Anglo-Indians—civil and military—that the decentralisation system obtaining in the control of the armies of India had saved India for England. But as time has gone on it has been shown that the Bengal, Madras, and Bombay armies can be kept still distinct in every essential particular, without, however, insisting that there shall be a Commander-in-Chief of the army of Bombay and a Commander-in-Chief of the army of Madras. We should like to know whether the latest opinions uttered on the subject by Lord Napier of Magdala were opposed to the proposed change. But even if they were there is on one side the opinion of his lordship and that of the Duke of Cambridge founded upon it; on the other side are the opinions of four successive Viceroy of India—Lord Lytton, Lord Ripon, Lord Dufferin, and Lord Lansdowne, and of two commanders-in-chief—eminently practical and experienced soldiers—Sir Donald Stewart and Sir Frederick Roberts. On which side ought the balance of opinion to weigh?

A well-known Anglo-Indian journalist of former days—Mr. Martin Wood—has come forward to rebuke a contemporary for siding with the majority. Mr. Wood tells the Pall Mall Gazette that the object of the proposed change is the disestablishment of the Madras and Bombay armies, and that those in favour of the change are "biased, being all under the influence of the dominating and centralising tendency of the Bengal (that is, Simla) army ring." The four "successive Viceroy," he adds, "being entirely in the hands of that all-powerful clique, and having no real knowledge of Western and Southern India, their testimony weighs very little. The 'two best Indian generals' are also Bengalis, and speak after their kind." Mr. Wood thus summarily puts the witnesses on the other side out of court, and, of course, brings in his own verdict. But it will be difficult to convince anyone who will take the trouble to wade through the correspondence in the Blue-book on which we have lately been commenting of the validity of Mr. Wood's argument. He says that the only plausible object of the proposed change is a presumed saving of, at most, a million in Indian army expenditure—a supposed financial gain which he characterises as a “delusion.” The arguments which have been urged by the Government of India are on grounds totally apart from questions of economy. They are based on questions of efficiency, affecting the very safety of our Empire in India. But in proposing the change it is distinctly laid down in all the arguments adduced by the Government of India—that no disestablishment of the Bombay and Madras armies is contemplated. The whole question is simple enough, and is pithily put by a military contemporary, writing on Saturday last :—

THE LATE GOVERNOR OF BOMBAY.

Lord Reay was entertained on Wednesday night at a banquet by the Northbrook Indian Club on the occasion of his return from the Governorship of Bombay. The company included their Royal Highnesses the Duke of Connaught and the Duke of Clarence and Avondale, the Earl of Kimberley, Lord Lawrence, Lord Brassey, Marquis of Lorne, Count de Bylandt, Comte de Franqueville, Prince Malcom Khan, Kumar Ranjit Singh, Kumar Ram Singh, General Sir A. Hardinge, Sir George Trevelyan, M.P., Sir J. Gorst, M.P., Sir A. Borthwick, M.P., Sir C. U. Aitchison, Sir C. Turner, Sir F. Forbes Adam, Sir C. Bernard, Colonel Sir E. Bradford, Sir G. Campbell, M.P., Sir A. J. Arbuthnot, General Sir H. Norman, Sir Juland Danvers, Sir H. Cunningham, Sir R. Temple, Sir James Caird, Sir A. Sassoon, Mr. Childers, M.P., and a large number of Indian gentlemen resident in London.

The CHAIRMAN gave "The Queen, Empress of India," and "The Prince and Princess of Wales, and the other members of the Royal Family."

The Duke of CLARENCE and AVONDALE responded to the latter toast, and was received with loud cheers. He said it gave him great pleasure to be present at a dinner in honour of Lord Reay. Having himself recently returned from a tour in India, which embraced all the principal cities and Native States, he desired to testify to, and to express his warmest gratitude for, the kindness and unbounded hospitality with which he was everywhere received both by the British and the Native residents. (Cheers.)

General Sir A. HARDINGE proposed "The health of his Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught," who, he said, had during his term of office as Commander of the Bombay Army shown a vigilance and thoroughness of apprehension, extending even to the smallest details, which had had a most satisfactory effect on the condition of the forces of the Presidency.

The toast was drunk with much enthusiasm. The Duke of CONNAUGHT, on rising to reply, was loudly cheered. Having expressed his thanks for the cordiality of his reception, his Royal Highness proceeded—I am very grateful to Lord Northbrook for having giving me the opportunity of attending here this evening, and showing the deep interest I feel in the welfare of any of our officials who have done such good service in India, and of the sense I entertain of the services of our distinguished guests. (Cheers.) I can only say that during the three and a-half years it was my privilege to hold the command of the Bombay Army I have met with nothing but the greatest kindness from him; and I feel very grateful to him for the many opportunities he has given me of discussing matters of vast importance, not only to the Presidency, but to India at large. It was not necessary—and, perhaps, it would have been a bad thing—to always agree on these subjects; but whether we agreed or disagreed, Lord Reay at all times showed those characteristics of kindness and gentlemanlike feeling, and a readiness to take into consideration any arguments which might be placed before him which I most deeply appreciated, and shall remember as long as I live. Lord Reay entered upon his high office at a time of great difficulty, and when many subjects of complexity had to be considered; but I never met any man who so entirely sacrificed himself to what he considered to be his duty as Her Majesty's representative. (Cheers.) I must not trench upon what our Chairman has to say, but I should like to refer to the great work Lord Reay did in the matter of education, and especially how thoroughly he threw himself into one particular line of that work—I mean technical education. (Hear, hear.) That is a matter of the greatest importance to India—and the necessity of encouraging technical education has been, perhaps, insufficiently recognised in the past—(hear, hear)—and I am certain that with regard to it the Bombay Presidency owes a great debt to Lord Reay. (Cheers.) I should like to thank my old friend, Sir Arthur Hardinge, for the very kind, and, I am afraid, much too flattering terms in which he proposed this toast. It is with great satisfaction that, following so nearly upon Sir F. Hardinge in the command of the Bombay Army, I find I have his approval of the manner in which I have exercised that command, for he it was who infused a new spirit into the army, and did an amount of good which nobody here can appreciate so well as myself. I felt that I could not do better than follow in his footsteps, and carry on the good work which he had initiated. Gentlemen, I hope I may be excused if I blow the trumpet of the Bombay Army a little. Coming back as I do from the command of that army, I wish to say how highly I appreciated the loyal manner in which I have been supported by all ranks, from the highest officers down to the Sepoys. Whatever changes were made—and many changes meant extra work for everybody concerned—they were acquiesced in and carried out in a most loyal spirit. I am certain that the Bombay Army of the present day occupies a first-rate position; the officers are in every sense efficient, and they have the interest of the Indian Army fully at heart. The Bombay Army has passed through a difficult time, but when you look at the services they have rendered in recent years—I refer to the services of the Beloochis in Egypt, of the 28th Bengal Infantry at Suakim—you have every reason to be proud of the admirable manner in which they carried out their arduous duties. I will freely own that we have not those exceptional corps d'élite like the Goorkhas and the Sikhs; but we have very good material in the Bombay Army. (Cheers.) We have the Beloochis, and the north countrymen who now serve in it, whose services in the past may be reckoned with the best exploits of the troops of Bengal. (Hear, hear.) The army of Bombay must naturally be considered second to that of Bengal. The latter has the advantage of the personal connection of the Commander-in-Chief, and of contact with the highest civil officials of India; but I can assure you that no one who, like myself, has lived for some years with the Bombay Army, can fail to recognise their excellent qualities—their loyalty and their obedience. (Hear, hear.) This being the first occasion on which I have spoken in public since my return from India, I should like to take this opportunity of expressing how grateful I feel for the many acts of kindness that I met with on all hands in India—not only in the Bombay Presidency, but in the Punjab and the North-West Provinces. I may never be connected with the Indian service again, but I shall always remember with gratitude and affection the loyalty and the kindness which I met with on every side. (Cheers.)

The CHAIRMAN, in proposing "The health of Lord Reay," recalled the meeting of five years ago, when the club entertained Lord Reay on the eve of his departure for India; and it was with remarkable satisfaction, having felt the greatest confidence in the success of his administration, that they welcomed his return to England. (Cheers.) That club carefully avoided even the appearance of political complexion, either on British or India affairs; but that did not prevent them joining cordially together in welcoming men who had honestly, constitutionally, and ably filled offices which, as the Duke of Connaught had truly said, every year became more and more difficult. Lord Reay's administration had been—as a critical and not always friendly Bombay newspaper had well expressed it—"one unusually productive of energy in diverse directions, and which will leave a beneficent mark in the history of the Presidency." (Cheers.) They had already heard of the good educational work which Lord Reay had performed, and not to mention such small matters as Revenue and Forest Conservancy, his term of office would be memorable for the great extension of railway communication, and for the admirable manner in which the arrangements were made with the Sovereigns of the Native States for the abolition of the transit dues in their territories. (Hear, hear.) His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught and Sir F. Forbes Adam, the President of the Bombay Chamber of Commerce, had from two opposite points of view borne testimony to Lord Reay's administrative capacity; and it was only necessary now to add that it was the late Governor's constant effort to bring the Indian and the English peoples together in Bombay, just as it was the aim of that club to bring the English and the Indians together in England. In the performance of that duty he had been assisted by Lady Reay, whose popularity with the Native ladies might be gathered from two facts: first, that the Native ladies of Bombay raised a fund for the purpose of presenting a memorial to Lady Reay on her departure; and second, that the Native ladies living in London had presented her with an address thanking her for her work in Bombay, especially in connection with the admirable movement which was associated with the name of Lady Dufferin. (Cheers.)

The toast having been cordially honoured, Lord REAY, in response, said that whatever had been done during his term of office in Bombay was largely due to the invaluable assistance he had received from every department of the Government. He paid a tribute to the zeal and ability of the Native members of the Uncovenanted Service, and expressed a hope that the industrial development of India would be further promoted. Success, however, in this direction must depend mainly on private effort. In conclusion, he said that the feelings of loyalty entertained by the Native princes and people to the British Throne, their respect for British rule, their attachment to those British rulers who governed in accordance with the spirit of Her Majesty's proclamation, and in conformity with the great principles laid down in the despatch of 1854 by Sir C. Wood, were a tender plant. It depended on the enlightened wisdom of every administrator in India, from the Viceroy—and the present Viceroy was an excellent Viceroy—(hear, hear)—down to the youngest civilian, whether these feelings of the Indian population would strike a deeper and a wider root. The Indian people were a grateful people. It was their desire to co-operate with us, and maintain intact that great inheritance of the British Empire which was for them, as well as for us, the fountain of peace and prosperity. (Loud cheers.)

Other toasts followed.

EMPLOYMENT OF MILITARY PENSIONERS.

According to the latest official report the total number of pensioned soldiers of the Madras Army employed on the 30th of September, 1889, in various civil capacities was 3,069. Between April and September, 1889, a period of six months, employment was found for no less than 560 pensioners. This must be considered satisfactory in view of the wishes of Government to encourage the re-employment of pensioners. While during the past two and a-half years the increase in the number of pensioners employed throughout the Presidency generally has been considerable, there has been a falling off in the numbers so employed in Trichinopoly, Tinnevely, Madura and Cuddalore. Lieut.-Colonel S. L. Hunt, Superintendent of Pensions, attributes the want of progress to caste prejudices, which, he thinks, have had a great deal to do with the apathy shown by Native officials in forwarding the scheme for the employment of military pensioners. This may be true, to some extent; but, perhaps, self-interest, favour and relationship have helped to deprive pensioners of posts to which they are the recognised claimants. At Cuddalore, Mr. P. A. Cole, the Deputy-Collector, who lately assumed charge of the pension-office at that station, is reported to have taken active steps to promote the scheme of employing pensioners throughout his district, but at the other stations referred to the Superintendent suggests that the interference of Government would, doubtless, have a most beneficial effect.

THE Governor-General in Council is pleased, pending further orders, to declare every railway administration to be liable from and after May 1st, 1890, to pay every tax which it was lawfully required by or on behalf of any local authority to pay in aid of the funds of such authority during the year ended on April 30th, 1890.

A MAHABLESHWUR correspondent writes to a Bombay paper:—"We are all feeling quite exhausted with laughing. Lady Harris had a team of thirteen ladies against her husband's eleven, the latter playing left-handed and with a stick. The excitement was intense. The ladies were most dreadfully in earnest, but so nervous. They went out for twenty-two runs in their first innings to sixty-four for their opponents, but warmed up afterwards, and got sixty-four to eight wickets down when it grew dark. Every run, every ball, led to a comical situation, their nervousness at running, the way they met in the middle of each wicket and consulted as to whether it was safe to go on, and, finally, each would run back to her own wicket, the way they threw themselves on the ball in fielding, and had to make a search in their petticoats for it. They are all mad about cricket now, and in the rains a Poona and a Bombay ladies' match is to come off."

ATROCITIES AT HINDOO SHRINES.

We commend the following to the Hindoo societies:—Every one knows of the atrocities perpetrated at Tarakeswar, and of the infamous character of its lord, the Mohunt. Kalighat is a place of well-known importance to require any special comment, and it will be sufficient for our present purposes to tell the public that it is a place very largely visited by folks of all sorts living in and about town. It is known to every one that the old Hindoo sentiment of devotion is now left in the breasts of women, and they form a very large section of the pilgrims visiting places of religious associations. Whether we approve of this going out of women or not is no matter in the present question, but the fact remains that the wives and daughters of even gentle folk do not feel the least shame to visit Kalighat. Of course, it is not the rich portion of the visitors who are any way inconvenienced; money guards them here comfortably as elsewhere. We are concerned in the fate of the middle class and the poor women. We hear complaints now and then of the girls being made the victims of lust and tyranny on the part of the influential Brahmins, and the sanctity of the place offering no bar to their evil intentions. Would not one be shocked at the story that a blooming girl came to Kalighat, and returned home with the blush of innocence kissed away by the polluting lips of wolfish Brahmins? Yet this is the story we have to hear not seldom. The truth cannot be told with decency in all particulars, and we content ourselves by expressing our meaning by implication. Now, humanity requires that this sort of thing should not exist, and the public should rouse itself to action in the matter. The British Indian Association and the Indian Association ought to be moved to send up memorials to his Honour for some effective check on this revolting injury to female goodness and innocence. It will be some check: have a picket of constables in the place of worship and the expense laid on the Shebaitis—the Haldars. Government would be justified in the act, as it is the duty of the Haldars to provide all means for the comfort and convenience of the visitors, and not merely to shear them. Even if they had no part in the present oppression, they would be held guilty of incapacity in its suppression. This is very good ground for public interference!—National Guardian.

THE CALCUTTA REVIEW.(The only Quarterly Review in India.)

ESTABLISHED 1844.

OPINIONS.

The Calcutta Review for October reached us a day or two ago, and a glance at its contents shows that the number more than sustains the reputation which this old and favourite publication is again achieving. The Review is rapidly regaining the position which it . . . there is no fear of the Indian Review, or the Asiatic Quarterly rivalling it in public favour.—Statesman, October 1886.

... The best service which I ever rendered in India, or, indeed, for India, was the establishment, single-handed, of the Calcutta Review, which has done far more for Indian literature than anything I have written under my own name.—J. W. KAYE, Athenæum Club, June 23, 1872.

The Calcutta Review has given us valuable articles on the army. Some from the pen of Sir Henry Lawrence, who wrote with the spirit of prophecy of the coming storm of which he was one of the noblest victims.—Address of the C-in-C. at the U.S. Inst. of India.

The Calcutta Review has not only throughout its career reflected the highest honour on its public-spirited promoters and its well-known distinguished contributors, but has done much to help forward the reconstruction of our system of governing India.—Westminster Review.

THE BROAD ARROW

AND

NAVAL AND MILITARY GAZETTE

ESTABLISHED 1838

EVERY SATURDAY. PRICE SIXPENCE.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" has acquired a reputation for early and exclusive intelligence as to Appointments and other service News, for the high character of its articles, the independent course of its staff of writers, and for its earnest support of all measures for the good of the Services. Articles on specially interesting subjects appear from week to week written for the most part by officers of rank and experience, or by men of note in literature who have made the Naval and Military affairs of the country their special study. A series of Illustrated Articles is appearing weekly on Regimental Badges and History. Illustrations with descriptions are also given of new Service Inventions.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" freely opens its correspondence columns to all grades in the Services. By this means an opportunity for interchange of opinion is afforded, such as is offered by no other Service Journal. Its ordinary weekly issue contains fully one-fourth more matter than the other Service Journals, even with their frequent "supplements."

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" circulates largely throughout India and the Colonies. It is supplied direct to the Army and Marine bureaux of the French, Russian, and other Governments, and it is read extensively by Officers of Foreign Services, especially of the German, French, and American Armies, who desire to acquire a true impression of facts and public opinion in England regarding Military affairs.

DISTINGUISHED ANGLO-INDIANS.

BY

COLONEL W. F. B. LAURIE.

"No better reading can be recommended for the use of young men than the lives of distinguished Anglo-Indians."—Standard.

"Colonel Laurie continues admirably the work which he so well began."—Globe.

"Bristling with illustrious names. . . . We have here nine substantial biographical sketches, together with brief notices of two dozen or more names also 'well worthy to be filed' on fame's eternal bead-roll."—Daily News.

LIGHT versus DARKNESS.

"SHAKESPEARE, the Greatest Genius who has ever yet lived," taught the Divineness of Forgiveness, of Perpetual Mercy, of Constant Patience, of Endless Peace, of Perpetual Gentleness. If you can show me one who knew things better than this man, show him!! I know him not!! If he had appeared as a Divine, they would have Burned him; as a Politician, they would have Beheaded him; but God made him a Player.

"He taught that kindness is nobler than Revenge!!"—The Rev. GEORGE DAWSON, M.A.

"Earthly power doth then show likest God's
When mercy seasons justice,
And that same prayer doth teach us all to render
The Deeds of Mercy."—Shakespeare.

What higher aim can man attain, than conquest over human pair?

JEOPARDY OF LIFE, THE GREAT DANGER OF DELAY.

You can change the Trickling Stream, but not the Raging Torrent.

WHAT EVERYBODY SHOULD READ.—How important it is to have at hand some simple, effective, and palatable remedy, such as ENO'S "FRUIT SALT," to check disease at the onset. With little trouble you can change the course of the trickling mountain stream, but not the rolling river. It will defy all your tiny efforts. I feel I cannot sufficiently impress this important information upon everybody. Let ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" be your companion; under any circumstances, its use is beneficial, and never can do harm. When out of sorts, Restless, Sleepless, yet unable to say why, then your whole body is out of order, but you do not know where it may end; it is a real necessity to have a simple remedy at hand. The Pilot can so steer and direct as to bring the ship into safety, but he cannot quell the raging storm. The common idea when not feeling well is: "I will wait and see; perhaps I shall be better to-morrow"; whereas, had a supply of ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" been at hand, and use made of it at the onset, all calamitous results might have been avoided. What dashes to the earth so many hopes, breaks so many sweet alliances, blights so many auspicious enterprises, as untimely Death?

"I used my 'FRUIT SALT' freely in my last severe attack of Fever, and I have every reason to say I believe it saved my life."—J. C. ENO.

CAUTION.—Examine each Bottle, and see that the Capsule is marked ENO'S "FRUIT SALT." Without it you have been imposed on by a worthless imitation.

SOLD BY ALL CHEMISTS. PREPARED ONLY AT

ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" WORKS POMEROY STREET, NEW CROSS ROAD, LONDON, S.E. (BY J. ENO'S P. ENT.)

NATURE RULES ALL THINGS.

In every form of weakness use Scalded Milk.

ENO'S "VEGETABLE MOTO," occasionally a desirable adjunct to ENO'S "FRUIT SALT," as a simple and Natural Laxative, Stomachic, Blood, Brain, Nerve, Bile, or Liver Tonic; or, in other words, when taken as directed, their action is as simple as a tonic, whole meal bread or porridge (with scalded milk); you cannot overstate their great value in causing a natural, slow, and gentle action of the Liver; by that means you keep the blood pure and prevent disease. In advanced life they are everything you could wish. Real Practical Hints on Constipation, Indigestion, Liver Disease, Impure Blood, Sleeplessness, Nervous Headache, Treatment of Gout and Rheumatism, how to Prevent Consumption, Jaundice, and other disastrous diseases by Rules for Health and Longevity, &c., in a pamphlet given with each Bottle of ENO'S "VEGETABLE MOTO." They can be used for any length of time without fear or harm.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

WEDNESDAY JULY 16, 1890.

General Intelligence.

[BY OVERLAND MAIL.]

THE Overland Mail brings us letters and advices from Bombay to the 27th June; from Allahabad and Madras to the 25th June; and from Calcutta to the 24th June.

THE monsoon is now well established up the Gangetic plain.

THE first meeting of the Legislative Council was to be held at Simla on Thursday, July 3rd.

SIR FREDERICK ROBERTS has accepted the offer of an extension of two years as Commander-in-Chief, thus cancelling his previous acceptance of the post of Adjutant-General.

THE MAHARAJA OF KUCH BEHAR will not visit Simla this season.

GENERAL EAST has returned to Secunderabad from leave, and resumed command of the district.

MR. A. D. YOUNGHUSBAND, Settlement Officer in Gujarat, will act as Private Secretary to Lord Hartsis during Mr. Edgerley's absence on leave.

THE Chief Commissioner of the Central Provinces has prescribed a uniform to be worn by all subordinates of the Forest Department.

THE MAHARAJA OF PATIALA has bought the racing pony Little Wonder II., which is supposed to have a chance for the Civil Service Cup.

THE Gaekwar's request for the services of Captain R. G. Jones, Madras Lancers, as military adviser at Baroda has been refused by the Government of India.

MAJOR H. P. LEACH, R.E., Bengal, has been selected to command the Bombay Sappers and Miners.

THE Maharaja of Kuch Behar proposes to build a railway, to run southward from the chief town of his State, to Mogal Hat, so as to give direct communication with the Eastern Bengal system.

COLONEL FORBES, Inspector-General of Irrigation, will succeed Colonel Pemberton as Secretary in the Public Works Department when the latter retires on the 15th of November next.

COLONEL CONWAY-GORDON, who has been suffering for some time from inflamed eyes, takes six months' furlough to England, and is succeeded as Director-General of Railways by Lieutenant-Colonel Sargeant. Major Brackenbury, Deputy Director-General of Railways, officiates in Colonel Sargeant's place as Manager of the Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway.

ON the abolition of the Pension Office at Bombay, Captain Richardson, of the Military Accounts Department, will be appointed travelling auditor of regimental and departmental accounts in Madras and Bombay. An auditor for the Bengal accounts will also be shortly appointed.

COLONEL DOWDEN, Consulting Engineer to Government, on Tuesday inspected the new tramway line which runs from Shajahanpur to Khotar, a total distance of thirty-one miles. It is reported that he passed the line for traffic.

THE trial of Dr. Unna's system of treating leprosy, which is to be made at the Calcutta Leprosy Asylum, will be carried out under the immediate supervision of a European medical officer deputed by the Government for the purpose, at the request of the District Charitable Society.

A SEVERE outbreak of cholera at Calicut is reported.

THE Madras Mahomedan Association have unanimously resolved that the Mahomedans of the Presidency should petition the Queen for an extension of Lord Connemara's tenure of office.

THE Civil and Military Gazette has sent home Rs. 280 to the Balaclava Fund.

MR. JOHNSON, the Executive Engineer of the Kashmir-Gilgit-road, reached the latter place at the end of May; and after a few days' stay started on his return journey, accompanying Major Durand, who was proceeding to Kashmir to confer with the Resident. The result of the Engineer's inspection of the proposed line of road is said to be fairly satisfactory; but the country is one presenting natural difficulties of the first order.

IN the evidence at the inquest concerning deaths caused by the falling of a house, the Municipal Commissioner stated that 233 houses had collapsed in Bombay during the past five years. Mr. Rienzi Walton, Executive Engineer to the Municipality, attributed the accident of Sunday week to the poor quality of the timber used, and the very defective carpentering.

MAJOR-GENERAL ANDERSON, commanding the Mhow District, is likely to proceed home shortly on medical certificate.

REPORTS have been current for some time past of an intention on the part of Government to raise another regiment of cavalry for the Punjab Frontier Force. There is, it is understood, no present idea of taking this step.

LADY LANSLOWNE, accompanied by Lady Maud Anson, will leave Bombay for England on July 18th.

THE body of Mr. Rich, Telegraph Superintendent at Bhowmuggur, was cremated a few days ago, as requested in his will. This is believed to be the first cremation of a European in India.

THE King of Oudh's palace on the River Hooghly has been purchased by a Calcutta syndicate, to be converted into mills.

THE fears of a water famine in Kumaun have been removed by a heavy rainfall in the North-West Provinces.

LIEUTENANT HOWARD, of the Norfolk Regiment, who was severely mauled by a wounded tiger near Madras, has died of his injuries.

MR. BEGLAR, Deputy Postmaster, and Mr. Monks, Manager, Dead Letter Office, Rangoon, were drowned by the upsetting of a boat.

CAPTAIN YOUNGHUSBAND has left Simla for Yarkand, via Cashmere and Ladak, on a private mission. It is believed he means to further explore certain passes partly examined last year.

THE sickness among troops at Fort White shows no signs of abating. All the officers of the Goorkhas have been down with fever, and 191 men are now in hospital.

A LARGE camp will probably be held in Attock in the coming cold season. It is said 20,000 men will take part.

THE foreign trade of Calcutta as a whole last year showed a net increase of sixty-seven lakhs of rupees, notwithstanding a falling off in imports of no less than eighty-two lakhs. Taking foreign and coasting trade, the net increase has been twenty-one lakhs, or 28 per cent. The increase in the foreign exports was no less than 150 lakhs, the amount comprising raw jute 726½ lakhs, opium 637 lakhs, tea 512 lakhs, linseed 334 lakhs, rice 249 lakhs, indigo 149 lakhs, gunny-bags 232 lakhs, hides 150 lakhs, and raw cotton 114 lakhs. Among the less important exports are rapeseed 63 lakhs, raw silk 61 lakhs, and wheat 60 lakhs. Against a decrease of 48 lakhs in wheat and 24 in indigo we can set an increase of 52 in rapeseed, 42 in rice, 33 in raw jute, 24 in gunny cloth, and 22 in raw cotton. The advance in the exports of Indian produce was the highest on record.

NOTES.

THE news from India continues to be of the same quiet uneventful character which we have been chronicling for so many weeks past. But this uneventful character signifies peace, progress, and contentment—the triumphs of British good government.

FROM Simla comes, of course, only news of amusements and merry-making, and from Calcutta comes, of course, abuse of Simla, and of all officials who are sojourning there. The heat in Calcutta just before the monsoon broke was very trying, and to it may be attributed some of the bad temper which has been shown in regard to Simla. But Calcutta has always been prophesying that England will one day lose India because the Government goes to Simla.

UNDER the heading of "Simla life and the demoralisation it worketh," a writer, who signs himself "An Indian," advocates strong measures. He says that one reason, perhaps the chief one, why the Viceroy and his colleagues love Simla life so dearly, is that up there it is a sunny existence of ceaseless pleasures and amusements. To the high official in Simla life is verily an ocean of enjoyment, and "each hour, like each wave, throws up its pearl." No sooner has the Government gone up than we hear of the balls, concerts, theatrical entertainments, both public and private, which are given almost every night. Every intelligent reader of the Simla letters, published in these days in the Anglo-Indian papers, finds strong evidence, in the accounts of pleasures and amusements of Simla life, of the demoralisation which they must be working on the officials. The country should not allow this demoralisation to go on. The nation must rise to do away with the anomaly of the administrators of the country spending lakhs of the taxpayers' money in making life supremely pleasant to themselves, thousands of taxpayers being compelled to live on a single meal, and in circumstances miserable to an extent which cannot be rightly imagined.

DELHI was nearly the scene of a Muhammadan religious disturbance the other day, says the Lahore paper. The casus belli was the exact intonation and expression to be put upon the word "Amen" during worship—our old friends, the "Shias" and "Sunis" the parties concerned. Where, as one sect argue, that the word should be reverently breathed out, the other insist upon its being shouted out at all times. To decide the rights and wrongs of this question, a meeting was convened at the Juma Musjid, a few days ago, under the eye of the law, and fifty valiant police graced the meeting in uniform, and thus put a stop to what might have proved to be a Donnybrook Fair. Elders of the two oppositions, we are told, were prepared to use their shoes for other purposes than custom intended them for; but the police soon placed things on their proper footing, and all parties departed.

THE Bombay Gazette writes thus of Sir E. Bradford on his appointment as Chief Commissioner of Police in London:—

"An Indian 'Political' succeeds an Indian 'policeman' at Scotland-yard. If tact and a wonderful faculty for getting on with all sorts and conditions of men are qualifications for the post of Chief Commissioner of Police, Sir Edward Bradford should make an excellent successor to Mr. Monro. He will not quarrel with Mr. Matthews, even if Mr. Matthews remains long enough at the Home Office to give him the opportunity of doing so; and his kindness and conciliatoriness will count for much in disposing of certain claims and grievances lately set up by the police, which may need careful and tactful treatment. It is, no doubt, a sudden and complete change of function which transforms the Political Secretary at the India Office, and the guide, philosopher, and friend of Prince Albert Victor, on his tour in India, into the head of the London Police. But as a former political officer who had attained so high a rank in the service as that of Governor-General's Agent in Rajputana, Sir Edward Bradford had played many parts before he retired into the easy dignity of his Secretariat at the India Office, and police administration will not be entirely new to him. He has not left India so long but that he is remembered with kindness and esteem by a host of friends in this country, who will wish that he may gain success and credit in the exacting post to which he has been appointed, and which we may be sure he has not sought for."

THERE has been another fall of houses in Bombay, resulting in serious loss of life, several persons having been killed. It appears that the jerry-builder who flourishes in London has his worthy imitators in Bombay. A local paper says:—"It will probably be found that the years in which the greatest number of houses tumbled down are years in which there was greatest activity in the sale of new houses. Throughout the Native town there are indignant protests against the reckless manner in which the trade of the jerry builder has been carried on in recent years. Dummy beams, hollow posts and worm-eaten supports are believed to be very common in some of the newest buildings in the poorer parts of the city. The fears that they have excited are not likely to be allayed now that the Municipality, through its executive engineer, has confessed that it is at present powerless to prevent the use of such dangerous makeshifts. Doubtless the criminal courts could help to minimise the evil."

ASSES' milk is said to have the closest affinity to that milk on which the majority of us were first fed on entering this world of sorrow and sin. It might, therefore, be thought that donkey-lymph might be allowed in vaccinating humanity without causing angry human passions to arise, but this is not so—at least in India. Some time back, Surgeon-Major O'Hara, District Surgeon and Sanitary Officer of Bellary, had, after conducting a series of experiments, recommended the use of the donkey as a vaccine-lymph agent instead of the calf. The Sanitary Commissioner has now represented to the Government the advisability of using the donkey as vacciniers, as from recent experiments and inquiries made he found their use would tend greatly to injure the cause of vaccination. In Trichinopoly, where the experiment was tried, the people refused to be vaccinated from the donkey, and treated it with ridicule. By some castes the donkey is looked upon as an unclean animal; and is held as the goddess of ill-luck. Vaccination is still backward and very unpopular with many classes; and it is pointed out that the introduction of the donkey as a lymph agent will render it still more unpopular and prove a bar to its progress. The Government of Madras has simply communicated this report to the several District Boards and Municipalities without expressing any opinion or passing any order.

INDIA is fortunate in being able to retain Sir Frederick Roberts for two years longer as Commander-in-Chief. And we should have thought that Sir Frederick Roberts was to be congratulated also on the good fortune of having his tenure of office so extended; but, judging from the following, culled from an Anglo-Indian leading paper, it would appear that our only other general is performing a mighty act of self-sacrifice in consenting to remain. Here is what we are told:—"In foregoing the immediate prospect of a brilliant career at home, and devoting two more years to the country in which he has served from the age of nineteen, Sir Frederick Roberts has shown that spirit of self-sacrifice which marks the true soldier devoted to the conscientious discharge of his duties. It is only reasonable to suppose that in return he has received the assurance that his claim to high office hereafter will be generously acknowledged." Is not this carrying the language of compliment a little too far? Or, in other words, may one not say, quoting from "The Walrus and the Carpenter," "The butter's spread too thick."

INDIA.

CALCUTTA, JULY 13.

Mr. Banerji, a Congress delegate to England, returned to India by the last mail steamer. Meetings to welcome him were held at Bombay and Allahabad, but few leading Natives attended, and little enthusiasm was shown. Mr. Banerji said that the cordial reception accorded to the delegates in England proved the sympathy of the English people with the aspirations of the people of India. He felt confident of success if only the agitation were kept up, and he wanted only five years and four or five lakhs of rupees to secure it. The delegate's arrival at Calcutta on Thursday was a tame affair. No meeting was held, and only a few friends received him at the station.

The Census Bill was introduced into the Legislative Council on Thursday, and a series of elaborate rules were published, which it is hoped will make the returns next February the most complete and interesting yet obtained. Whilst scrupulous care will be taken to avoid arousing the prejudices and fears of the ignorant classes of the Natives, an attempt will be made to clear up many points in which information has hitherto been defective, such as the number of child-widows, the relative strength of the agricultural class in each province, the numbers of each profession, trade, &c. All possible precautions will be taken to prevent the enumerators from using their position to extort money.

The special commission of inquiry on the Hyderabad outrage case has resumed its sittings. It is now stated that, in withdrawing from the case, the complainants did not intend to question the impartiality of the commission, but they no longer wished to prosecute, as they were convinced that the weight of evidence was against their view. They also desired to ascertain the pleasure of the general officer commanding. They will now attend when required, and the commission will complete the inquiry.

The Jain community, including some of the richest Native bankers and merchants of Calcutta, are greatly excited over a question of loss of caste by one of their number who recently visited England. On his return here he attended the Jain temple, where he was hooted, and an attempt was made to prevent his entry. He applied to the magistrate to bind several persons over to keep the peace. The magistrate refused, saying that the complainant should not go to the temple if the people objected to his presence. Thereupon the applicant appealed to the High Court, which declined to interfere with the magistrate's discretion. Some defamation cases arising from the same matter are now pending.

The Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal returned to Calcutta from Darjeeling on Friday, and remains here for a few days. He then starts for a ten weeks' tour through the province.

Lady Lansdowne leaves Simla for England on Tuesday.

Sir Robert Sandeman is expected at Simla this week to confer with the Viceroy.

The oil borings in Beloochistan have lately proved very successful. The daily output of oil is doubled, and 35,000 gallons are accumulated at Khattan.

The new road from Rawul Pindi to Cashmere is expected to be finished by the middle of August. The continuation from Srinuggur to Gilgit is proceeding rapidly. The Indus will be bridged about 40 miles from Gilgit.

BURMA.

RANGOON, JULY 12.

Sir C. Crosthwaite's health has improved, and he has proceeded on his tour in Upper Burma.

The condition of the garrison at Fort White continues very bad. A detachment of the 38th Bengal Infantry has been sent to assist the 4th Ghoorkhas. Fifty Ghoorkhas have been sent down to hospital.

An extraordinary case is now pending at Mandalay. Two foresters seek to bring a pauper suit to revive, for their own benefit and that of other foresters, a judgment of the Hloot-daw or council of Burmese Ministers, pronounced in 1885, fining the Bombay and Burma Trading Corporation nearly two million and a-half of rupees for the benefit of the King. The Government of India considered the action of the Hloot-daw such a gross violation of justice that it was the immediate cause of the invasion and annexation of Upper Burma.

In accordance with the promise made in Parliament, peremptory instructions were issued two years ago by the Government of India forbidding the continuance of the barbarous practice of decapitating dead dacoits and carrying the heads through the country. This order has been openly disregarded. Two heads, each alleged to be the head of Bohk-yawah, have been brought into Akyab within a fortnight. The local Government have taken no steps to enforce their orders or punish their subordinates for disobeying them and for continuing these brutal customs, which only encourage habits of savagery among the people.

Mr. G. J. S. Hodgkinson, C.S.I., who was recently appointed as Judicial Commissioner in Upper Burma, was deputed last February to examine and report on the case of prisoners in Upper Burma, and to determine what number could be safely released. The Local Government announced two reasons for this step. The first was a desire to extend clemency, the second was the crowded state of the gaols in Upper Burma. The result of Mr. Hodgkinson's inquiry is now published. The total number of releases recommended by Mr. Hodgkinson was 1,572, and the total number sanctioned by the Chief Commissioner was 1,345. About 500 were released immediately; the remainder were ordered to be released in batches at the end of six or twelve months from January, 1890. In addition it was recommended that a large number of sentences should be reduced. Mr. Hodgkinson was directed to consider the condition of each district, and was prohibited from revising the proceedings or considering the sufficiency of evidence on which the convictions were based. Had Mr. Hodgkinson been allowed to consider such questions, it is certain that a much larger number of releases would have been recommended.

ANGLO-INDIAN PRESS.

LEGISLATIVE PROSPECTS IN CEYLON.

(Times of Ceylon.)

Sir Arthur Gordon has left the Colony very abruptly, so far as legislation is concerned, and, though Sir Arthur Havelock is assisted by officers of long experience, he will at first have his time pretty fully occupied in dealing with questions left for his solution. We hope, however, that he will set his face against the long-drawn-out sessions which the late Governor inaugurated—sessions which began at no specified date and never ended. In the old days of Sir Henry Ward, Sir Hercules Robinson, Sir Wm. Gregory, and Sir James Longden, the sessions began towards the end of September and almost invariably concluded before January. But of late years the sessions have begun in October and seldom finished before February; and here we are in May with Council still sitting, and, more inconvenient still, with Ordinances yet in their embryonic stage. It would be more convenient for a new Governor to arrive at a time when a Council was not sitting, so that he might at all events have time to turn round and make himself personally acquainted with his chief subordinates and the general outlines of recent legislation; but Sir Arthur Havelock is given none of these advantages, and we make no doubt that he will, if possible defer calling Council together for some time. Indeed, we know no reason why he should depart from the time-honoured custom and call Council together before September. Though there are many questions awaiting settlement, nothing presses at the moment, and we have had enough of legislation for the past six years to last us for some time. A little quiet would be restful and appreciated by all. It is necessary that the new Governor should see as much of the country as possible before plunging into legislation, and we shall be quite content if he takes things a little more easy at first than did his predecessor on his first arrival. The public would like to know and understand our new ruler before anything else, for that is a privilege which few of us have been able to enjoy of late, and it would allow us to sympathise with him and appreciate his work the more. Our Governor has for some time past been too unsympathetic in many respects, too reserved, and too sensible of his own dignity and his own heaven-born mission attempt to conciliate the good opinion and good-will of the community. Had he done so it would have made a good deal of difference in many ways. But we fancy Sir Arthur Havelock is not likely to fall into this error, and therefore we hope soon to become familiar with his ways. He has to make himself acquainted with the general bearings of the larger political questions by conversation with those who can best advise him, and there is no possible reason for hurry.

THE R. C. HIERARCHY IN THE EAST.

(Bombay Gazette.)

The Home papers received by the last mail contained an intimation that Sir Adrian Dingli, Chief Justice of Malta, had been entrusted with a mission to Rome in connection with the Roman Catholic hierarchy in the East Indies. In connection with this mission a correspondent informs us of a scheme which is in contemplation for placing the Catholic hierarchy, which rules over twenty-three dioceses under Dr. Goethals, the Archbishop of Calcutta, whom it is in contemplation to raise to the dignity of Primate of India. This arrangement would obviously affect the status quo brought about by the Concordat of 1886, and our correspondent informs us that a scheme has been under discussion, which, while retaining to the Archbishop of Goa the title of Patriarch of the East Indies with jurisdiction over Goa, Damaun, and Diu, would restrict the Archbishop's authority to Portuguese territory. The Portuguese dioceses of Cranganore, Cochin, and Mylapore would in pursuance of this scheme be extinguished, and their respective prelates transferred to sees in Portuguese Africa. It is known that strong representations have been made both to the Holy See and to the Government at home in regard to what are deemed to be the serious inconveniences arising out of the operations of Portuguese patronage and control over the Catholic Church in British territory, and these representations show that an influential section of the Catholic community in India are by no means prepared to accept the Concordat of 1886 as the last word in the long-standing controversy between the Propaganda and the Padroado. The partisans of the Propaganda seem to rely with some confidence upon the fact that the Concordat has never been in any way recognised by the British Government, and that the ground is therefore clear for urging Lord Salisbury to pronounce against the exercise of the King of Portugal's traditional jurisdiction in British territory. Seeing, however, that Sir Adrian Dingli can scarcely by this time have done more than open negotiations with the Vatican, it is obviously premature to speak, as some seem disposed to speak, of a restriction of the Portuguese jurisdiction as a settled thing. The champions of his Most Faithful King have never been behindhand in the assertion of their claims, and they are not likely to allow judgment to be given against them by default.

THE AMEER'S SON.

(Civil and Military Gazette.)

The Ameer's son, Shahzada Habibulla Jan, who has been governing Kabul—uncommonly well, too—in his father's absence, is practically removing the greatest element of danger to the future of the Afghan alliance. Hitherto, all calculations of policy have been nullified at the outset by the impossibility of foreseeing what would happen if the Ameer died. Nothing was known of the ability of the Ameer's sons; and conjecture, therefore, was active with the names of Yakub, Ayub, and Ishak. Habibulla Jan, however, has shown himself fully capable of administering the kingdom; and upon the success of his son's tenure of authority "our ally the Ameer" deserves congratulation; which from this side of the frontier, will be all the more hearty, because it comes as a great relief to see a fair prospect of continuance for the Abdur Rahman dynasty. If to demonstrate this was one of the objects of the Ameer's sojourn in Turkestan, his was a wise and statesmanlike decision. Among other good points in Habibulla's government—besides the all-important achievements of suppressing disaffection and maintaining law and order—may be noted the innovation by which the Ameer's son has held his court every day throughout the month of Ramzan to hear cases, so that "the people may have no trouble in arriving at justice." Another important innovation which marks his period of rule—though perhaps not due entirely to him—is the introduction of the heliograph, arrangements for which have been made between Kabul and Turkestan. The popular idea of the Afghan always prospecting like a hawk from the top of his native hills suggests that heliography would be both popular and easy in this country. Smokeless powder is another novelty which has attracted the Shahzada's attention. It is probably, however, upon matters more closely connected with the internal administration of the kingdom that the Ameer finds his chief satisfaction at the success of the experiment of leaving his son to rule Kabul. He has given public expression to his pleasure in durbar, when he said that "it was a great satisfaction to find that, during his absence from Kabul, his son has done all that was needful, as was shown by the reports received at Mazar-i-Sharif, in securing peace for Afghanistan." From the point of view of the Government of India, however, additional satisfaction may be expressed with the readiness evinced by Habibulla to take advantage of the discoveries of Western science. He has the advantage of being introduced to them in youth, and thus has not the prejudices of a lifetime to overcome, as his father had. Although it is natural, in a country like Afghanistan, that military inventions and facilities should be the first adopted, yet the rest cannot fail to follow. When, therefore, in the fulness of time, our ally Abdur Rahman is gathered to his fathers, Afghanistan may begin to enter upon a new phase, passing our Indian hope, towards a "strong united and civilised kingdom." To the designs of Russia, who is but half-civilised herself, it needs no words to emphasise the nature of the stumbling block that such an Afghanistan would be. Upon his son's proved ability, therefore, which renders such a dream of the future justifiable, the Ameer is to be heartily congratulated.

OUR INDIAN GRAVEYARDS.

(Bombay Gazette.)

It was a pretty conceit indulged in by our soldiers of a bygone day that the British drum beating the réveillee welcomed the rising sun in his journey round the world. Old Sol must even now appreciate the smartly turned-out Guards and well set-up men who pass before him daily in review from Hong Kong to Vancouver. But side by side with the trim British barrack-yard lies the dreary grass-grown British cemetery, incontestably proving that though we now treat the soldier well when living we ignore him when dead. We are, indeed, strangely neglectful of our heroes. Five-and-thirty years ago the Charge of the Light Brigade raised a thrill of pride in every Englishman's breast. Our Poet Laureate wrote in stanzas which every schoolboy knew by heart:—

When shall their glory fade
Oh! the wild charge they made Gallant Six Hundred.

And now in 1890, of the little handful of survivors, a score are in the workhouse. Wellington and Waterloo are still names to conjure with, yet it needed a meeting at the Mansion House with a Royal Prince in the chair to raise the paltry sum of £3,000 which was needed decently to reinter the scattered bones of our countrymen who died on June 18th, 1815. At Bayonne in 1814 the Brigade of Guards lost sixteen officers, but it was not until our Queen visited the little cemetery on the Spanish Frontier that efforts were made to rescue from oblivion the names of Sir David Baird and his gallant comrades who died in opening up communications between Wellington and the sea. For many years the Russians tended the English graves on Cathcart's Hill, and even now the graveyard there is a blot on our national honour.

There may be some difficulty in arranging for the proper guardianship of these cemeteries in foreign lands. In India there is no excuse, but the condition of Indian cemeteries speaks little for our national gratitude. The church at Ferozepore was raised as a memorial to those brave men who lost their lives in that desperate campaign in which we drove the Sikhs beyond the Sutlej. In its close vicinity lies the graveyard peopled with heroic dead. There is the tomb of Sir Robert Sale, G.C.B., the gallant defender of Jellalabad, and by his side George Broadfoot, who shared with Sale the dangers of that siege, and whose recently-published memoirs have bespattered the memory of the stout old colonel of the 13th. There lies Sir Robert Dick, Adjutant-General of the Army, who lost an arm at Waterloo, and who fell in the same hard fight as Sale, and here Sir R. Lumley, his successor, who held office but for a few short weeks. Here, too, is a simple stone to Colonel Bolton and nine officers of the 31st Foot killed at Moodkee. Behind the Ridge at Delhi is the old Cantonment graveyard, in which sleep those brave comrades of our brave Commander-in-Chief, who died in the direst struggle England ever waged. Of the few thousand of British troops engaged in the siege and storm of Delhi 70 per cent. were either killed or wounded, and in that one God's acre were laid to rest 46 officers and 543 men who had been "killed in action." Chester, the Adjutant-General, to whose memory a monument has been erected at Winchester; Sir Henry Barnard, the Commander-in-Chief, whose name is engraved on the obelisk at Westminster; Quentin Batty, whose dying words, "Dulci et docorum est pro patria mori," have become as it were the motto for the "Guides," and whose two brothers, Wigram and Legh, have fallen in more recent fights. Travers, Law, and Lumsden, of the 1st Punjab Infantry, all sleep behind the "Ridge." Long grass grows over the ill-kept walks. High straggling brambles impede one's way from grave to grave. Headstones are crumbling away, and inscriptions in many cases I am unable to decipher. Yet the place is full of historical associations, and, alas! of associations which in a few short years will be merely historical. Will future generations of the Royal Munster Fusiliers have any sympathy with the gallant dead of the old First and Second Bengal Fusiliers, whose nameless graves lie thick in the Delhi cemetery? Will the second battalion of the Oxford Light Infantry and of the Gloucestershire Regiment remember that they in earlier years were the 52nd and 61st, who stormed the Kashmir Gateway? Will not the kilted pride of the Gordon Highlanders refuse to recognise the "grabby" 75th Foot which fought so sturdily at Budlekeserai and on the Hindun?

In front of the Ridge, hard by the Kashmir Gate, lies another smaller cemetery. Surely the fact that it contains the remains of John Nicholson should suffice for some care to be bestowed on its appearance, whilst inside the city, under the shade of the walls of the magazine, which Willoughby blew up rather than that it should fall into the hands of the rebels, is a third much-crowded graveyard in the same sad state of neglect. Some seventy miles from Delhi lies Kurnaul, once our frontier station, but now long since deserted. The old cemetery is an unkempt jungle overgrown with grass and filled with broken monuments, yet a Commander-in-Chief of India lies buried there, and over 400 officers and men of the 4th Hussars and 13th Light Infantry found their last resting-place within its ruined walls. At Cawnpore Yule's beautiful memorial to the "great company of Christian women and children" who fell victims to Nana Sahib's cruel hate is fast falling into decay; and at Lucknow the cemetery of the Alumbagh is in sad need of repair. At the Kydgunge graveyard at Allahabad I, with difficulty, forced my way through the long grass and overgrown shrubs to the stone which covers those brave ensigns of the 6th Bengal Infantry, who were murdered at the very outset of their career. At Indore the inscription on the tomb of that very brave and perfect knight, Sir Richmond Shakespeare, is illegible, and its general condition speaks little for the regard in which his memory is held by his civilian successors. Even here in Bombay we seem to have no sense of proportion. On the walls of the Cathedral florid marbles flaunt the virtues of unknown mediocrities, whilst on the pavement of the nave was hidden a handsome brass testifying to the worth and valour of that gallant Bombay engineer who infused his own daring courage into the Turks at Silistria, and initiated that counter-stroke which forced the Russians back over the Danube. It is true the brass is so placed that every Sunday evening it is pressed by the knees of British soldiers worshipping in the Cathedral, and doubtless the simple-minded soldier would rather have it so; but when I see the marbles on the walls and think of Ballard's magnificent heroism, I feel the brass should be so placed that every Bombay soldier might learn the lesson of Ballard's gallant life.

The history of British India is to be learnt from the inscriptions in our cemeteries. The whole country from Seringapatam to Peshawar is dotted over with the graves of men who, like Henry Lawrence, tried to do their duty. They bequeathed to us a goodly heritage, an empire whose foundations have been cemented by their life blood. Such a heritage imposes on us a sacred duty. We should guard their graves with sacred vigilance—we should allow no vandalism or neglect, no ravages of time to testify to the shameful fact that we have forgotten the heroic dead who lie in our midst. From peer to peasant there is not a family in England which has not contributed one name to that death-roll which has been the birth-right of India's freedom. The task of erecting fitting tributes to the memory of our soldiers dead is a fair charge on the country, and should not be allowed to devolve on the soldiers living. They are willing to lie down by their comrades in order that peace may be preserved in our midst; they, too, strive to do their duty. Let the nation follow their example, for the care of our soldiers' graves is a national duty; let a sum be voted annually for the conservation of military monuments and cemeteries throughout the Empire, and let commanding officers and chaplains of stations be held responsible that the graves of the gallant dead are tended with watchful care. Day by day the ravages of time are more noticeable; day by day the circle of those who have a personal interest in the preservation of these monuments grows narrower. The eyes that wept hot tears for those who fell at Seringapatam and Bhurtpur are long since closed in sleep, but there still live some who well remember the weeks and months of sickening suspense they passed during the Sikh Campaigns, whilst there are many even in our midst whose eyes moisten as they call to mind loved ones who fell in the dark days of '57. Though the circle of mourners grow less and less, the descendants of those who earned name and fame on the battle-fields on India live and hold high places. Regiments, too, are quartered among us on whose colours are blazoned the names of many a stubborn fight. The peerages that were given for Seringapatam, for Bhurtpur and the Punjab are still extant. Surely Lords Harris and Combermere, Hardinge, and Gough, might consent to aid in the inauguration of such a fund as I have proposed. Lord Sandhurst, too, owes his title to his father's Indian services, and Wolseley much of his good fortune to the deaths of twelve brother-officers who fell in the Relief of Lucknow. Two of our Field-Marshal, Sir Patrick Grant and Sir Frederick Haines, stood over the graves of comrades killed on the banks of the Sutlej. It is not to the higher ranks that I would give a monopoly of these proud memories. Many a half-pay captain, many a maimed pensioner, can call to mind the merry jest and manly form of some old friend who fell long years ago. They of their means would give freely for the honour of the old regiment, and in memory of the old time when, shoulder to shoulder, they charged the Sikh entrenchments at Sobraon, dashed up the narrow streets of Delhi, and fought their way, step by step, through the environs of Lucknow. India has been won by the stubborn gallantry of the British soldier. We did little enough in those days for him when living; it is time we should show him some regard when dead.

A NEW DEPARTURE. (Indian Engineer.)

It has been the general and, we think, the natural idea in the Profession at home, and in India, that the discontent of the Civilian Members of the Public Works Department would in one important phase necessarily disappear with the lapse of time. We refer to the charges frequently made of late years, to the effect that preferment to the higher or administrative posts in that service has fallen in an undue share on Royal Engineer Officers. We may say now, as we have said before, that selection for such appointments involves other considerations besides mere seniority, but when the claims of the Civil Engineer, both as to length of service and proved capacity and experience, become undoubtedly superior to those of the Royal Engineer, we must hold that, in the interests of the service, in fulfilment of the repeated promises of the Government and of the Secretary of State, and in simple justice to a large and most valuable body of public servants, the Government is bound to select the best man irrespective of any outside influences. We refer to this matter for the reason that a rumour has reached us from Simla, that an attempt is being made by the military interest there to induce the Government of India to regard the placing of Royal Engineer Officers under Civil Engineers as being in some way or other, which we do not care to discover, both anomalous and derogatory to the former. We can scarcely believe that this is true, and in any case we do not propose to discuss this new departure. It may suffice to mention it as the last possible and, not altogether unlikely, final struggle of those who see that the long-held reins of power are at length falling from their grasp. The Civil Engineers in India have been long-suffering beings, but if such an absolutely puerile attempt is to be made to keep them from the fulfilment of their long-deferred rights, there will be, or we may say there should be, an explosion of remonstrance that will not be readily forgotten.

MADRAS SPINNING MILLS.

(Madras Mail.)

When it is considered how many persons are employed in and how very many thousands more gain their living indirectly by means of the mills industry its vast importance cannot fail to be recognised; and yet, forty years ago, there was not a single mill in India. The first one built was that of the Bombay Spinning and Weaving Company, which was erected in Bombay Island somewhere about 1852. In 1861 there were only 12 mills in all India, with some 340,000 spindles; while at the present time there are 124 mills, representing a spindle power of about 2,800,000 and nearly 22,000 looms. The greatest progress in the erection of mills has taken place in the last ten years, and is equal to 120 per cent., whilst the consumption of cotton has increased by 230 per cent. Bombay contains 75 per cent. of the mills in India, the majority of which are on Bombay Island. Bengal comes next, with 9½ per cent., and then Madras, with 5 per cent. The total quantity of cotton consumed by all the mills in India is estimated at about 3,112,000 cwt., or nearly 40 per cent. of the country's production. Madras, with a consumption of some 154,000 cwt., occupies third place.

The first mill built in this Presidency was the Buckingham Mill (so called after the Duke of Buckingham, the then Governor), which was erected in 1874. A second was constructed in 1876, and shortly after a third. These were followed in 1884 by two more, whilst in 1886 and 1888 two were built in each year. The Madras Presidency now contains nine mills in all, containing over 150,000 spindles and 470 looms. Besides these there are two in Bangalore, one in Travancore, and one in Pondicherry, representing some 70,000 spindles and 500 looms more. One unique feature of the Madras mill industry is that Madras alone can boast the possession of a spinning mill which is worked by water-power, and which is a complete success. There are many places where there is a demand for yarn, many more where cotton is procurable, and others with suitable water power; but the only place where all three are combined is at Ambasamudram, in the Tinnevely District. This little village, situated in a jungly wilderness, is the site of the mill above alluded to, which is the property of the Tinnevely Mills Company, Limited. The surrounding district produces good and cheap cotton abundantly, and absorbs all the mills' production of yarn. It is a small "shed," containing 16,000 spindles, but owing to the favourable conditions enumerated, as well as to the fact of its motive power costing practically nothing, and its cheap construction (due to its requiring neither engine nor boilers), it is financially eminently successful. No engineering difficulties presented themselves in the way of its water-power, all that was needed being a gradual fall in the gradient of the channel that supplied the water. The mill is built at the foot of one of a low range of hills some 300 feet high. To the crest of this hill the water is brought from a point (above some falls in the Tambrapurni river), about two miles away on the plateau, through a masonry channel. It is conducted down the side of the hill into the mill, by means of an iron pipe, and, after turning the turbine that drives the mill machinery again returns by another masonry channel to the river below the falls.

The entirely local consumption of the Tinnevely Mill yarn is a feature in itself, inasmuch as nearly the whole of Indian yarn is exported to China and Japan. For although these countries contain a number of mills themselves, the local demand is so large that their supply is quite inadequate. If that demand should cease the mill industry in this country would be in a parlous state. The American Silver Bill, which is at present creating so much interest, is likely to affect prejudicially it to a very considerable extent, since the appreciation of silver and consequent rise in exchange will enable Lancashire to come much more prominently to the front. It is reported that Mr. Frewin, the statistician, has expressed it as his opinion that the passing of the Silver Bill will cause a great industrial crisis in Bombay and pari passu create a corresponding "boom" in Manchester. It is to be hoped that this prophecy will prove as fallacious as similar predictions concerning the imminent ruin of Lancashire, at the time when Indian exchange was dropping, turned out to be. At the same time, what with the increased import duty in China the outlook is far from encouraging, and it behoves millowners to be prepared.

AMONG THE SANTHALS.

(Civil and Military Gazette.)

Mr. Haegert, the worthy pastor of the Bethel Santhal Mission, uses a style of his own, and amusing withal. In the mission's fifteenth annual report he writes:—"In 1888 I returned to India with six new missionaries; they are stationed three in Bethel, two in Bethlehem, 20 miles east, and one in Pipra, 25 miles north. Our mission occupies an area of 1,200 square miles, with a hundred thousand people, and what can I do alone among so many? The great wonder is that I accomplished anything at all, for when I came there was not a single Christian to be found, not even with a lantern; and now, through God's loving favour, we have nineteen churches in villages, one big church at Bethel, which seats a thousand people, and Christians in forty-four villages, with more to follow. . . . Since 1883 Rs. 1,220 of scripture have been disposed of; they have gone 50 miles all round." Elsewhere he describes the proceedings of a couple of his itinerants: "Messrs Panes and Heran, while itinerating, arrived in the evening at Uparbaha: there being no other house where to lodge, they slept two nights in an idol house. The people did not object, but warned them that the idol would probably strike them blind, or trouble them at night. However, tired as they were, they slept in peace, and preached to the wondering people in the morning. The idol does not know music, and did not even try to play the cornet, which was placed on the altar while the brethren slept alongside on the ground; they kept it near to give a blast to frighten away any wild beast that might come bothering them, for the jungle is close by and wild beasts abound." Mr. Rowat, one of the missionaries, writes in a manner equally quaint. After relating how "a sneering devil" was cast out, he describes perhaps the cheapest Christmas dinner of a public sort that was ever given. "In the afternoon," he writes, "fifty Christians sat down to a feast, total cost (for the Christmas dinner for fifty) Rs. 3-0-0 (or six shillings)." He has some difficulty about getting a house, it seems, for he tells how he would gladly live in a hut all his life "if the Lord will only save souls," and then adds parenthetically and pathetically, "I have been unable to secure a lease, and cannot build till it is obtained. I wish the Christian reader would pray that 'Our Father' would give us the lease at an early date. A hut is unfit to live in during the hot season. Pray for the lease." The entire report—it only contains a dozen pages of letterpress—affords equally curious reading; yet through it all breathes the simple, unaffected, almost childish faith in the efficacy of their labours, and their ultimate success. Some of the chief instruments of salvation are the flute, violin, and cornet, and the magic lantern is an ever useful means of attracting the attention and interest of the Santals. Besides the churches there are a boys' and girls' school, the former (situated in Bethel) having about twenty-five pupils and the latter a similar number. The girls, besides being instructed in letters and religion, are trained to cook and plant rice, and all the rice fields of the missionaries have been thus prepared. The cost of maintaining a girl at school is only Rs. 2-8 a month. On the whole, it is clear there are good and useful influences at work among the Santals which ought to help in raising them in time out of the dark and uncivilised swarm of Bengal aborigines.

INDUSTRIAL PROGRESS IN INDIA.

(Bombay Gazette.)

If it seems to some who read the report of an address delivered by Mr. N. G. Ranade at the recent Industrial Conference at Poona to be wanting in definiteness, it shares that defect with nearly everything that has been said and written on the subject, and we do not think that complaint on that score can be seriously pressed against what seems to have been meant rather for general suggestion than for specific guidance.

Mr. Ranade, at all events, is careful not to lead his countrymen in the wrong path. He avoids the error of some who have gone before him when he sets aside, as a matter of antiquarian history, the question of the economic improvement or decline of India under British rule. Much industry and ingenuity have been expended upon this subject, often with disappointingly inconclusive results. The practical question, as Mr. Ranade says, is not the relative, but the absolute, poverty of the country, and its too exclusive dependence upon a precarious and uncertain agriculture. Again, Mr. Ranade discouraged one of the conventional methods of dealing with this problem when he characterised as being "hardly fair or manly" the position which is taken up by those who hold that India is economically undone by the eighteen crores or so of her surplus exports. The "drain" theory is relevant only so far as it challenges attention to the extravagant cost of some of the non-effective services for which India has to pay. Within certain limitations there should be merciless retrenchment here, beginning of course with the India Office, which no one seriously believes can rightly absorb close upon a quarter of a million sterling a year. But, as Mr. Ranade reminds his countrymen, a portion of the burden represents interest on money advanced to or invested in this country; and so far from complaining we have reason to be thankful that we have a creditor who supplies our needs at such a low rate of interest. There is not one of the Australian Colonies which does not show a surplus export at least as large, proportionately to its revenue, as India does, and there is no complaint in Australia about the "drain," for it is not as easy there as in India to keep out of site the fact that the bulk of the remittances to England are not tribute, but are strictly payments for value received. Mr. Ranade summarily closes the controversy on that point by observing, "I would not desire you to waste your energies in the fruitless discussion of this question of tribute, which had better be left to political congresses." The series of suggestions with which he closed his address were in the main marked by good sense and practical wisdom. The attention of Government has lately, we believe, been called, by some striking discouragements of Indian manufacture by the Secretary of State, to the subject of a larger purchase of stores in India, and this is a vein which the Industrial Conference may work with advantage. There is much in Mr. Ranade's statement which appeals rather to individual capitalists than to Government, for he places small reliance upon State-aid. If he and his friends can persuade their countrymen to bring from its hiding-places the eight crores of wealth which each year, according to his calculation, might be available for industrial investment, they will deserve well of their country. There is far more practical wisdom in trying to conjure those hoards from their hiding-places than in vainly regretting a yearly drain which is for the most part inevitable, and which is not largely reducible.

INDIAN UNCOVENANTED SERVICE—PAYMENT OF STERLING PENSIONS.

(Englishman.)

There is good reason to hope that the members of the Uncovenanted Civil Service in India will in the end gain one of the principal points for which they are now contending, namely, the payment of pensions in England in sterling as an equivalent of two shillings for the rupee. The further the argument in connection with this question is carried back the clearer does it become that in framing the original pension rules for both the Covenanted and Uncovenanted Services a pension of £500 was always regarded as an equivalent for Rs. 5,000. The claim of the Uncovenanted Service is based not only on the terms in which their own pension rules are expressed, but on the clear proof there is of the identity of purpose that originally existed in the framing of both the Covenanted and Uncovenanted pension rules a purpose, however, which has only been adhered to with regard to the former. It was in 1831 that an attempt was first made to draw up a set of rules for the Uncovenanted employes of the East India Company, and in 1864 a despatch was sent by the Secretary of State to the Government of India making certain changes in the existing rules, and it is with this despatch that the Uncovenanted memorialists are now mainly concerned. Although in this despatch and in the rules subsequently published under it there is no definite statement that pensions would be paid in sterling, yet it is a fact that pensions of £500 were actually paid under order of the Secretary of State for nearly ten years, and this sum of £500 undoubtedly presented itself to the minds of those who framed the rules as the pension payable in England.

Up to the year 1855 pensions were unlimited within one-third and one-half of the amount of salary, and Uncovenanted officers had at times obtained pensions of £900 a year and more. Therefore fixing the limit at £500 was no concession, but was a restrictive limit upon a higher potential pension. Moreover, special provision was made in 1864 for the payment of Uncovenanted pensions in England in the same manner as the pensions of Covenanted and military officers had been previously paid, and these pensions, as has been already stated, continued to be paid for many years at the official rate of two shillings for the rupee, which has never varied since it was instituted more than thirty years previously. The Secretary of State's despatch of 1864 must also be read and interpreted in connection with the facts relating to Covenanted pensions, and it will then be obvious that the limit of £500 was undoubtedly taken because that was the moiety of the pension of the Uncovenanted Civil Service which the Government at that time proposed and undertook to supply. The annuity paid to retired Covenanted servants of the East India Company was £1,000, of which half was furnished from the funds of the Company, while half was made up partly by monthly deductions of 4 per cent. from the pay of subscribers, and partly, if the subscriptions of any individual fell short of this amount, by a lump sum paid at the time of retirement in the form of a fine. Between 1852 and 1870 the exact terms of the annuity were modified more than once in response to memorials from the subscribers, and in 1871 the pension fund was abolished and orders were issued by the Secretary of State that all covenanted civilians should on retirement receive an annuity of £1,000, the supposition being that, taking the average of the contributions, large and small, the original hypothesis of the fund would be maintained; that is to say, that the subscriptions of the civil servants themselves would, on the average, supply an annuity of Rs. 5,000, or £500 to each retiring servant, while Government would supply the other moiety.

From the subscriptions paid by covenanted civilians towards this annuity it is obvious that the original basis of their pensions was wholly a rupee basis, the rupee contributions being taken at Rs. 10 to £1. Up to that time, the year 1871, the pensions of the Covenanted and Uncovenanted Services were precisely on the same footing, with this difference, that the former contributed towards an additional £500 per annum on their retirement, and the latter did not. Three years later, in 1874, an Act of Parliament was passed fixing the annuity of the Covenanted Service at £1,000 payable in England, or 10,000 sicca rupees payable in India. Had that Act not been passed the Covenanted Service, so far as concerns the rules on which their privileges are based, would have had no better title to the £500 payable by Government than the Uncovenanted Service has now; and as for the other moiety, the service would have been entitled to what their fund would have provided, namely, Rs. 5,000 at the outside. The Uncovenanted servants now claim that the original intention with regard to their pensions should not be changed. They observe that by the instrumentality of an Act of Parliament the original intention of the rule was preserved so far as the Covenanted Service was concerned; and more than this, that the moiety of his pension subscribed by himself was maintained by that Act at a fictitiously enhanced value. They therefore ask that they should not be allowed to suffer solely because an Act of Parliament was not passed in their favour. The claim, in fact, amounts to this, that men holding what are known as Schedule A appointments should receive a maximum ordinary pension of Rs. 5,000 if residing in India, and £500 payable in London if residing in Europe or the British Colonies. There can be little doubt that up to the time of the Secretary of State's despatch in 1864 Rs. 5,000 and £500 were regarded as convertible terms, and it was only when the falling exchange made the serious nature of the difference apparent that the Government took advantage of a carelessly-drafted contract to save itself from loss at the expense of its officers. Fortunately for the Covenanted Civilians the Act of Parliament fixing their pensions at what had till then been the recognised rate for all officers of the Crown, was passed just when exchange was starting on that downward course from which it has never recovered. How far the Government were influenced by the signs of the times in making haste to protect their favoured service it is difficult to say, but it has only been since 1871 that what must be called a distinctly hostile attitude towards the Uncovenanted service has been taken up. The claims of the service are, however, so strong, and the injustice done them is so clear, that any independent inquiry is certain to lead to a decision in their favour. When pensions have to be paid to Government servants who have a right to spend their retirement in England, the amount of those pensions must in common justice be fixed, and not be left dependent on circumstances for which the recipients are in no way responsible.

BENGAL.

A WELL-KNOWN Bengali swimmer in the Mymensingh district has just found a watery grave in a dangerous whirlpool of a tiny stream of the Malijhi. The deceased, although warned against it, dived into the pool to cross it, but never rose again.

THE King of Oudh's palace, with its extensive grounds, has just been bought by a Calcutta syndicate, who will probably dispose of a portion of the property for the erection of mills, as may be required. The site is certainly one of the most valuable on the river, within easy reach of Calcutta, but it will be a pity if the palace itself, one of the landmarks of Calcutta, has to be dismantled.

TENDERS for the new Calcutta Municipal Loan were received to the extent of Rs. 77,48,000, or nearly four times the prescribed sum of twenty lakhs. Of tenders above 103 the acceptances in full amounted to Rs. 13,70,000; of those at 103 they amounted to Rs. 6,30,000 out of Rs. 8,56,000. The average rate of accepted tenders was Rs. 103-1-6. This is a striking proof both of the popularity of Calcutta Municipal stock and of the amount of money that is available for sound investment.

It seems natural to hear of inflation in the umbrella trade, observes a Calcutta paper. Owing to accumulation of stocks in Calcutta last year the imports for the present year have declined no less than 32 per cent. Still the requirements of the country seem to be fairly provided for by an import of 1,787,829 umbrellas, valued at 16 lakhs. Nearly the whole import comes from the United Kingdom, but Austria sends an increasing quantity of cotton ones, and France a large proportion of silk ones, for which, however, the demand must be limited.

BOMBAY.

(June 27.)

PROFESSOR COOKE has returned to the Poona College of Science from leave.

HIS HIGHNESS MAHARAJAH HOLKAR, of Indore, has been elected a Life Member of the Bombay Art Society.

FOURTEEN couple of hounds have arrived at Poona from England for the Poona Hunt. One couple died on the voyage. A new kennel has been set apart at Wanowrie.

THE pension pay offices of the Bombay and Poona Circles will be abolished at the close of the current month. The payment of military pensioners from July 1st will be made by civil treasuries, except in the town of Bombay, where pensions of the Native army will be paid by the Accountant-General, Bombay, and all other military pensioners by the Presidency Paymaster. The Paymaster in the Southern Konkan districts is not to be disturbed.

"FELIX" writes in the Deccan Herald:—On the 12th inst. Mr. H. R. Rich, superintendent of Government Telegraphs, Bhoynuggur, Kattywar, died rather suddenly of heat apoplexy. Shortly before his death he expressed a strong desire that his body should be cremated. The cremation took place in the compound of the new hospital now under construction at Bhoynuggur, in the presence of a large gathering of his friends. The funeral service having been read, the body was carried to the selected spot and placed on a pile of wood and covered over in the native style. The pyre was then lit, and the body cremated.

MR. ACKWORTH, Municipal Commissioner, on Wednesday made a statement before the Standing Committee of the Corporation regarding the proposed electric lighting in Bombay. He said that in response to the advertisements published by his predecessor in the local and English and American papers there were four tenders received for the electric lighting of the city. He gave the details of the tenders, and made his own comments upon the same. The Committee resolved that the Commissioner be requested to prepare a special report on the subject of electric lighting, containing full details of the scheme proposed to be adopted in connection with the carrying out of the experimental electric light, and that he be authorised to apply to Government for the services of an electrical engineer, and that in order to enable him to make the necessary scientific inquiries he be further authorised to expend a sum not exceeding Rs. 1,000.

MADRAS.

THE family of the Meingoon Prince, which has been residing in Pondicherry since the Prince escaped to Cochin China in October last, has recently left to join him. The Prince and Princess left at 2 A.M. in a cargo boat for a steamer of the Messageries' line, and the former was dressed as a Mussulman Prince. It is said they have been very hard up since the French Government stopped his subsidy, but has lately done better. The Prince since his arrival at Saigon has been under strict surveillance, and was once prevented leaving for Tonquin.

It is understood that the local Congress Committee were much agitated by the publication of the Secretary's confidential circular. They have been discussing whether the local Times was justified in publishing a document marked "confidential."

It is generally supposed that the publication of the circular has effected whatever success the London Committee had achieved.

MR. PENDLEBURY, Agent and Manager of the Hyderabad State Railway, has left for England. Mr. Dunlop, Resident Engineer, acts for him.

NAWAB BYRAM-UD-DOWLAH, son-in-law of Sir Salar Jung the first, has been appointed chairman of the committee of management of the Sir Salar Jung estates, with leave to reside in the palace of his father-in-law.

THE MAHARAJAH RADHA PERSHAD SINGH v. LAL SAHAB RAI AND OTHERS.

This was a consolidated appeal from two decrees of the High Court for the North-Western Provinces of India of May 4, 1887.

Mr. Doyme and Mr. J. D. Mayne were counsel for the appellant; Mr. J. Graham, Q.C., and Mr. Herbert Cowell for the respondents.

The case was recently argued before their Lordships, who took time to consider their decision. The litigation, with which it deals, has been in progress, as will be seen, for the last thirty-five years in various phases and aspects.

Lord WATSON, in now delivering the judgment of their Lordships, said the suit in which the present appeals arose was instituted by the respondents before the Subordinate Judge at Ghazipur in 1882 for the purpose of obtaining relief against the attachment and sale, at the instance of the Maharajah Radha Pershad Singh, the appellant, of certain shares of immovable estate at Narhi and elsewhere in satisfaction of a judgment debt alleged to be due from their ancestor, Jhanguri Rai. The respondents were the six sons of Jaipargash, the only son of Jhanguri, and the shares sold in execution by the appellant were their ancestral property, being part of the interest which had belonged to their great grandfather. The estate of Majharya, which was the property of the appellant, and that of Narhi were situated on opposite banks of the Ganges, and disputes arose between the proprietors of these two estates with respect to the ownership of a large area of alluvial land which had been deposited by the river in contiguity to these two properties. The father of the present appellant, the Maharajah Buksh Singh, brought in 1855 an action against 264 defendants—occupiers or owners of property at Narhi—before the Civil Court of Ghazipur for recovery of the disputed land and for mesne profits. The Court decreed in favour of the Maharajah in 1856, but there were subsequently various disputes as to boundaries, and the question of mesne profits and costs was not finally disposed of until 1877, when the appellant, as successor to the Maharajah, was awarded a sum of 1,069,667 rupees, by a decree jointly against the defendants. In 1881 the appellant took steps to recover this amount from the numerous judgment debtors, among whom, as was alleged, was Jhanguri Rao, the grandfather of the respondents. Upon that the respondents in 1882 brought the present suit, in which there had been an unusual amount of litigation. They alleged that the judgment debtors had no connection or concern with their property, nor were they nor their ancestors debtors under the decree in execution. The appellant, on the other hand, averred that the decree of 1856 was taken against Jhanguri and his son, as judgment debtors, and that the property being ancestral it was liable to attachment for their debt. After being heard by the Subordinate Judge, who decided that the respondent's claim was barred, the suit was twice remanded back by the High Court to the Court below for disposal on its merits, and eventually, in 1885, the High Court at Allahabad gave judgment for the respondents in terms of their plaint with costs. With the conclusion at which the learned Judges of the High Court arrived their Lordships agreed, although they were unable to concur in all the reasoning on which it was based. In their opinion it was an obvious mistake to assume that the right of the appellant to take the respondents' land in execution for mesne profits wholly depended on the fact of their ancestor being a party to the decree of 1856. None of the defendants were by that decree made judgment debtors for mesne profits in the sense that their property could be attached by virtue of it. The decree, no doubt, found that the defendants were accountable for mesne profits, and by that finding they were bound; but it did not ascertain the amount of such profits, or determine the important question whether the defendants were liable, jointly or severally, in respect of their wrongful possession. There was no adjudication on any of those matters until March, 1877, when, for the first time, the appellant obtained a money decree which was capable of being put into execution. But, according to the appellant's own witnesses, Jhanguri died at least twelve months before that date. It did not clearly appear whether his son, Jaipargash, was then alive, but it was a matter of certainty that neither Jaipargash nor the respondents were made parties to the suit in room of Jhanguri.

An operative decree, obtained after the death of a defendant, by which the extent and quality of his liability already declared in general terms were, for the first time, ascertained, could not bind the representatives of the deceased unless they were made parties to the suit in which it was pronounced. Their Lordships would, therefore, humbly advise Her Majesty that the judgment of the High Court ought to be affirmed. The appellant must pay to the respondents their costs in these appeals.

AN IMPORTANT BANKING CASE AT CALCUTTA.

In the Calcutta Small Cause Court on Friday last, before Mr. Sconce, the Chief Judge, Mr. W. H. Browne sued the National Bank of India, Limited. Mr. Acworth, instructed by Mr. Simmons, appeared for the plaintiff; Mr. Upton for the National Bank. Mr. Acworth, in opening his case, stated that this action was brought to recover a sum of Rs. 803, the amount due upon the first of a set of bills of exchange drawn in the plaintiff's favour by the head office of the National Bank in London upon its branch here. About the middle of August last Mr. A. R. Browne, the plaintiff's brother, received a letter from which he gathered that a draft, which had not been received by the plaintiff, had been sent out by the previous mail, for £50, but as this second letter did not explicitly state on what bank here the draft was drawn, Mr. A. R. Browne, during the temporary absence of his brother from Calcutta, had written to several banks making inquiry for it, and had received replies from all of them, including the defendant bank, that the draft had not been cashed. This was on Aug. 16th last. The matter was then referred to the Post Office authorities, with the result that the police took action, and proceedings were instituted against a person named R. Brown, who was not the plaintiff's agent, and of whom the plaintiff knew nothing, for receiving the registered letter which gave cover to the draft. Mr. Upton intimated that all this would have to be strictly proved; he must not be understood to admit it. Mr. Acworth continued that R. Brown was arrested and convicted under the Post Office Act, and sentenced to two years' imprisonment. Subsequently it transpired that the draft had been drawn on the National Bank, and had been cashed by them on Aug. 9th last, a week before the date of the bank's letter stating they had not cashed the bill. Mr. Acworth said that the prisoner, R. Brown, had been brought up from jail to give evidence, and would prove that he cashed the draft. Under the circumstances counsel contended that the bank continued liable to his client, Mr. W. H. Browne. The document, on the face of it, purported to be a bill, and not a cheque; it was designated a bill, and it was drawn in two parts, which cheques were not; and he relied on sections 5, 78, and 82 cl. c., 8 (definition of a "holder"), 58, and 9 (definition of a holder in due course), 6 (definition of a cheque), 85, and 10 (payment in due course) of the Negotiable Instruments Act to show that the Bank was not discharged except by payment to a lawful holder, and that a forged endorsement would not operate as a discharge. On receipt of the second of exchange, for which Mr. A. R. Browne, acting as his brother's agent, had written to England, he called at the National Bank with his brother's power of attorney, and applied for payment upon the second of the set, but it was refused on the ground that the Bank had already paid the first. Mr. Acworth argued that the refusal of the Bank on August 16th last to give information regarding the draft would operate as an estoppel, inasmuch as, had the Bank then given full particulars of the way in which the draft had been cashed, the plaintiff could have taken action immediately with a better prospect of recovering the money from the person who cashed it. Mr. Upton required the plaintiff to prove he was the person for whom the bill sued upon was intended, and he maintained that, under the Negotiable Instruments Acts, the payment made was a complete discharge to the bank, and that Mr. W. H. Browne's proper remedy was against the person who had actually cashed the draft. He also denied that Mr. A. R. Browne's letter of inquiry described the bill so as in any way to identify it with the one now being sued upon, or to enable the bank to trace it. The pleadings were read, and were very lengthy, as the Court, owing to the importance of the case, had directed both parties to file written statements. Evidence was gone into, and the case was adjourned late in the day to Monday next, when the bank will go into their case. It was intimated at an early stage of the proceedings that a reference to the High Court would be asked for, as the case was of some importance to all the banks and to the public generally.—Englishman.

On the abolition of the Pension Pay Office at Bombay, Captain Richardson, of the Military Accounts Department, will be appointed Travelling Auditor of Regimental and Departmental Accounts in Madras and Bombay. An auditor for Bengal Accounts will also be shortly appointed.

HOAXING A NEWSPAPER.

The following extracts tell their own story. The Indian Daily News of Tuesday has the following:—

On Monday evening, just as we were going out for the usual drive, the Englishman issued a telegram, probably intended for our special benefit. It was to the effect that the Czar of Russia had been assassinated by a German Socialist. We mentioned the circumstance to several people, but no one seemed to know anything about it. In the ordinary routine of our office the telegram was put in our North-Western Dak Edition. Afterwards on seeing the telegram, and giving it a little consideration, we, as we once heard a man say, "suspected him." It was tolerably evident that the telegram was a "bogus" one, intended for our special advantage, and to enable the Englishman to display his cuteness. We imagine he has not been able to sleep for chuckling over his wonderful ingenuity. He will perhaps modify his glee when he learns the very limited success of his clumsy cleverness. No doubt the Englishman is clever in his own estimation. But he must be a little sharper when next he attempts "to put salt on the tail." The report, being placarded in a public place with the appearance of the authority of a Reuter's telegram, naturally got further abroad in the town than our office, and we are informed that uneasiness was created in commercial circles, which led next morning, when the sell was discovered, to the utterance of a good many "big, big D's" in condemnation of the Englishman's conduct. Our withers are unwrung, and the Englishman's action really concerns the local public who were hoaxed and Reuter's Agency, whose name was naturally associated with such a telegram, more than it does us. We regret that a few of our mofussil subscribers should have been temporarily deceived; but happily there was much less possibility of mischief being caused to any interests by the publication of the false report in up-country stations than in Calcutta. It was the Englishman, not the Indian Daily News, that published the bogus telegram here.

The Englishman in its next issue wrote:—

"One of the two local papers which appropriate Reuter's telegrams without payment has, it seems, been the victim of a shameful trick. 'Just as we were going out for the usual drive,' a bogus telegram extra made its appearance, and was instantly popped, free of cost, into the telegraph column of 'Our North-Western Dak.' The message announced that the Czar of Russia had been assassinated by a German Socialist—a rather startling piece of information, of which it might have been expected that even the Central News Agency would have had something to say. 'We mentioned the circumstance to several people, but no one seemed to know anything about it.' Consequently, 'our' suspicions being roused, 'we' were careful to withdraw the telegram from 'our' morning issue. 'We' jumps to the conclusion, not only that the bogus telegram came from the Englishman office, but that it was sent out for 'our special advantage.' But this is so far from being the case that the first news of the trick that reached the Englishman office was the ridiculous paragraph on the subject in the erring journal. For the enlightenment of 'we' it may be stated that several unknown correspondents have lately volunteered the suggestion that the two pilfering papers would be properly punished by this simple device, but the hint, as far as this office is concerned, has not been accepted. Apparently someone is at work independently, and in future, both before and after the usual evening drive, 'we' will have to be doubly careful, if, indeed, our usual drive has not to be abandoned. It would seem to be a choice between the evening drive and the stolen sweets of a telegraph service for which someone else has to pay."

THE Egerton Woollen Mills at Dhariwal, Punjab, have been bought by a small syndicate of speculators for four lakhs. There was only one tender for the property.

THE MAHARAJAH OF MYSORE has offered a cup for competition in a Polo tournament this year. Major King, the Secretary of the Polo Club, is arranging for a tournament to be played during the race week.

A NATIVE paper is almost too candid about the Bengali. It says:—"Babu Amrita Lal, we suspect, lays on the colour too thick when he says that at one time of his life his object was to learn 'military engineering' to facilitate, we presume, his taking possession of Fort William. We must say we feel some difficulty in swallowing this fiction. Young Bengal will, we may readily allow, talk magnificently on abstract principles of right and justice. He may wax eloquent over the achievements of a Garibaldi or a Mazzini. But he won't go to fight—that is certain. He never in his wildest moments dreams of military engineering, but prefers to carry war into the enemy's camp by means of two weapons only—his tongue and his pen."

NOTICES OF BOOKS.

AKBAR.*

Colonel Malleon has hardly done full justice to his artistic faculties in this brief memoir of the great Akbar. In the first place, he has stinted himself of the small space that appears to have been entrusted to him. Whereas he had only 200 pages to dispose of, he has devoted between 60 and 70 of them to sketching the eventful careers of Babar and Humayun. Against the workmanship of this triad we have nothing to say. The name of the eminent author is a sufficient guarantee for the goodness of his handiwork; but Colonel Malleon has attempted to perform the old conjuring trick of pouring a quart of good wine into a pint bottle, and, being no practical wizard, he has not quite succeeded. The most interesting chapter for general readers is, without comparison, the last one, in which Akbar is presented to us in his own grand personality. We see him "at home," not so much the despotic monarch as the philosopher, the searcher after knowledge, the champion of religious toleration, and the warm asserter of liberty of thought. It is no new subject, nor does the author put forth any pretensions to originality of conception or novelty of treatment. But he handles his subject in quite a masterly manner, and has opened to the British public a new window through which they may look out upon Oriental life as it was to be seen in the days of our Queen Elizabeth. For this we may be grateful to Colonel Malleon, though we could uncomplainingly have dispensed with his brief, hurried notices of the campaigns of the three Emperors, whose reigns he has taken in hand to illustrate. Babar distinctly deserves a volume to himself. He was, it is true, only a conqueror, while his grandson was distinguished not only on the battle-field, but as an organiser and administrator. As for Humayun there was not much to be said for him, and surely his father and his son should have commanded greater respect than to be employed as his literary "sandwich men."

ANGLO-BURMESE HAND-BOOK.

We are indebted to Messrs. Kegan Paul, Trench, Trübner, and Co. (Limited) for a copy of the revised edition of the "Anglo-Burmese Hand book; or, Guide to a Practical Knowledge of the Burmese Language," recently published by the American Baptist Mission Press at Rangoon. The first edition was compiled nearly thirty-eight years ago by the late Lieut. Dormer Augustus Chase, of the 64th B.N.I., and Assistant-Commissioner in the Tenasserim Province, and was dedicated to the late Sir Arthur Phayre, the first Chief Commissioner of British Burma, who was then Captain Phayre, Commissioner of Arracan. The object of the work was to assist students in the acquisition of the Burmese language, as well as to be a useful vade mecum to others. With this object in view, the Roman character was added to the Burmese text throughout the whole, and the grammar part confined to such points as are indispensably necessary to a right understanding of the construction of the Burmese language.

The first edition of this book has long been out of print, but the few copies of it remaining were sufficient to create a demand for another edition. The revised edition is by Mr. F. D. Phinney, M.A., Superintendent of the American Baptist Mission Press. The work of the reviser has mainly been (1) to alter the style of the work to conform to present ideas of good book-writing; (2) to rewrite the Romanised Burmese words as closely as possible in accordance with the Hunterian system, which has been adopted by the Government of this Province as the basis for the transliteration of Burmese words in its English publications. The new edition shows very great care and attention on the part of the reviser, and cannot fail to be of the greatest assistance to all students of the Burmese language. It is, moreover, most neatly printed and got up, and on excellent paper. It, therefore, does great credit to the publishers as well as to the reviser, and is sure to command a ready sale in both Upper and Lower Burma, especially with the influx of Europeans that the annexation of the first-mentioned division of the Province must attract thither.

At last, writes the Pioneer, the Bombay public are awaking to the fact that the treatment meted out to the lepers of the city is a scandal and a disgrace. Some good Samaritan has written to a local paper, offering to head with Rs. 500 a subscription for a temporary shelter, till such time as the Trombay Home is completed, and the Times of India has opened its columns for the purpose. So far so good; but the matter is not one which should have been left to the hazard of private benevolence at all: it was clearly the business of the Municipality.

WEDNESDAY, JULY 16, 1890.

"A DOWN-TRODDEN PEOPLE."

It is satisfactory to find mis-statements made in India by Indian gentlemen concerning British rule in India corrected in India itself. Since the Congress orators made the action of the British Government towards the Natives of India a theme for the preaching of much vilification and badly-concealed sedition a considerable deal of evil has been done in India by the dissemination of the falsehoods which the speakers have put forward as facts. The chief object, of course, of the orators has been to stir up an agitation on behalf of the Congress cause in England, where there is always to be found a certain number of fools ready to be beguiled by any story which tells against their own nation. These are the persons who have been well described as "friends of every country but their own." To such individuals it seems to be an everlasting delight to hear that British rule in British possessions abroad is characterised by injustice, corruption, and tyranny, and that dusky races, especially, who have the misfortune to be under that rule, are ground down to the earth, and are little better than slaves, having no recognised rights, but being looked upon by their rulers as merely human beasts of burden—hewers of wood and drawers of water. It was an old Roman boast that the Roman citizen or soldier did not change his nature with any change of climate or scene. It was held to be his proud prerogative that wherever he went he carried with him the same noble instincts and honourable feelings with which he had been imbued in his home, and which he had been told were the secrets of his country's power and greatness. And Rome expected from her children that wherever they went, either as men of peace or as men of war, they would carry with them as a sacred heritage the traditions of their race, and that the proud boast, Civis Romanus sum, would be accepted by the world at large that Roman virtue, justice, and integrity were embodied in the boast. And this idea was one which Englishmen, until of late years, felt no hesitation in applying to themselves. With a higher motive for extending national greatness than that which actuated pagan Rome, Christian England has sent forth her civil administrators, her soldiers, and her missionaries to the uttermost ends of the earth, with the consciousness that, wherever they went, or under whatever influences they had to act, they would uphold the great good name of their country before all kings and peoples. And so they did until they took in hand a flabby, emasculated race of Orientals in Lower Bengal and gave them the blessings of a free English education. That education, with its lessons about freedom and liberty of speech, has been availed of by some who have most benefited by it to revile the donors of it. Amongst these is Mr. W. C. Bonnerjee, who, in presiding at a dinner given to a Congress delegate leaving Calcutta for England, is reported to have said:—"We Natives of India are a down-trodden people." It is pleasant to find, and pleasanter still to find in the Calcutta Statesman, a writer on the spot taking this gentleman to task for this expression. This writer puts the matter very pointedly and plainly thus:—

"To begin with Mr. Bonnerjee himself. He is a leading barrister of the High Court, with a considerable practice, by which he has amassed a good fortune, and has, I hear, more than once officiated as Standing Counsel at the High Court. How a man under such circumstances, and holding, moreover, the honourable position of Standing Counsel, can consider himself a down-trodden man passes my comprehension; it is a contradiction in terms. I find in the Imperial and Bengal Council several native members who are styled 'Honourable.' Does this show that the Natives are a down-trodden people? I observe among the Judges of the High Court two Natives who enjoy that honourable position. Does this show that the Natives are a down-trodden people? I also notice a large number of Native barristers, pleaders, and attorneys in the High Court who under the auspices of the judges have considerable practice, and find their profession a lucrative one. Does this show that the Natives are a down-trodden people? In the Calcutta Small Cause Court there are more than two Native judges; one has a higher position than his European brethren. Does this show that the Natives are a down-trodden people? There are Native professors, head masters, inspectors of Government colleges and schools, Fellows of the Calcutta University, one of whom holds the honourable position of Vice-Chancellor. Does this show that the Natives are a down-trodden people? Then there are Native magistrates, deputy magistrates, collectors, deputy collectors, assistant surgeons, inspectors of police, all over the country, whose name is legion. Does this show that the Natives are a down-trodden people? The Municipal Corporation is composed chiefly of Natives, and in the Municipal office the vice-chairman, collector, assessor, and the heads of almost every department are Natives. Does this show that the Natives are a down-trodden people? In the Bank of Bengal, Treasury, Bengal Secretariat, and other Government offices a large majority of assistants are Natives, with salaries from Rs. 600 downwards. Does this show that the Natives are a down-trodden people? I observe in the Presidency and other Colleges men of high culture are brought out from England by Government on high salaries for the education of Native youths, to qualify them for the various spheres of life. Does this show that the Natives are a down-trodden people? If the answers to these questions be in the negative then it is manifest that the above statement of Mr. Bonnerjee has no foundation in fact.

It never had any foundation; but it suits men of Mr. Bonnerjee's stamp to spout this kind of clap-trap in order to catch the ears of English demagogues, who are supposed by the Congress delegates to have an influence in English politics. The rebuker of Mr. Bonnerjee goes on to say that, considering the kindness and courtesy which that gentleman has received from Englishmen in India and in England, his statement is not only untrue but ungenerous, and goes to prove that gratitude is an unknown quality in the nature of Natives of India as it is an unknown word in their language. But this is carrying rebuke too far. The ingratitude towards England is, we are glad to believe, confined to those whom we have foolishly veneered with a so-called "English education."

SOME excellent fishing has been obtained near Murree this year in the Mahl river. The honorary secretary of the North Punjab Fishing Club, on June 6th and 9th, managed to secure seven fish weighing together 205lbs. The largest fish were 51, 44, 34, and 26lbs. The above bag, we are informed, was made entirely on single gut and a light rod, and is believed to be the largest bag ever made in the time on the Mahl river. The 51-pounder was sent into Murree, where it arrived in safety.

THE ALLEGED OUTRAGE ON BRITISH OFFICERS.

Very considerable indignation is felt in all circles at the extraordinary occurrence, already reported. We are assured that the attack made by the African guard upon the occupants of the tonga was a most unprovoked one. The road where the occurrence took place was broad enough for at least half a dozen carriages to pass. The tonga was on the proper (left) side of the road, and on seeing the approach of his Highness's carriage drew off still further to the left, leaving room enough for three or four more carriages to pass. The Sowar, however, followed the tonga as it drew off, aimed a blow with his bare sword at Lieutenant Gallie, overturned the tonga, causing more or less injuries to all the occupants, and then galloped on. Not a word of apology was offered, nor any show of assistance made. We trust that this wanton conduct of his outriders will be brought to his Highness's notice, and that steps will be taken to effectually restrain unprovoked attacks on innocent passers by in future. It is the duty as well as the pleasure of every one, European or Native, to make way for his Highness and to greet him with respect, but the pleasure is likely to be very considerably diminished if, whilst performing this duty, one is liable to a savage and dangerous attack.—Deccan Times.

The recent collision between British officers and the Nizam's Body Guard is the absorbing theme of conversation in the garrison of Secunderabad.

The facts according to Lieut. Gallie's version are these:—"On Sunday, the 15th inst., he, together with two other British officers, Lieuts. Brooksbank (Princess of Wales's Own Yorkshire Regiment) and Holmes (4th Madras Infantry), went from Secunderabad to the Public Gardens at Chudderghat. As they were returning in their tonga along the bund, driving slowly on the proper side of the road, their attention was called to a mounted sowar who was coming from the opposite direction towards them at full gallop. Seeing this the coachman turned the ponies more off to the left, but the sowar turned in the same direction, and deliberately put his horse at them. In a moment the sowar's horse breasted the cross-bar of the tonga with such violence as to stop the further progress of the tonga, and to throw the near pony down insensible under the tonga, inflicting such internal injuries that its recovery is doubtful. The driving-box, splashboard, and lamp-sockets were splintered to pieces, and the occupants of the back seats of the tonga were thrown out on to the road, their clothes being torn, and they themselves severely bruised. The sowar, after the collision, extricated his horse from the débris as fast as he could, and, after delivering a cut at Mr. Gallie, who was sitting in the front seat, with his sabre, he galloped off. Almost immediately afterwards some carriages, containing a party of Native gentlemen, and followed by a strong escort, came upon the scene. Being informed it was the Nizam and his Staff, Mr. Gallie and his companions endeavoured to attract the attention of the party to their condition, but no notice whatever was taken of them. With much difficulty the three officers walked back to Secunderabad, a distance of four miles."

All this occurred in broad daylight, it being about half-past six in the evening. The part of the bund where the collision occurred is where it is broadest.

The sowar's version differs materially from the above, and may be best given from an extract from a demi-official letter addressed by the Commandant of the regular troops, Colonel Richard Nevill, to his Highness's Private Secretary. Colonel Nevill says that the party were going from Hyderabad to Chudderghat, and were on the bund, when the Nizam's carriage took the road to Saifabad. When the first portion of the escort saw this they turned round and galloped back to regain their position. One of their horses ran away and came in contact with the ponies of the tonga, and so caused the accident. The horse did not pull up until it got to Naka Police Station at Saifabad. The rider of the bolting horse must have hit the cross-bar of the tonga, as his knee is injured. The trooper declares that he never struck at anyone, as all he could do was to try and stop his horse. This horse had often been on escort duty before, and had never misbehaved himself.

But in justice to his Highness it should be said that he knew or saw nothing of the occurrence. Had he seen or known that one of his sowars had caused such an accident I am assured by his Highness's Private Secretary that he would certainly have stopped and inquired what was the matter.

Lieutenant Gallie has made a formal report of the outrage to the General Commanding the district, and it is expected that the General will address the Resident on the subject, if he has not already done so. In all probability the sowar will be tried by court-martial, though he has not yet been placed under arrest.

It is satisfactory to hear that his Excellency the Minister has written, through his Private Secretary, to Lieutenant Gallie, expressing regret for the accident, and making kind inquiries after his condition.—Pioneer.

A high official of the Nizam's Government requests us (Times of India) to publish the following account as giving the "actual facts" of what happened on the Hussain Sagor Tank Bund:—"On the date in question the Nizam's escort consisted of some troopers belonging to the African Guards, and while his Highness was driving on the Bund one of the trooper's horses took fright and bolted, running into and capsizing a tonga coming from the opposite direction. The occupants of the tonga, who were two British officers, were thrown out, but unhurt. The Nizam, who saw the accident, sent his aide-de-camp to express regret for the occurrence, and to offer all necessary assistance. The trooper whose horse caused the accident was a good deal hurt, and is now in hospital. There were several eye-witnesses to the occurrence, and these all agree in saying that the trooper did not make a cut at one of the officers with his sword, as has been alleged. On the contrary, he was doing his best to hold in his horse, but as he held a drawn sword in one hand (his Highness' escort invariably ride with drawn swords), it is probable that in the excitement of the moment the occupants of the tonga thought he was making an attack upon them. The foregoing are the actual facts of the case, and a Commission, consisting of General Campbell (Judge of the Suburban Court), Colonel Ludlow, C.I.E. (Inspector-General of Police), and Colonel Neville, C.I.E. (Commander of the Regular Troops), has been appointed to inquire into the matter. No one regrets the accident more than H.H. the Nizam and his Minister, Sir Asman Jah, both of whom have always manifested the highest consideration socially, and in every other respect, for British officers of all grades, and no endeavour will be wanting on their part to clear up the misrepresentations to which currency has been given."

HINDOO DAILY PRAYERS AND SUPPLICATIONS.

The daily Hindoo prayers and supplications are known by the name of Sandhya Vandanam and Nityanushtanam. The word Sandhya is derived from the word Sandhi, which means a meeting; it is the meeting of two periods of time, viz., day and night. Hence, Sandhya corresponds to the English word twilight, which occurs both at sunrise and sunset. The word Vandanam means adoration or prayers. Therefore, the compound word, Sandhya Vandanam, signifies twilight adorations or prayers. These prayers are also known by the name of Nityanushtanam or daily supplications, because they must be offered up every day, as a matter of strict duty, by every Aryan, both in the morning and in the evening. In other words, they are Nityakarmas, or compulsory duties, and are not Naimittika Karmas, or optional duties. Some Smritis or religious laws ordain the performance of Madhyahnika Sandhyas or noon prayer, and thus the word Sandhi is extended in its meaning, and is applied to the change from mid-day to afternoon. The mandatory words of the Vedas are:—"Aharabassandhya mupasita," which mean, the twilight prayers must be performed every day. The selection of the time of twilight for these prayers seems to be appropriate, because it is then that almost everything in nature is, more or less, in a state of santi or rest, which greatly contributes to concentration of mind. As cleanliness is next to godliness, Snana or ablution must be performed before Sandhya Vandana.

The Pratas Sandhya, or morning prayer, expresses gratitude to the Supreme Being for past acts of grace, beseeches forgiveness for sins committed during the previous night, and prays for further acts of divine grace. It must be performed just before sunrise, when some stars are visible to the naked eye. Madhyahnika Sandhya, or midday prayer, similarly expresses gratitude to God, and prays for rain to purify and fructify the earth; it also beseeches God to purify the heart of the devotee from all sins and evil acts. The best time for performing it is when the sun is in the zenith of the place. Sayam Sandhya, or evening prayer, expresses sentiments similar to those of the morning prayer, and asks forgiveness for sins committed during the daytime. It must be performed in the evening just before sunset, when no star is visible to the naked eye. Hence, gratitude and benevolence form the two leading features of these Aryan prayers. "There can be no doubt," says an eminent modern writer, "that the whole process of devotion which the Aryans observed is conducive to the preservation of health, to the invigoration of mind, and to the development of the psychic powers."

There is a misconception regarding the object of worship in Sandhya Vandanam. Many foreigners and even some Aryans are under the false impression that it is the material sun that is adored by the Hindoos. The fact is, as the sun is the largest and brightest body known to us, as he is the great giver of warmth and light which are absolutely necessary to the growth of both animate and inanimate substances in the world, and, lastly, as he is the regulator of time in a remarkably accurate degree, that self-luminous body was chosen by the great Vedic seers of antiquity to represent as a symbolic conception (to use the words of that great modern metaphysician, Herbert Spencer) of Parabrahma, or the Supreme Spirit. The word saṁvita which is used for the sun in Gayatri, the essential formula of the Sandhya, means the Creator of the Universe, i.e., the Supreme Being or God. Again, in the very beginning of the prayer, the devotees say that he begins Brahmakarma, which means acts of devotion to the Supreme Spirit (Brahma Karma samarabhe). Almost in the very middle of Sandhya Vandana, there is a clear text which seems to have been put in purposely to warn devotees against falsely thinking that there is more than one Supreme Spirit, and to point out in unmistakable language that the visible sun is only an outward symbol to represent God. That text is the following:— “Asavaditya Brahma, i.e., Asau aditya Brahma: That sun represents the Supreme Spirit. The morning Sandhya is symbolically represented as Gayatri, or Brahmi Sakti or the energy of Brahma, the personification of the creative principle of the Supreme Spirit; it manifests itself as possessing Rakta varna or red hue. The midday Sandhya is symbolically represented as Savitri or Raudri Sakti, or the energy of Siva, the personification of the destructive principle of Parabrahma or the Supreme Spirit; it manifests itself as possessing Sukla varna, or white colour. The evening Sandhya is symbolically represented as Saraswati or Vaishnavi Sakti, or the energy of Vishnu, the personification of the protective principle of the Supreme Being; it manifests itself as possessing Krishna varna or black colour. The three Sandhyas thus stand for the energies of the Trimurtis, Brahma, Vishnu, and Siva. The union of these three energies is known collectively by the name of Sandhya Bevi, or the energy of prayer. This collective energy is but the “symbolic conception” of Parabrahma or the Supreme Spirit, as represented by the union of Brahma, Vishnu, and Siva.

Although certain sects of Hindooism differ in minor details in Sandhya concerning the chanting of certain Vedic texts, &c., yet all sects agree in the necessity of using the Gayatri Mantra, or the sacred text of Gayatri, at the time of Arghya Pradana, or the pouring out of consecrated water three times in adoration, and also at the time of japa, or spiritual meditation. This holy text is called Vida Janani, i.e., the mother of the Vedas. The following elaborate English translation of it shows its universal character:—

“Aum—the light of the universe, the omniscient and omnipresent, the all-containing, in whose womb move all the orbs of heaven, the omnipotent, the self-effulgent, from whom the sun and stars borrow their light, whose knowledge is perfect and immutable, whose glory is superlative, who is deathless, the life of life and dearer than life, who gives bliss to those who earnestly desire it, and saves from all calamities his genuine devotees, and gives them peace and comfort, the all-intelligence, who keeps in order and harmony all and each by permeating all things, on whom is dependent all that exist, the creator and giver of all glory, the illuminator of all souls, and giver of every bliss, who is worthy to be embraced; the all-knowledge and all-holiness—we contemplate and worship that He may enlighten our intellect and conscience.”

From the foregoing facts it is clear that prayer to God is not only the duty of every Aryan, but is also very essential to all men whose hearts overflow with gratitude to Him for the innumerable blessings which He has bestowed, and which He is always bestowing, on mankind, and on the universe in general.

(From the Hindoo Tract Society's English Tract No. 5.)

DECADENCE OF THE BRAHMO SOMAJ.

The Liberal, the organ of the Brahmo Somaj, thus deploras the decadence of morality among its followers:—There was a period in the history of the Brahmo Somaj when its members possessed a high reputation for the strict observance of moral laws. If a promise was given to pay a certain sum of money on a certain date, no trouble or care was spared to fulfil the promise. If money was received for one branch of our movement, it was spent scrupulously for that object only. If it was necessary to publish the narrative of an incident in the papers, every care was taken to see that the statements made agreed in all their details with facts. Even in the petty details of domestic life this strictness was observed to a degree almost puritanic. If at the time of taking his meals a man had said that he would eat no more, no amount of solicitation could induce him to take a cake or a handful of rice after that. If a public meeting had to be attended, the greatest amount of care was taken to be present at it at the exact hour. It is evident that his spirit has much declined among us of late. We do not mean that there is actual immorality of a gross nature. But our men have ceased to take that amount of care in observing these details of moral law which characterised their conduct at one time. Various causes have brought about this sad state of things—among which two seem to be most prominent. One is want, and another the growth of controversies among us, since some years past pecuniary want in the various departments of our work has been severely felt. Those with whom the administration of our funds rest are sometimes harassed and troubled to a great extent. They often fail to keep up their promises, and are now and then tempted to give Peter's dues to Paul. Of course, there could be no moral excuse for such conduct. It is the duty of every one to cut his coat according to his cloth. And when this is not done, confusion and trouble are sure to follow. The result of this chronic deficit is that our managers have contracted a habit of looseness in regard to their pecuniary dealings; and this habit is, we regret to find, becoming every day a second nature with them. The second point reflects very much on your love of truth. When it is easy to speak the truth, even the confirmed liar will not think it worth his while to take the trouble of clothing it with a coat of falsehood. But when truth costs the speaker some amount of trouble, humiliation or loss of position, he is tempted to present it in a somewhat altered form. Something may be suppressed in a long narrative which will give it a colour not its own. The events themselves may be stated in a manner as would mislead men and lead them to wrong conclusions. To maintain one's position and dignity, religious or secular, it may be necessary to keep up false appearances. All these and many things else characterise the dealings of our men whenever they become entangled into the meshes of a controversy. The sight presented on such occasions is one of great pity. There can be no way out of it but a firm determination to abide by the truth, cost what it may. But weak humanity is seldom able to do so, and our men have proved themselves in no way superior to this common weakness. What we regret the most is, that even the best of our men are unable to show an example, worthy of their sacred trust and calling, in matters like this. It is to them that the mass of believers look up for examples of right conduct, perseverance, honesty, and strict truthfulness. If they fail in these there is very little ground to complain of the behaviour of the generality of our men, whose culture and religious advancement must be comparatively limited. What ever it may be, it is necessary that our attention should be directed towards this decline. We have now got a faith, a religion, which presents to us the greatest facilities for our growth and advancement—moral as well as spiritual. If we neglect the opportunity and use not the means at our disposal to the fullest extent, we shall be held responsible both before God and man. We should be glad, therefore, to see the old days of moral rigour revived among us again.

THE WAGES OF SIN.—The Deccan Times says:—“A young woman of the Telegu breed was on Sunday afternoon made to pay the penalty of her wickedness. She was married to a labourer, but forsook him for another man whom she swore to love and obey in preference to her quondam husband. The deserted man naturally planned a way for revenge, and succeeded in formulating it. He caught the girl, shaved her head, and mounting her astride on a donkey, paraded her through the highways of Secunderabad. A long train of delighted Natives followed the donkey and its burden, and hissed and screamed as the procession proceeded. To the untutored European mind the sight was strange and yet amusing.”

INDIAN immigrants into British Guiana continue to do very well, but here, as in so many other quarters of the globe, there is some indication that the Chinese are pushing their way to the detriment of other labourers. For example, though the balance lying at the credit of East Indians in the Government Savings Bank at the close of 1888 amounted to the handsome sum of £90,000, this was nevertheless £8,000 less than the balance of the year preceding, and there were 1,433 less depositors. On the other hand, among the Chinese, there was an increase of eleven depositors and of £179 in the amount of their deposits. This, too, though some 2,900 fresh immigrants from India have arrived in the colony during the year.

The building of the Colvin Ward's institute at Lucknow is being supervised by Public Works officers. The Local Government has made a concession to the committee of the Institute by reducing the cost of supervision by 10 per cent.

MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

THE 9th Bombay Infantry has again been honoured in the selection as a representative team from the Bombay Presidency to compete at the Southern India Rifle Association meeting at Bangalore, in September next.

THE designation "Bombay Presidency Rifle Meeting" has, with the approval of Government, been changed to "The Bombay Presidency Rifle Association." The first meeting under the new title will take place at Poona between the 24th and 29th November, when the selected shots from corps serving in this Presidency will meet at Poona to compete for the championship and other prizes and medals. For the selection of the best shots local rifle meetings will be held throughout the Presidency on any days between the 1st September and 15th November, when troop and company team matches will also be decided. Formerly the Government brought to Poona, free of expense, two men per company, troop and battery, to compete at the Central Rifle Meeting, as it was then, and will now be, designated. Now only crack shots will be allowed to journey at the public expense. The Government of Bombay have allotted a sum of Rs. 5,429 for expenditure on account of the local rifle meetings to be held this year.

For many years past it has been the practice not to recover messing stoppages from honorary commissioned or warrant officers when proceeding to England or the colonies on retirement. There was no reason whatever why they should be allowed exemption from a stoppage that every other officer was liable to. It will therefore not surprise anyone to hear that an order has now been issued for the recovery of messing charges under Army Regulations, India, Volume X., Part I., paragraphs 546 and 548, when they are provided with free passage or granted passage money.

SURGEON DAWSON, I.M.S., has reported his arrival at Allahabad, and has taken medical charge of the 2nd Bengal Cavalry, relieving Surgeon-Major Young, who has proceeded to Roorkee to take permanent medical charge of the Bengal Sappers and Miners.

MAJOR-GENERAL ANDERSON, Commanding Kamptee District, is likely to proceed home shortly on medical certificate.

MAJOR H. P. LEACH, R.E., Bengal, has been selected to command the Bombay Sappers and Miners.

THERE is no truth in the reports current for some time past of an intention on the part of Government to raise another regiment of cavalry for the Punjab Frontier Force.

It is now under consideration to have a Camp of Exercise near Nowshera, or more probably between Nowshera and Attock, at which troops of the Rawal Pindi and Peshawur districts, with those of the Punjab Frontier Force, will be exercised. The force will probably consist of about 20,000 men.

The following are declared by the Civil Service Commissioners to have obtained the first forty-five places in the recent open competitive examination for the Civil Service of India, but their selection is conditional on their passing a medical examination, which will be held in London in the course of a few days:—

For Brindisi : Mr. A. Elliott, Lieut. C. D. Hodgson, Rev. G. W. Barry, Col. C. H. Plowden, Mr. J. M. Wrench, Mr. W. B. Wright, Mr. W. F. Wells, Mr. J. G. Allsop, Mr. Moola Feroz, Mr. Sharp, Mr. J. F. Baines, Major A. E. Duthy, Col. M. J. Sunderland, Capt. Orr, Brig.-Surg. R. Gray, Lieut. L. Lupey, Capt. A. Pakenham, Mr. C. A. Beyta, Mr. and Mrs. McNair.

In the beautiful Indian museum of Lord Brassey's house in Park-lane a meeting was held on Monday in support of the Marchioness of Dufferin's Fund for Supplying Female Medical Aid to the Women of India. Sir Mountstuart Grant Duff was in the chair, and a most satisfactory statement, prepared by the hon. secretary, Colonel John Robertson, was presented. The adoption of the report was proposed by Lord Reay, and seconded by Lieutenant-Colonel Harry Cooper, both of whom pointed out in vigorous terms how beneficial the undertaking had been to Her Majesty's female subjects in Hindostan, and how warmly and gratefully it was received by all classes and castes. Colonel Cooper called for that sympathetic support from England which he was sure would be forthcoming, and he also stated that Mr. Bradlaugh was wrong in his estimate of the Maharajah of Cashmere's donation. His Highness had given half a lakh of rupees, not twenty lakhs. Among those present were Lady Duff, Sir Charles Aitchison, Sir Charles Bernard, Lady Lumsden, Sir Lepel Griffin, Sir Walter De Souza, Lady Barclay, Louise Lady Goldsmid, Surgeon-General Gordon, General E. T. and Mrs. Chapman, and Major and Mrs. Broadbent. The report was adopted unanimously, and it was generally allowed that every effort should be made to strengthen the working of Lady Dufferin's valuable scheme.

THE CALCUTTA REVIEW.(The only Quarterly Review in India.)

ESTABLISHED 1844.

OPINIONS.

The Calcutta Review for October reached us a day or two ago, and a glance at its contents shows that the number more than sustains the reputation which this old and favourite publication is again achieving. The Review is rapidly regaining the position which it . . . there is no fear of the Indian Review, or the Asiatic Quarterly rivalling it in public favour.—Statesman, October 1886.

The best service which I ever rendered in India, or, indeed, for India, was the establishment, single-handed, of the Calcutta Review, which has done far more for Indian literature than anything I have written under my own name.—J. W. KAYE, Athenæum Club, June 23, 1872.

The Calcutta Review has given us valuable articles on the army. Some from the pen of Sir Henry Lawrence, who wrote with the spirit of prophecy of the coming storm of which he was one of the noblest victims.—Address of the C-in-C. at the U.S. Inst. of India.

The Calcutta Review has not only throughout its career reflected the highest honour on its public-spirited promoters and its well-known distinguished contributors, but has done much to help forward the reconstruction of our system of governing India.—Westminster Review.

EVERY SATURDAY. PRICE SIXPENCE.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" has acquired a reputation for early and exclusive intelligence as to Appointments and other service News, for the high character of its articles, the independent course of its staff of writers, and for its earnest support of all measures for the good of the Services. Articles on specially interesting subjects appear from week to week written for the most part by officers of rank and experience, or by men of note in literature who have made the Naval and Military affairs of the country their special study. A series of Illustrated Articles is appearing weekly on Regimental Badges and History. Illustrations with descriptions are also given of new Service Inventions.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" freely opens its correspondence columns to all grades in the Services. By this means an opportunity for interchange of opinion is afforded, such as is offered by no other Service Journal. Its ordinary weekly issue contains fully one-fourth more matter than the other Service Journals, even with their frequent "supplements."

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" circulates largely throughout India and the Colonies. It is supplied direct to the Army and Marine bureaux of the French, Russian, and other Governments, and it is read extensively by Officers of Foreign Services, especially of the German, French, and American Armies, who desire to acquire a true impression of facts and public opinion in England regarding Military affairs.

FOR COUGHS, COLDS, ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS. DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE (late Army Medical Staff) DISCOVERED A REMEDY to denote which he coined the word CHLORODYNE. Dr. Browne is the SOLE INVENTOR, and, as the composition of Chlorodyne cannot possibly be discovered by Analysis (organic substances being eliminated), and since the formula has never been published, it is evident that any statement to the effect that a compound is identical with Dr. Browne's Chlorodyne must be false. This Caution is necessary, as many persons deceive purchasers by false representations.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.—Vice-Chancellor Sir W. PAGE WOOD stated publicly in Court that Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE was UNDOUBTEDLY the INVENTOR of CHLORODYNE, that the whole story of the defendant Freeman was deliberately untrue, and he regretted to say it had been sworn to.—See The Times, July 15th, 1884.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is the TRUE PALLIATIVE in NEURALGIA, GOUT, CANCER, TOOTHACHE, RHEUMATISM,

DIARRHŒA, DYSENTERY, GENERAL BOARD OF HEALTH, LONDON, REPORT that it ACTS as a CHARM, one dose generally sufficient. DR. GIBSON, Army Medical Staff, Calcutta, states: "DOSES COMPLETELY CURED ME OF DIARRHŒA."

From SYMES & Co., Pharmaceutical Chemists, Simla. Jan. 5, 1890.

To J. T. DAVENPORT, London.

DEAR SIR.—We congratulate you upon the widespread reputation this justly-esteemed medicine has earned for itself all over the East. As a remedy of general utility, we much question whether a better is imported, and we shall be glad to hear of its finding a place in every Anglo-Indian home. The other brands, we are happy to say, are now relegated to the native bazaars, and, judging from their sale, we fancy their sojourn there will be but evanescent. We could multiply instances ad infinitum of the extraordinary efficacy of DR. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE in Diarrhœa and Dysentery, Spasms, Cramps, Neuralgia, the Vomiting of Pregnancy, and as a general sedative, that have occurred under our personal observation during many years. In Choleraic Diarrhœa, and even in the more terrible forms of Cholera itself, we have witnessed its surprisingly controlling power. We have never used any other form of this medicine than Collis Browne's, from a firm conviction that it is decidedly the best, and also from a sense of duty we owe to the profession and the public, as we are of opinion that the substitution of any other than Collis Browne's is a deliberate breach of faith on the part of the chemist to prescriber and patient alike.—We are, Sir, faithfully yours, SYMES & CO., Members of the Pharm. Society of Great Britain, Lic. Excellency the Viceroy's Chemists.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is a liquid medicine which assuages PAIN of EVERY KIND affords a calm, refreshing sleep WITHOUT HEADACHE, and INVIGORATES the nervous system when exhausted.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE rapidly cuts short all attacks of EPILEPSY, SPASMS, COLIC, PALPITATION, Hysteria.

IMPORTANT CAUTION.—The IMMENSE SALE of this REMEDY has given rise to many UNSCRUPULOUS IMITATIONS. Be careful to observe Trade Mark. Of all Chemists, 1s. 1ld., 2s. 9d., and 4s. 6d.

LIGHT versus DARKNESS.

"SHAKESPEARE, the Greatest Genius who has ever yet lived," taught the Divineness of Forgiveness, of Perpetual Mercy, of Constant Patience, of Endless Peace, of Perpetual Gentleness. If you can show me one who knew things better than this man, show him!! I know him not!! If he had appeared as a Divine, they would have Burned him; as a Politician, they would have Beheaded him; but God made him a Player.

"He taught that kindness is nobler than Revenge!!"—The Rev. GEORGE DAWSON, M.A.

"Earthly power doth then show likest God's
When mercy seasons justice,
And that same prayer doth teach us all to render
The Deeds of Mercy."—Shakespeare.

What higher aim can man attain, than conquest over human pain?

JEOPARDY OF LIFE, THE GREAT DANGER OF DELAY.

You can change the Trickling Stream, but not the Raging Torrent.

WHAT EVERYBODY SHOULD READ.—How important it is to have at hand some simple, effective, and palatable remedy, such as ENO'S "FRUIT SALT," to check disease at the onset!! With little trouble you can change the course of the trickling mountain stream, but not the rolling river. It will defy all your tiny efforts. I feel I cannot sufficiently impress this important information upon everybody. Let ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" be your companion; under any circumstances its use is beneficial, and never can do harm. When out of sorts, Restless, Sleepless, yet unable to say why, then your whole body is out of order, but you do not know where it may end; it is a real necessity to have a simple remedy at hand. The Pilot can so steer and direct as to bring the ship into safety, but he cannot quell the raging storm. The common idea when not feeling well is: "I will wait and see; perhaps I shall be better to-morrow;" whereas, had a supply of ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" been at hand, and use made of it at the onset, all calamitous results might have been avoided. What dashes to the earth so many hopes, breaks so many sweet alliances, blasts so many auspicious enterprises, as untimely Death?

"I used my 'FRUIT SALT' freely in my last severe attack of Fever, and I have every reason to say I believe it saved my life."

J. C. ENO.

CAUTION.—Examine each Bottle, and see that the Capsule is marked ENO'S "FRUIT SALT." Without it you have been imposed on by a worthless imitation.

SOLD BY ALL CHEMISTS. PREPARED ONLY AT

ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" WORKS POMEROY STREET, NEW CROSS ROAD, LONDON, S.E. (BY J. ENO'S PATENT.)

NATURE RULES ALL THINGS.

In every form of weakness use Scalded Milk.

ENO'S "VEGETABLE MOTO," occasionally a desirable adjunct to ENO'S "FRUIT SALT," as a simple and Natural Laxative, Stomachic, Blood, Brain, Nerve, Bile, or Liver Tonic; or, in other words, when taken as directed, their action is as simple as a tomato, whole meal bread or porridge (with scalded milk); you cannot overstate their great value in causing a natural, slow, and gentle action of the Liver; by that means you keep the blood pure and prevent disease. In advanced life they are everything you could wish. Read Practical Hints on Constipation, Indigestion, Liver Diseases, Impure Blood, Sleeplessness, Nervous Headache, Treatment of Gout and Rheumatism, how to Prevent Consumption, Jaundice, and other disastrous diseases by Rules for Health and Longevity, &c., in a pamphlet given with each Bottle of ENO'S "VEGETABLE MOTO." They can be used for any length of time without fear or harm.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

WEDNESDAY JULY 23, 1890.

General Intelligence.

[BY OVERLAND MAIL.]

THE Overland Mail brings us letters and advices from Bombay to the 4th July; from Allahabad and Madras to the 2nd July; and from Calcutta to the 1st July.

LADY LANSDOWNE was to leave Bombay by the steamer of July 18th on a short visit to England, accompanied by Lady Maud Anson. Her Excellency will return in the autumn with Lady Evelyn Fitzmaurice.

THE VICEROY, after Lady Lansdowne's departure, was to take a trip into the interior. He had decided to go to Pangri, seventeen miles beyond Chini. The party would travel hard, doing the march out, some fifteen stages, in eight days.

LORD LANSDOWNE's cold weather tour has not yet been definitely settled, but it is likely that his Excellency will make a tour through Rajputana, starting from Agra about the end of October.

REGARDING Sir Auckland Colvin's cold weather tour, it is likely that he will be in camp in the Agra District to the end of January, and will then spend February and March in Allahabad.

CAPTAIN PAKENHAM, A.D.C., who has been invalided for a couple of months past, accompanies Lady Lansdowne home.

LORD HARRIS has made his first century on an Indian cricket ground. Playing for Kirkoe against Poona he scored 37 and 106 not out, his second innings being a brilliant one.

LADY ROBERTS leaves in India in October next for a six months' visit to England.

SIR ROBERT SANDEMAN was to pay a visit to Simla, arriving about July 15.

THE Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal begins his monsoon tour at Hooghly, where he was timed to arrive from Darjeeling on the 21st instant. Thence he will visit Krishnaghur, Berhampur and Maldah, and then steam up the Ganges in the Rhotas. Ghazipur will be reached on Aug. 23rd, and Sir Steuart Bayley will halt there for three days. He will then go through Behar, staying at Mozufferpore from September 6th to 9th, at Durbhunga from the 16th to 18th, and at Rungpore from the 22nd to 24th, reaching Darjeeling finally on the 25th.

It is now definitely settled that Mr. J. R. Reid, C.I.E., will return to India in November and take up his appointment as Junior Member of the Board of Revenue in these Provinces, to which he was gazetted some months ago.

SIR GEORGE GREAVES and staff have arrived at Poona from Panchgani.

THE Provincial Police Committee are sitting three times a week at Naini Tal. A series of questions to be put to witnesses who may hereafter be called is being arranged, and some of the members will probably begin taking evidence in the plains early in August.

COLONEL CONWAY GORDON starts for England at the beginning of August, Major Sargeant arriving at Simla a few days previously to take over charge of the Director-Generalship of Railways.

MR. JAMES GROSE, of the Madras Board of Revenue, acts as a member of Lord Connemara's Council during the absence of Mr. Stokes, who has been invalided to England.

CAPTAIN J. C. TYLER, R.E., is to be temporarily attached to the Agency at Gilgit for the sake of making a professional inspection of the defensive positions in that quarter.

MR. MATHEW, senior Deputy Manager on the North-Western Railway, officiates as Manager during Colonel Wallace's absence on privilege leave.

LIEUTENANT HOWARD, of the Norfolk Regiment, who was badly mauled by a tiger a few days ago at Malapuram, has since died. The deceased officer had less than two years' service.

MR. A. J. HUGHES, Sanitary Engineer to the Government of these Provinces, has returned to the plains from Naini Tal, and intends visiting the towns in which schemes for waterworks and drainage are now under consideration.

THE Camp Office of the Surveyor-General has closed at Simla and returned to Calcutta, Colonel Thuillier proceeding on a tour of inspection of field parties.

THE question of accommodation in the Public Offices at Simla has been referred for investigation to a committee under the presidency of Sir Charles Elliott.

THE GAEKWAR OF BARODA has become a life member of the Bombay Art Society.

THE prospects of the crops in Kumaon are now extremely favourable, the rainfall having been ample and well distributed.

HAFIZ SHEIKH ABDUL KARIM, Khan Bahadur, C.I.E., of Meerut, and his son, Sheikh Wahidudin, have respectively subscribed 1,000 rupees and 500 rupees to the funds of the Ramsay Hospital at Naini Tal. These are only the latest proofs of the generosity and benevolence of these gentlemen.

PREPARATORY to the assembling of the Agricultural Conference in Simla in October the local Governments are being consulted by the Government of India on the question of the present position of the Departments of Land Records and Agriculture, and the work done by them.

COLONEL SAUNDERSON succeeds Colonel Clementi as Judge Advocate General in India.

TWO HUNDRED recruits for the Military Police in East Africa have sailed under Lieut. Budd, Bombay Staff Corps, for Mombassa.

THE French Government, it is stated, has abandoned the idea of causing French subjects resident at Chandernagore to comply with the French Conscription Act and serve in the army.

CAPTAIN CORKERY, of the s.s. Suez, has had his certificate suspended for six months for allowing his vessel to run aground on a coral reef, off the Maldivé Islands, on May 28th last. The first officer's certificate was suspended for three months.

THIRTEEN AND A-HALF LAKHS will be required for the new water supply scheme at Simla.

MR. SCOTT, one of the Deccan Brewery Company, fell into one of the vats on the 25th ult. Life was extinct when the body was recovered.

VETERINARY-SURGEON P. W. DUNDON was drowned at Lucknow on the 27th ult.

NEWS has been received of the death by drowning of Lieutenant P. A. Boileau, 2nd Gurkhas, in the Koladyne River, Lushailand.

AN application has been made by the United Kingdom Branch of the Countess of Dufferin Fund to the P. and O. and British India Steam Navigation Companies that a concession may be made in the rates of passage of lady doctors of the association proceeding in their vessels to and from India.

NOTES.

News from India still quiet and uneventful. The latest telegrams to the Times will be found in another column. The Daily News correspondent at Calcutta telegraphs from there last night as follows:—"A crowded meeting was held here at the Town Hall yesterday to welcome Mr. Banerjee. The assembly was chiefly composed of students, and but very few prominent natives were present. The speakers earnestly appealed for funds on behalf of the Congress campaign. Various opinions are expressed by the native papers regarding Lord Cross's Bill. The Congress party would rejoice to see it collapse, while many natives consider it embodies valuable concessions, and hope that it will pass. Moderate men, both Europeans and natives, would welcome a tentative scheme of election through the existing public bodies."

THE Pioneer says that the statement that the Siamese Boundary Commission is to go back to the Shan-Siam frontier next cold weather to resume its operations hardly merits contradiction, inasmuch as there is nothing left for it to do. The delimitation was completed last session, and the only thing remaining is that the line laid down by the British Commissioner should be formally recognised as the boundary between the two States—a matter that now rests with the Secretary of State for India. The assent of the Siam Government may be said to be wanting to this arrangement; but this will probably be taken for "granted."

THE annual return of British troops in the Bengal Presidency quartered in the hills shows that this year upwards of 14,000 men have been sent to Himalayan stations. The bulk of the men belong, of course, to the infantry, over one-third of the total strength of 32,000 being absent from the plains during the hot weather. It is satisfactory to learn that there is every intention to increase the number of soldiers in the hills as soon as further accommodation can be provided. The troops in the North-West Provinces will be moved in greater numbers to Chakrata when this is done, and the opening of the railway to Kalka will enable another regiment to be quartered in the vicinity of Simla if a suitable site can be found for new quarters.

THE Times of India understands that the somewhat sensational charges against the Commissariat Department with regard to the food stored at Kan for the Chin-Lushai Expedition turn out on investigation to be wholly without foundation. It was alleged, it will be remembered, that half the tinned biscuits supplied were rotten, that the gram for the transport animals was unfit for use, and that, generally, the responsible authorities had been guilty of the grossest negligence. The Commissary-General (General Badcock), after a most careful and searching inquiry, pronounces the story a series of fabrications, the very slight basis of truth on which some part of it was founded being ridiculously exaggerated. The supplies had to be transported a long distance over a route offering manifold difficulties, and the means of transport were mostly mules, elephants, and pack-bullocks. Only a very small proportion of the food had to be condemned, and it was regarded as surprising that larger quantities were not damaged, seeing the difficulties in the way of transit, the fording or swimming of numerous rivers and the penetration of nearly impassable roads, &c. The exact proportion of condemnations, we believe, is as follows:—Biscuits 22 per cent., gram 12½ per cent., and tinned meal 14½ per cent.

THE Pioneer, taking the same view as this journal on the vexed question of the Presidency commands, says:—"We should be glad to think Lord Cross's statement that the question of the abolition of the Presidency commands is still under the consideration of the Government means that he has changed his mind since his despatch of last year, when he distinctly declined to bring forward the legislative measures necessary for the reform. But if, at the same time, he pronounced the opinion that it would be "unwise to experiment with the Indian army and keep it in a state of flux" there cannot be much hope of any action being taken. This is the more to be regretted as the last Blue-book shows that the Government of India have done all in their power to meet most of the sentimental objections which have been raised in the Bombay and Madras armies. If the change were carried out the title of "Commander-in-Chief" would certainly go by the board; but the Lieutenant-Generals succeeding them would still retain their seats in the Presidency Councils. Moreover, they would "come into direct command of the whole of their respective armies, of which at present a part is drawn from their control," and the localisation of authority would be greater than it now is. The word "centralisation" may have frightened some of those who have only studied the question superficially; but the draft Order drawn up last year proves that unity of general administration of the Army in India is alone desired, and this is in no way incompatible with the maintenance of the authority of the local commanders. The Parliamentary legislation, it may be added, which would be required to effect the change, would not be at all formidable, as it would be quite sufficient for some time to come merely to amend the Army Act of 1881 and the Regimental Debts Act.

A SMALL matter which is to engage the attention of the Legislature during the present Session is the amendment of the Indian Christian Marriage Act.

MR. LEMESURIER, of the Ceylon Civil Service, writes from Nuwara Eliya:—"You will be glad to hear that the original lot of trout are now breeding in the rivers. Mr. Charles Young and I caught a little one about half-an-inch longer at the mouth of the river leading into the lake about a fortnight ago. The odd thing is that those in the breeding pond, with one exception, have not yet spawned, although the females have been in spawn now for at least eight months. They seem to be waiting to adapt themselves to the altered conditions of this climate."

THE Bengal National Chamber of Commerce have submitted a memorial to the Viceroy against the income-tax. They represent that the financial pressure, which led to the imposition of the tax, has been removed, and urge that if the tax is maintained the tendency towards wasteful expenditure is not likely to disappear. The memorialists say they represent the Indian mercantile community, and they know that the grievances of the Indian merchants of Calcutta from the operation of the Income Tax Act, and from the mode of its working, are very real. The assessments are unduly severe, arbitrary and unequal.

THE ELECTRICAL PLANT OF INDIA.—There has been discovered in the forests of India a strange plant, which possesses to a very high degree astonishing magnetic power. The hand which breaks a leaf from it immediately receives a shock equal to that produced by the conductor of an induction coil. At a distance of 19 feet a magnetic needle is affected by it, and it will be quite deranged if brought near. The energy of this singular influence varies with the hour of the day. It is all-powerful about two o'clock in the afternoon, but is ineffective during the night. At times of storm its intensity arguments to striking proportions. During rain the plant seems to succumb, and it bends its head during a thunder shower; it remains there without force or virtue, even if one should shelter it with an umbrella. No shock is felt at that time in breaking the leaves, and the needle is unaffected beside it. Our informant states that one never by any chance sees a bird or insect alight on the electric plant; an instinct seems to warn them that they would find sudden death. It is also important to remark that, where it grows, none of the magnetic metals are found, neither iron, nor cobalt, nor nickel, an undeniable proof that the electric force belongs exclusively to the plant.—Iron.

CALCUTTA, JULY 20.

The Bengal Provincial Railway Company, the first purely Native Railway Company yet organised, is about to construct a narrow-gauge line, thirty miles in length, from Tarkessur to Tribeni Ghat, as a feeder to the East Indian Railway. Several leading Natives have joined the board of directors.

A draft Bill, to make better provision for village sanitation in the North-West Provinces, is being circulated among district officers for criticism. It is proposed to empower a district magistrate to issue an order placing any unhealthy village under the Act, and appointing a board of householders to carry out sanitary measures.

The Congress Committee has called a public meeting for to-morrow evening for the purpose of welcoming Surendro Nath Banerji on his return from England.

BURMA.

RANGOON, JULY 19.

A gang of armed dacoits attacked Yuathit, a village in the Bhamo district, burning six houses, and looting property worth 3,000 rupees. The dacoits were promptly pursued by a party of military police and overtaken fifteen miles from the scene of the outrage. Two dacoits were killed, one was wounded, and one taken prisoner. Six guns were captured and the stolen property recovered.

In the district immediately surrounding Mandalay severe scarcity is anticipated owing to deficient rainfall.

If no military success has been achieved by the Chin Field Force much interesting information has been collected relative to the numerous tribes inhabiting the Chin Mountains. Besides the Chins themselves they comprise Yindus, Chinbons, Welchungs, and Chinboks. Nearly every tribe speaks a different dialect. From notes made by Lieut. Rainey, commanding the Chin Frontier Levy, and published by Government, it appears that some of these tribes are almost as barbarous and ignorant as the savages of Central Africa. They wear scarcely any clothes, and the historical fig-leaf accurately represents the full dress of some of the villagers. Their dwellings have no furniture; they have no laws, no religion, and no Government, except an incomplete village system. Medical science and surgery are absolutely unknown. Their habits are repulsively filthy. Certain tribes are confirmed drunkards, consuming great quantities of beer brewed by themselves. They, however, display remarkable mechanical ingenuity, constructing wonderful bridges on the cantilever principle. In some tribes the sole arms are small knives and bows and arrows. They are skilful archers, killing tigers and bears at eighty yards. The women of all the tribes have their faces hideously tattooed to prevent their being carried off by the Burmans.

INDIAN WOMEN SOLD AS SLAVES.

(FROM "DAILY NEWS" CORRESPONDENT.)

CALCUTTA, SUNDAY.

Four Jats have been sentenced at Lahore to terms of imprisonment of from seven to eleven years for decoying women. Their object was to sell them as slaves in Scinde. Recent inquiries show that 500 Punjab women have been sold as slaves into the service of Scinde Zemindars.

CHILD MARRIAGE IN INDIA.

CALCUTTA, SUNDAY.

The recent child-wife tragedy has aroused a strong feeling in favour of an amendment of the law. The Madras Hindoo Marriage Association has resolved to petition the Government to raise the age of consent to fourteen years.

MR. COLQUHOUN'S CASE.—The Rangoon Times says:—"We think there will be few, if any, people in Burma who will disagree with the finding of the Government of India and Secretary of State in Mr. Colquhoun's case. So anxious was Lord Randolph Churchill, the then Secretary of State, to have the Times on the side of annexation, and a supporter of Government policy generally, that he went out of his way to reverse by telegram General Prendergast's order with regard to the removal of the Times' correspondent from Mandalay, and Mr. Moylan then became a power in the land. Knowing that Mr. Colquhoun was connected with the Times there was no necessity to appoint him to the Burma Commission, and yet he was appointed to please that journal."

ANGLO-INDIAN PRESS.

SOME VERY RAPID FIRING!

(ON A LONG-BOW RANGE.)

(Civil and Military Gazette.)

[A correspondent, "W. W.," writes from Quetta in the Civil and Military Gazette of the 16th inst.:—"I have seen six fairly accurate volleys fired in one second," &c.]

What ho! my Military Muse. Arouse, unfold the wing!
And lend me a long feather to record a wondrous thing—
The splendid volley shooting that has recently been made
By a section of the W. (reduplicate) Brigade.

Sing ho! for the W. Brigade!
Supernatural for the quickness they display'd!
Six volleys to the second,
It will readily be reckon'd,
Puts all hitherto experience in the shade.

Gustavus A. or Frederick, were you but here to see
Three hundred volleys blazing in the time you fired three,
You would feel but very sorry, little soldiers, I'm afraid,
When you saw the expedition of the W. Brigade.

Then hurrah! for this military feat!
'Tis a record that is difficult to beat.
Three sixty to the minute—
Why, a Gatling isn't in it,
And a Hotchkiss wouldn't venture to compete.

If a soldier of this famous squad fire 20,000 rounds
An hour, and scatter lead in weight—say, 1,300 lbs., Then a regiment would distribute from the muzzles of their guns

In an afternoon a matter of 200,000 tons!

My veracity has seldom stood the test
Of cross-examination by a Guest;
But this volley-firing letter
From insanitary Quetta
Recalls a German Baron at his best.

In England some toxophilites will still lament the day
When archery as a pastime from our Island pass'd away,
But in Quetta's smiling valley, where the rattling volleys roar,
They draw the merry long-bow still as deftly as of yore.

I laugh now as I scrutinise the text,
But at first I must admit I was perplex'd;
So really double W.
I seriously will trouble you
To draw it rather milder in your next.

LATKIA.

HOME CRITICS ON CEYLON TEAS.

(Ceylon Observer.)

It may be relied upon, we think, that, as a general rule, the verdict of the public is the most satisfactory test of the quality of any article of food consumption. If that reliance may be accepted, we may say that our teas have stood this test, for they have received the warranty of public taste. It is, however, constantly the case that papers published at home offer to their readers comments upon the method of their manufacture which would seem to imply that there yet remains much room for improvement in that method. We are not at all disposed to offer objection to this. In the first place, whether what is advanced is or is not to be justified, there can be no doubt that the articles written bring our production well before the public, and so constitute for our teas a valuable advertisement. In the second, if there be truth in the old proverb that "in the multitude of councillors there is wisdom," we are afforded by them an opportunity of discriminating for ourselves amid such diverse advice.

Nevertheless we must bear well in mind the character of the sources from which many of the comments referred to emanate. What may be termed trade journals are, we think, not unfrequently biassed by the interests—or the supposed interests—of their chief readers, the retailers of tea. Among these there must be many who are influenced by a variety of causes in promoting the sale of some particular kind of tea. One such dealer, we will assume, has a large constituency among whom he has hitherto distributed chiefly the teas of China growth. Another may be so influenced mainly to support Indian teas. Such men have probably resorted to long-established agencies for their purchases, and have secured by their long custom exceptionally favorable terms. They will have no pressing desire, therefore, to force the introduction of a new growth which, if successful, must disturb the even course of their trading arrangements. For men so situated the Trade Journals must purvey sympathetic matter, and for the reasons we may, perhaps, believe that much that appears in the columns of such papers may be the result of a concealed bias. The arguments that we have thus applied in the case of the retail dealers are not wholly inapplicable to a higher grade of the distributing agencies. Among the brokers of London there are firms who, equally with the retail grocer, have long made a speciality of certain teas. When firms coming within such a category issue their circulars, they are just as likely to have their advice tainted by preconception as are the grocers in their dealings with their old-established customers. Of course we would except from brokers liable to such an influence many well-known firms whose advice may always be accepted with confidence, and whose comments should command our fullest attention. But even when such exceptions are made there remains a residuum of the often-repeated complaints which should, we think, always be accepted with reserve.

But whether this caution may or may not be justified, one fact is certain, and that is, that the constant and very often contradictory advice given is very perplexing to our planters. A very well-known firm of high standing has once more made public a statement that Ceylon teas are as a rule over-fired, and that statement has formal support by one of the trade journals to which we have referred. Our tea planting industry is by no means a thing of to-day, and its production has stood the test of a good many years. The result of that test has been to secure the suffrage of an enormous number of tea drinkers throughout the world. If we are to accept the counsel now tendered to us and alter our methods of preparation, it is certain we shall still retain that suffrage which has been accorded upon the experience of our present methods! We do not say that we feel confident that no better method is open to us; but for the reasons we have above stated we would advise caution in placing implicit confidence in the soundness of the counsel which is so constantly given to us by the distributing agencies at home.

INDUSTRIAL REVIVAL IN INDIA.

(Pioneer.)

The speech which the Hon. G. Ranade recently made at the Industrial Conference at Poona is one of the most practical and sagacious ever delivered by a Native of this country on the present economic situation. If we scan the copious oratory of the Congress we find abundant complaints about the poverty of the people; but we look in vain for evidence of a true perception of the cause, or for practical suggestions for a remedy. Were we to judge by the importance attached to it in the programme of the soi-disant reformer we should say that a vote was the one thing needful, the panacea for the most grievous ills under which India suffers; but if we ask in what respect advantage is to accrue we are answered only in vague generalities about the ennobling and inspiring effect of enfranchisement on the human mind. Nor could it be otherwise. Suppose votes given and elective councils constituted, where would be the gain so far as the economic condition of the masses of the people is concerned? A few clever rhetoricians would be raised to a prominence they would never otherwise have attained, but we should be as far as ever from a redress of the inequality between the agricultural and industrial interests of the country—the hinge on which the whole question turns—as far as ever from the discovery of new fields for the employment of capital and labour, and as far as ever from persuading the Native that his economic salvation depended on making the discovery and occupying the fields. It is because Mr. Ranade sees this, and desires to turn his countrymen from the discussion of unprofitable subjects and the pursuit of impracticable ends, that his speech at the Poona Conference marks an epoch in the history of the Native reform party. Take, for instance, the question to the so-called "tribute," of which Mr. Dadabhai Naoroji and other pessimistic writers on the effect of British rule have made so much. As long, these writers will tell us, as India has to pay a heavy tribute to England in the shape of nearly twenty crores of surplus exports, so long is she doomed and can do nothing to help herself. "This," says Mr. Ranade, "is hardly a fair or manly position to take up. A portion of the burden represents interest on moneys advanced or invested in our country, and so far from complaining, we have reason to be thankful that we have a creditor who supplies our needs at such a low rate of interest. Another portion represents the value of stores supplied to us the like of which we cannot produce here. The remainder is alleged to be more or less necessary for the purposes of defence and payment of pensions, and though there is good cause for complaint that it is not all necessary we should not forget the fact that we are enabled by reason of this British connection to levy an equivalent tribute from China by our opium monopoly." In a word, the only remedy which Mr. Naoroji and his friends propose for the accursed tribute is the constitution of elective councils and the leavening of the administration with a large Native element: but even if in this way something were saved in sterling pensions, the greatest part of the tribute would still remain. To dower the Native with a vote will not teach him how to manufacture the goods at present imported from England, nor will it enable him to raise money more cheaply for the construction of works of utility than he can at home.

IMPROVEMENTS AT QUETTA.

(Civil and Military Gazette.)

The Quetta waterworks are rapidly approaching completion as far as the cantonment supply is concerned. Cast-iron stand-posts have been received from England, and are shortly to be placed in convenient positions along the roads to enable the residents to obtain water by simply turning a stop-cock attached to the stand-post. The advantages likely to accrue to a place like Quetta, where at present only two wells exist for the general supply of water to all the residents, are incalculable, and we confidently expect to see a marked diminution in the amount of fever at that station, as was the case with Peshawar when a good water-supply was provided there. Another public work is making good progress in Quetta, viz., the new church, which is now beginning to take definite shape. A large number of stonemasons obtained from Karachi are constantly at work, preparing the oblong blocks of stone with which the pillars, &c., are to be built, the main portion of the building being of course of kiln-baked bricks. The stone is obtained from some stone quarries that exist at the foot of the range of hills to the south-east of Quetta, and about five miles from the building site.

ANILINE DYES.

(Civil and Military Gazette.)

In some notes on Indian economic products, drawn up by Dr. Watt for subsequent incorporation with his great Economic Dictionary, are to be found some facts showing the influence of the trade in aniline dyes on the indigenous industries of the country. Dr. Watt considers that these cheap colours have not only largely depraved the taste of the Indian people, but have demoralised their industries. The soft delicacy and harmony of colour which formerly characterised the Indian fabrics have, he says, to an appalling extent given place to the brilliant and staring hues of the coal-tar dyes; and coincident with this degeneration the reputation for durability, formerly enjoyed by Indian-dyed fabrics, has been all but defaced. In fact, the Indian textile industries, Dr. Watt considers, have been irreparably injured; the tinctorial secrets of the country have been lost, and a revival, he fears, is impossible. The contention is supported by trade statistics regarding dye-stuffs. In 1873-74 the exports of safflower from India were valued at over 7½ lakhs; in 1887-88 they were only Rs. 76,616. The same with lac-dye; in 1873-74 the exports were worth 4½ lakhs; in 1887-88 they were worth a trifle over Rs. 6,000. Aniline has thus destroyed the trade both in safflower and lac, and it has, moreover, affected that in cochineal and indigo. Eight or nine years ago nearly seven lakhs worth of cochineal was introduced into India, but in 1887-88 the value of the cochineal import was but Rs. 1,73,531; and as regards indigo, while in 1883-84 the exports were valued at over 4½ crores, in 1887-88 they were well under 3 crores. The conclusion deduced from the statistics by Dr. Watt is that the growth of the trade in aniline, which ten or fifteen years ago had no existence, pretty accurately corresponds to the decline in other dye-stuffs.

THE KABUL RIVER RAILWAY.

(Madras Times.)

The city of Kabul stands upon the banks of the River Kabul, which, at that place, is a comparatively small stream. The river flows eastward, on its way to the Indus, of which it is a tributary, passing through in its course the lofty mountains in which are the well-known Jagdalak and Khyber Passes. It leaves the hills of the Afghan boundary a little to the north of the entrance to the latter Pass, and then takes a course across the plains of the Indian territory, above Peshawar, falling into the River Indus at Attock. The old route through the Kyber Pass, used by the army in the first Afghan war lay part of its way along the shed and bank of the river. The new road through the Pass by way of Ali Musjid and Lundi Kotai meets the river at only one point, but the western end of the Pass is close to its right bank. For several years our scientific authorities have differed very considerably upon the possibility of constructing a line of railway along the bank of the Kabul River at a reasonable cost. Our correspondent's telegram, which we publish to day, informs us that Lieutenant MacDonald, R.E., assisted by a staff of four officers and a party from Peshawar, has, by order of the Government of India, been surveying the river, along its right bank, to determine finally the practicability of laying down the proposed line. Everything seems to have gone well until the bank of the river was reached, when the Mohmunds began firing into the British camp, keeping it up for days until pressure was brought to bear upon this hill tribe by the officers of the Ameer. The work has since been conducted without any interruption. Unless it is intended to continue the line, after a time, further to the north, to the entrance of the valleys leading from Central Asia into Kashmir, or to push the line forward from the Kabul River through the mountains into Northern Afghanistan, the advantages to be derived from the short line—less than fifty miles now being surveyed by Lieut. Macdonald—is not very apparent. The strategic railways upon the western frontier have already cost immense sums of money, more than could be spared for the railways in those days, which the income-tax is said to defray. But this it has not done. Possibly, if more expense be incurred upon frontier lines of more than doubtful utility, the present tax may be increased; it certainly does not seem likely to be abolished.

RAILWAY ADMINISTRATION IN INDIA.

(Statesman.)

A Simla correspondent who has received an advance copy of Colonel Conway-Gordon's Administration Report on Railways in India for 1889-90, says that it shows that in all fifty-six railways are now being worked, including twelve State lines worked by Companies, and seventeen State lines worked by the State. During the year 869½ miles of new lines were opened, bringing the total mileage up to 16,095½ miles. The chief sections opened were 209 miles on the Bengal-Nagpore Railway; 165 miles on the Indian-Midland Railway; and 190 miles on the Southern-Mahratta Railway. During the year sanction for the construction of additional mileage to the extent of 413 miles was given, comprising 33 miles of Military Railway on the North-Western Frontier on the standard gauge, 127 miles in British India, 150½ miles in Burma, and 39½ miles in Native States, on the metre gauge. Also 63 miles of famine lines in Madras. The total sanctioned mileage on March 31, 1890, was thus brought up to 17,748½ miles. The total expenditure, including unfinished lines, amounted on December 31, 1889, to 21,297 lakhs of rupees. In addition to this, 66 lakhs were expended on collieries and surveys. The average cost per mile of all the open lines was Rs. 1,25,039, and the gross earnings were Rs. 20,49,36,629. Of this sum 31 per cent. was earned by lines worked by Guaranteed Companies, 22 per cent. by the East Indian Railway, 14 per cent. by State lines worked by the State, and the balance of about 4 per cent. by Native States and others. The total number of passengers carried was 110,402,383, as against 103,156,013 in 1888-89. The earnings from the coaching traffic were Rs. 6,89,86,147, as against Rs. 64,350,321 in the previous year. The working expenses amounted to Rs. 10,37,74,007, or 50 per cent. of the gross earnings. The net earnings were Rs. 10,11,62,622, giving a return on the open line capital expenditure of 4.93 per cent. These figures represent only the statistical result of the working, as the actual financial results to the State for the working of Indian railways represents a net loss of Rs. 2,09,03,454, the Guaranteed Railways showing a loss of Rs. 87,84,950, and State lines leased to companies a loss of Rs. 69,81,766. The loss on the former is due to the high rate at which guaranteed interest has to be paid, and owing to the fall in exchange. It is estimated that a loss of 7 per cent. takes place in remitting money to England. The financial results of the principal lines worked by State agency have considerably improved since 1887, and despite increased traffic the working expenses have decreased. Taking the North-Western Railway, the Eastern Bengal, Oudh and Rohilkund, and Tirhoot State Railways, the net earnings have been Rs. 2,15,60,708, against Rs. 14,043,298 in 1887, and the working percentage to the gross earnings has fallen from 63 to 55 per cent. in the same period.

INDIA IN PARLIAMENT.

(Madras Mail.)

What has become of the extraordinary interest that Parliament is supposed to take in India? We believe, indeed, that Indian affairs never prosper so well as when they are withdrawn from the glare of Parliamentary contentiousness. It is not indifference so much as the consciousness of ignorance which causes Parliament to shrink from the discussion of Indian questions. Mr. Caine has discredited himself by his extravagant utterances in connection with the alleged diffusion of intemperance through official influence and semi-official zeal. It was a new and unwelcome revelation to him to learn that in the comparative youth of the world, centuries before British soldiers quaffed "fixed bayonets" as a stimulating draft, the Hindu was making merry over cups of soma-juice. It must have been a shock to such an ardent apostle of temperance to learn that the Mussulmans were the first to prohibit intoxication and inculcate the old formula that water is the best of all beverages. The charges brought by Mr.

Caine against the Indian Government brought much disrepute upon a thoroughly respectable cause. Another bore, of course, is Mr. Pease, but there is personally nothing objectionable in his mode of carrying on his annual campaign against opium. Great allowance is made in England for the Quakers. They are believed to be thoroughly sincere, however narrow-minded they may be. Besides, they are always willing to labour for their neighbours, and make any amount of self-denying sacrifices in what they regard as a just cause. They take, if we do not err, a mistaken view, with regard to the cultivation of opium in India, as though the Chinese would cease to smoke that drug altogether if they obtained no supplies from Behar or Malwa. They close their eyes to the fact that the lower classes in China are the great consumers of opium, draw their supplies not from the costly marts of India, but from their own fields, the quality being inferior, but the price more within their means. An opium debate in Parliament is a nuisance to those who are obliged to attend to make a House, but to the majority of members it means a half-holiday. But does the debate affect India? In no wise, so far as we can learn. The often-repeated speeches have been dragged to the front to do duty once more, and sometimes an article is wasted upon them in the daily Press, but the world wags on as before, the Chinese continue to smoke opium, and the House quietly acquiesces in the policy of the Indian Government on the condition that it shall not be pestered again until the ensuing Session by stale declamation.

Of Mr. Samuel Smith we have not heard anything for some time past, and considerable disappointment has been caused by Mr. J. Maclean, from whom great things were at one time expected. Not only is his frequent reticence inexplicable, but his treatment of the questions upon which he expresses an opinion is unsatisfactory. As the chief advocate of stringent factory legislation in India, in the direct interest of Lancashire, he probably earns the approval of his constituents at Oldham; but he prompts people, who remember the manner of man he was when editor of the Bombay Gazette, to regret that he has not the courage of what are probably his private opinions about the rivalry of Lancashire and India. Sir Roper Lethbridge usually acquits himself well, and is gaining influence in the House. The Anglo-Indian leader of the House is unquestionably Sir Richard Temple, who commands the respectful attention of both sides. He always speaks to the point, a little masterful, perhaps, but he has always good reasons to give for the faith that is in him. His long and varied experience stands him in good stead, nor would anyone lightly venture upon the impertinence of contradicting him. Mr. Bradlaugh is essentially an honest as well as very capable politician; and his trip to Bombay, his reception there, and his experiences since his return home are combining to confer upon him much authority in the discussion of Indian affairs. Like Mr. Childers and Sir Charles Dilke he may, notwithstanding his Radicalism as to home affairs, labour under much difficulty in deciding what had best be done to concede Liberal institutions to India without endangering the position of the British Government. He has had the moral courage to decline to give his support to the eight hours' labour movement in Europe, which he characterises as a delusion; and he will not be deterred from saying what he really thinks about the chief claims that are made by the National Congress for India.

BENGAL

(July 1.)

MESSRS. TURNER, MORRISON AND Co., the agents of the British Steam Navigation Company, have received the following telegram from their Calcutta house:—Peshava ashore ten miles south of False Point. All hands landed safely.

On the Eastern Bengal Railway, on the 22nd ult., some girders of a bridge, with the rails, were washed away close to the Daulatpore station. A passenger train was approaching at the time from Khulna, but fortunately the damage was discovered and the danger signals displayed in time to stop the train, and to prevent a serious accident. The passengers had to be transhipped across the break.

THE inquest on the body of the child-wife, who died the other day from the effects of an outrage committed by her husband, was concluded on the 23rd ult. It was stated in the course of the evidence that the deceased was eleven years and six months old. The coroner, in summing up to the jury, said that though, under the law it was not an offence for a Hindoo husband to cohabit with his wife when she was over ten years of age, the law was bound to protect such wives against ill-treatment. The jury retired to consider their verdict, and after a long absence, the foreman stated that they were divided in the proportion of six to one. The coroner decided to accept the verdict of the majority, which was that the death of Fulmoni Dassi was caused by Harri Mohun Moyti, who was thereby guilty of a rash and negligent act. The coroner bound the husband over in a security of Rs. 300 to appear for trial.

THE case against the Reis and Rayyet for defamation in certain articles, concerning the character and career of the late Babu Dina Nath Mullick, was called on on the 26th ult., when Mr. Henderson for Dr. Shambu Chunder Mukerji, the editor, admitted the publication and responsibility, and expressed his client's regret, stating that he had not been aware the articles would be likely to cause pain and annoyance to the deceased Babu's family. Mr. Garth for the prosecution, represented by the sons of the deceased, said they must have a plea of guilty. An opportunity had been given for an apology, but none was tendered before coming into court. Mr. Henderson asked for an adjournment to consult, whether a plea of guilty should be recorded or the case fought out, his Worship intimating that if the case were proceeded with he should send it to the Sessions. Ultimately the publication was formally proved, and the eldest son of Dina Nath Mullick deposed that the allegations in the articles were untrue, and had caused him and his family great pain and annoyance, and were of such a nature as to lower them in the estimation of the Hindu community. The case was then adjourned.

MADRAS.

(July 2.)

MISS ARBUTHNOT has so far improved from the effects of the recent accident that she is able to take evening drives in a phaeton.

MAJOR PERCY GOUGH, Military Secretary to the Nizam's Government, has returned to Hyderabad, with his condition much improved, but he has not altogether recovered, and is still confined to the house.

THE health of the Hon. Mr. Stokes has again broken down. He leaves Ootacamund for Europe on six months' leave. It is probable that the Hon. Mr. Grose will be appointed Provisional Member of Council.

THE proposed tour of the Prince of Arcot to Nagore has been postponed, in consequence of a telegram from the Collector of Tanjore to Colonel T. O. Underwood, the Paymaster of Carnatic Stipends, stating that cholera is prevalent in Nagore.

THE Deccan Times says:—We greatly regret to hear that Mr. Riaz-ul-Hassan, the brother of Nawab Mehdi Ali, died at Etawah, after a very short illness. He was first Taluqdar of Bhæer, and had gone to Etawah on short leave, in order to see his family, who reside there. We feel sure that every one will sympathise with the Nawab for the loss he has sustained.

A POLO tournament is to be held at Bangalore on the 23rd inst. for a cup presented by the Maharajah of Mysore. The competition will be open to teams from any recognised polo club. The entrance fee for each team is Rs. 50. All fees, after deducting the expenses, will go to the winning team, in addition to the cup.

THE Madras Congress Committee is going a-begging. The following is the latest circular, issued by the secretaries privately for help:—"Dear Sir,—May we ask your urgent and early attention to this appeal to you for pecuniary help on behalf of the Indian National Congress. The total amount required this year by the Madras Committee is about Rs. 6,500 only, and in addition, as much is required in printing and despatching petitions every mail. If every well-wisher and sympathiser of the national movement gives his mite the amount required will be easily collected. We earnestly beg you will kindly think over the importance of the matter and contribute your quota towards the amount required."

BOMBAY.

(July 4.)

THE appointment of Mr. A. D. Younghusband, C.S., to act as Private Secretary to his Excellency the Governor during the absence of Mr. S. W. Edgerley, C.S., appears in Thursday's Government Gazette.

On the 24th ult. the engine of the mail train from Khandwa to Mhow ran over two buffaloes near Sanawad station, causing the engine and four passenger carriages to leave the rails. The former went down an embankment of twenty feet, whilst the front break van was capsized, and four carriages were considerably damaged. No one was injured. A break-down train was telegraphed for from Mhow, and the passengers of two trains had to be transhipped. The line was cleared for traffic about twelve hours after the accident.

It will be remembered that a fortnight since a woman died at the Goculdas Tejpal Hospital from arsenic poisoning. Before dying she made a deposition which was taken down by the third Presidency Magistrate, in which she accused her husband and a woman named Cassee with poisoning her. Both the persons who were accused have since been under police surveillance. On Saturday last the coroner held an adjourned inquest on the body, and from the medical and other evidence adduced it appeared that the deceased woman had evidently taken the arsenic herself, and had implicated her husband and Cassee, merely because she was at variance with them, and sought revenge.

A NATIVE paper reproduces the following copy of a letter, dated March 21, 1864, written by the late Mr. Rustomjee Jamsetjee Jejeebhoy to Government offering Rs. 80,000 for the construction of a leper ward in connection with the Jamsetjee Hospital, and the resolution of the Government accepting that offer. The paper inquires if Government have taken any steps towards carrying out the wishes of the deceased donor, and if not, in what manner have the funds been appropriated:—

Bombay Castle, March 31, 1864.

Read the following letter from the Hon. Mr. Rustomjee Jamsetjee Jejeebhoy to Government, dated March 21, 1864:—

"With reference to my letter to your address of August 29, 1863, on the subject of building a leper ward in connection with the Jamsetjee Jejeebhoy Hospital, I have the honour to intimate to you, for the information of his Excellency the Governor in Council, my readiness to bear the whole of the estimated expense of constructing this additional ward, namely, Rs. 80,000, on condition that the ward in question be considered by Government as part of the Jamsetjee Jejeebhoy Hospital, and be maintained and kept in repair by Government as a portion of that institution."

RESOLUTION:—The Hon. Rustomjee Jamsetjee Jejeebhoy should be thanked for this fresh proof of his munificence and philanthropy, and informed that Government accept his offer on the conditions stated.

2. The Public Works Department should be informed with a view to the work being at once commenced. A tablet should be put up, containing the donor's name and other particulars of this munificent gift.

CAPTAIN HAYES writes:—"A pony I brought up to be measured last Wednesday was the cause of an interesting point in racing law being raised. This pony was measured last October in Poona, aged five years. As the W. I. T. C. rule of making six years the age at which a life certificate of height is to be granted came into force on January 1st last, it follows that the pony's Poona measurement held good for life in all races run under the W. I. T. C. As the C. T. C. and W. I. T. C. reciprocate with regard to measurement, the question arose: Had this pony to be re-measured in 1890 to entitle him to run under the rules of the C. T. C., which enacts that the final age is six years? I thought he had to be re-measured, so brought him up. Mr. Apcar was of the same opinion. As the C. T. C. rule of making six years the final age for measuring came into vogue on June 11th, 1889, it follows that all ponies measured and aged five by the W. I. T. C. between that date and January 1st, 1890, must be re-measured to qualify them to run under C. T. C. rules."

NORTH-WEST PROVINCES AND PUNJAB

(July 2.)

THE Soldiers' Industrial Exhibition at Rawal Pindi will open on the 5th January, 1891.

THE question of accommodation in public offices at Simla has been referred for investigation to a committee, under the presidency of Sir Charles Elliott.

THE Punjab Police Battalion for East Africa will be commanded by Mr. A. S. Rogers, of the Punjab Police.

SYED MEHDI HASSAN, Kahn of Patna, eldest son of the late Nawab Lutif Ali Khan, C.I.E., has made the generous donation of Rs. 1,000 in aid of the Building Fund of the New Lady Dufferin Zenana Hospital in Calcutta.

SIR AUCKLAND COLVIN's administration reform scheme for the North-west Provinces will form the subject of legislation in the Viceroy's Council.

MR. ROBERT CROSTHWAITE will be sent to Simla in charge of the measure, which will certainly be passed during the current session.

AT Delhi, in the case of the Provincial Bank versus Maharajah Sir Partab Singh, K.C.S.I., of Jodhpur, the plaintiffs, on the 27th ult., secured a decree for Rs. 62,000 in the District Judge's Court. The defendants will, it is said, appeal.

HEAVY rain during the beginning of the week caused an enormous landslip on the Darjeeling Railway near Darjeeling. The line was covered with rocks, earth, and trees for 250 yards. Traffic was stopped for some time, and then continued from below the slip while the débris was being cleared away.

THE main proposition in Mr. Younghusband's report on the Simla Water supply consists in a scheme for pumping up 130,000 gallons of water daily from the Charot Nullah on the south side of the Mahasu range. Including the cost of a reservoir which would hold four million gallons of water. 13½ lakhs would, it is estimated, be required. Mr. Young husband has examined the hills out to Mattiana, and having carefully considered all the other schemes for the storage of water and the supply of the same by gravitation from the north of the Mahasu ridge, he urges the adoption of the pumping method.

A GREAT cloud of locusts passed over Allahabad on the 25th ult., travelling from south-west to north-east. The stream of these terrible pests made its appearance at about 3.30 P.M., and lasted till 5 P.M. The sky was overcast with them, but fortunately they did not settle at Allahabad. We learn, however, that a good portion of the swarm settled on the fields in the neighbourhood of the Muir Village. The advent of these pests is regarded by the natives as heralding a famine, Kāl parega (there will be famine) was the comments of the crowds that turned out to witness the passage of the swarm.

PARTICULARS of a sad case of accidental drowning, that of Veterinary-Surgeon P. W. Dundon, A.V.D., have been sent to the Morning Post from Lucknow. It appears that Mr. Dundon had gone to the mess on Friday night, and had his bearer with him; but the latter preceded him on returning home. The servant waited till morning for his master, but as he never turned up he made a report of it. A bhisti who went to fill water at a well in the neighbourhood fished up an umbrella, and afterwards discovered the body of Mr. Dundon floating in the well, life being extinct. It is supposed that as the night was a particularly dark one the deceased walked into the well without knowing where he was going, and thus met with his death. He was only thirty years of age.

NATIVE PRESS.

INDUSTRIAL REVIVAL.

(Hindu.)

A few days ago we published in our columns an essay on this subject by a Brahmin gentleman of Poona. The essay is a model of its kind, being thoughtful, moderate, and practical, and we have the pleasure of concurring in most of his views on this momentous question. We note with pleasure the slow dawning of the idea on the minds of our leading countrymen that, after all that can be said for the Congress movement, the regeneration of our people depends on progress in other directions than mere political advancement. In fact, this last can do us good only so far as we shall deserve it by corresponding changes in our social and moral ideas. Mr. Ranade expresses the same view when he says: "Political ascendancy is not the only particular vantage ground which we have lost, and which we have to regain. Commercial and manufacturing predominance naturally transfers political ascendancy, and in this our collapse has been even far more complete." If our thoughtful friend would pursue his inquiry further he would see that even this collapse in commercial and industrial progress is to be traced to our moral downfall. To Mr. Ranade this aspect of the question was not relevant, and accordingly he contents himself by hinting here and there that the industrial revival directly depends on our moral revival. An esteemed Bombay friend took us to task for stating that the caste system stands in the way of our material advancement. He may be right, and we may be wrong. But if we err, we err in the company of men like Sir Richard Garth. . . . The class of Hindus who are most prominent in Native trade are those with whom caste distinctions have not much force. The Parsis are what they are because their social system imposes no restriction on their movements, and they can take up any business which promises to pay. Amongst Hindoos the Marwaris are known to be a very thriving class, and it is well known how they go to any part of the world in pursuit of wealth. In Southern India the small class of Nattukottai Chetties are well known for their wealth, but then they are a people whose enterprise takes them to any part of the world, to Natal, Burma and China. Like the Marwaris they are an uneducated people, that is, they are not educated in English schools. Still they are very intelligent and shrewd, and are seldom known to fail in business. Thus our real hope in the revival of industries, as in several other national improvements, consists in the reform of our social institutions; in other words, in the Indian people becoming morally a new people altogether. As Sir Richard says, their character and feelings must change. Our greatest industrial difficulty is not what is called the annual "tribute" which India pays to England; for this tribute cannot well be avoided, although it may be slightly reduced. It is not that India produces no sufficient quantity of coal and iron; for the quantity that is now obtainable is not fully utilised. Nor is it a real difficulty that in India there is not a large class of wealthy men. India absorbs a large quantity of precious metals every year, and if only people will have the good sense not to hoard them up or convert them into jewels, there would be plenty of capital forthcoming. "After all," Mr. Ranade adds, and we fully agree with him, "Government's help can go but a short way; and even the little help that Government is prepared to offer the people are not in a position to utilise. Government, for instance, is prepared to encourage emigration to other portions of the British Empire and from densely-peopled countries to sparsely inhabited tracts within India itself." But where are the men who are prepared to take advantage of this extended field of colonisation both within and outside India? The difficulties are great and numerous no doubt; but these exaggerate themselves in the minds of men who inherit the passive and let alone temperament of the Hindu nation. In the words of Mr. Ranade: "We have to resolve to work earnestly and perseveringly, with a purpose and an organisation which will conquer all obstacles. No nation started its career of industrial and commercial prosperity with all conceivable advantages previously secured. European nations were once poorer than the people of India, but they were more resolute and enterprising, and now monopolise the trade of the world with all the wealth and honour derived from such a paramount position."

THE NATIVE MAGISTRACY.

(The Hindu.)

As disclosed by the Government of India's resolution on "Police and Crime," the complaint appears to be very general that the manner in which Criminal Courts are worked frequently tends more or less to favour the escape of criminals. This, no doubt, must, to a certain extent, be consoling to those gentlemen whose scruples about admitting the well-known inefficiency and corruption of the Police are almost unconquerable. But one may be tempted to ask, not unreasonably, whether the defects in the magistracy which are said to operate unfavourably on the working of the Police can be remedied by improving the position and prospects of the latter, and whether it will not be better to apply the remedy at the root of the evil itself. It is stated (1) that the Native Magistracy is weak, and the Subordinate Executive service includes very few Europeans; (2) that the delay in disposing of criminal cases is inordinate; (3) that the District Magistracy exercises imperfect supervision over the Subordinate Magistrates. Now, if these evils are real, how are we to remove them? Does the Government of India suggest anything better than greater supervision on the part of the District and Divisional Magistrates over their subordinates? Will this in any way tend to bring about the desired result? The inefficiency of the Native magistracy is to be traced not so much to the absence of supervision as to the manner in which it is recruited, to the dangerously low scale of pay allowed to its members, and to the multiplicity of duties and responsibilities thrown on their shoulders. The work of Inspectors of Police whose salaries range between Rs. 70 and 300 is to be practically supervised and checked by magistrates on Rs. 70 and 60, the majority of whom are men of inferior education. This evident absurdity does not seem to have attracted the notice of the intelligent body of gentlemen who constitute the Government of India. The complaint has been made in Madras, by responsible officers of Government, that our Magistrates are hardly able to cope with the superior legal acumen and forensic skill of the class of lawyers who generally argue cases before them. Who is responsible for this state of things? Are there not highly qualified men in the country who may be placed on the bench and pitted against the extremely clever lawyers? The Madras High Court, in a recent communication to the Government, strongly recommended the appointment as Magistrates of men of equal ability and integrity with the District Munsiffs, and they further urged that there could be no difficulty in securing such men in any number for the same or similar pay. These recommendations, emanating as they did from the highest judicial authorities in the land, deserve the respectful attention of any Government. Yet did not our Local Government receive it with anything but contemptuous indifference? Government speaks of the inordinate delay in disposing of criminal cases! But how can we expect Revenue Officers, who have numerous calls to attend to, to pull on with their Magisterial work with greater speed?

THE proposal to transfer the Traffic Department of the East Indian Railway Company from Jamalpur to Allahabad is at present in statu quo. The Government have now under consideration the financial aspect of the question, as new quarters and offices will have to be erected at Allahabad, while the spacious buildings now in use at Jamalpur will be demolished—an unnecessary loss to the company. Nothing definite will be settled till such time as the item of accommodation is considered.

MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

THE Government of India have approved of Native drivers of British mountain batteries of artillery being held eligible for the Native artillery reserve, equally with those of Native batteries, and sanction eight drivers per British mountain battery being allowed to join the active reserve.

It has been definitely settled that the Military Accounts Offices, Western Circle, Bengal, move to Rawal Pindi in March next. The new offices at that station are to be ready by the end of February, and are being built at an expense of 1½ lakhs.

CAPTAIN H. MELVILLE, Bombay Staff Corps, Ordnance and Army Clothing Examiner, Madras, has been ordered to Rangoon; and Captain G. W. S. Fryer, Bombay Staff Corps, Examiner, Ordnance and Army Clothing Accounts, Bombay, has been transferred to Madras.

AN appeal has been lodged on behalf of the winner of the Bombay Volunteer Provincial Silver Medal against the award of the Bombay Presidency Volunteer Silver Medal to Sergeant D. Clabby, Poona Volunteers, who, it is alleged, was allowed to fire at the 500 and 600 yards before firing at the 300 yards, as he arrived late on the range on the morning fixed for the firing, this being contrary to the conditions under which the firing should take place. The papers have been sent to Army Headquarters for decision.

A NOTIFICATION in the last London Gazette cancelling the appointment of Colonel R. C. Stewart to a first class District Command in India may be liable to cause some misapprehension. It is, however, nothing more than a formality. Brigadier-General Stewart was appointed to the Burma Command from Hyderabad, and was gazetted in the expectation that he would take up the post in the usual course. But he applied for, and was granted, six months' leave, and left India without joining his new appointment, and therefore continues during his absence in his former rank and post. He will take up the command in Burma on his return to India in the autumn.

A LIST of batteries serving in the Bengal Presidency, arranged in order of merit in shooting, has been published. The Commander-in-Chief observes that a large majority of the batteries have made a marked advance in shooting, as evidenced by the results of the competitive practice, and in other respects the practice shows great improvement over last year; but much remains to be done before the "laying" can be considered regular, or shooting up to the power of the various guns can be said to be attained. The 6th Battery, Western Division, heads the list with a figure of merit of '627, and wins the Commander-in-Chief's prize; the 2nd Battery of the same Division comes next with '620; then the 20th Southern ('603), 3rd Mountain ('565), and 65th Field Battery ('559). C Battery, R.H.A., shooting with the new 12-pr. breechloader, had a figure of merit of '494.

A TELEGRAM dated June 24th, from Fort White to the Pioneer, says:—There are no signs of any diminution of sickness among the troops. The Goorkhas have now 191 in hospital, and the Sappers have 11 out of 30 men sick. A batch of 10 sick Goorkhas went down by the last convoy, and another batch will start by the next convoy. All the officers of the Goorkhas have been down with fever, and of the other British officers here only one—namely, Lieutenant Heycock, of the Madras Sappers, has escaped. Owing to the hardships undergone during the recent expedition, the men have become perfectly saturated with fever, and are quite unable to regain their strength here. It is probable that a detachment of the 38th B.I. will have to be sent up to assist in carrying on the ordinary garrison duties. The two Chins are still in the Goorkha quarter-guard, awaiting the decision of the Chief Commissioner. Already their capture has had a good effect, as the Siyins have brought in eight captives and promise to give up the remainder. A few thieving Chins still prowl around at night, but no shots are fired into the post as was formerly the case. The telegraph office was broken into the other night, and two clocks and a telegraph instrument carried off. Search was made next morning, but, of course, without success.

It is said that the Duke and Duchess of Connaught will embody, in a volume, the story of their Indian experiences and travels, which they have sent to the Queen, in long and highly interesting letters from time to time. The book, it is added, will be illustrated with a number of sketches made by the Duchess.

THE Hall Line are building two fast steamers, the Civil and Military Gazette understands, which will do the trip from Kurrachee in fifteen days or less. Every step like this in the direction of making Kurrachee the nearest station to England, in point of time as of distance, is welcome news for the Punjab.

THE CHARTERED BANK FRAUD CASE.

The case in which Shama Churn Sen, late cashier of the Chartered Bank of India, Australia, and China, was charged with embezzling large sums of money, and his son, Aubinash Chunder Sen, with aiding and abetting him, was again called on for hearing before the Chief Presidency Magistrate. Mr. T. A. Apar, instructed by Mr. G. C. Farr, appeared for the prosecution; Mr. Allen, instructed by Babu Gonesh Chunder Chunder, for Shama Churn Sen; and Mr. Garth, instructed by Babu Kally Nath Mitter, for Aubinash Chunder Sen.

On the case being called on, Mr. Allen said that he had an application to make on behalf of his client, who was very seriously ill while in jail, and therefore unable to communicate with his solicitors sufficiently, and he (Mr. Allen) had in consequence not been properly instructed. He would ask that the case be adjourned, say, till Monday next, and that under the circumstances his client be released on bail to any extent the Magistrate might direct. His client was, in fact, in a very dangerous state of health, and if he remained in jail three or four days longer there was every likelihood of the man dying. The doctor of the jail could depose to the illness being of so serious a nature that it would endanger the life of the accused to stop there. He would certainly be better cared for by his friends than he could possibly be in jail, and under the circumstances the Magistrate, having jurisdiction, might make the order for bail, considering that the man's life was at stake.

Mr. Apar, in reply to the Court, said: Appearing as he did for the prosecution, and after what Mr. Allen had said in regard to the state of the man's health, he would not oppose the application, but leave the matter entirely in the hands of the Court.

The Magistrate said that what he was looking to was the sessions, which, by granting an adjournment, would be lost, and the matter would have to wait till the sessions in September.

Mr. Allen observed that they could not shut their eyes to the immediate state of things. There was the man's life at stake at present, and if the Magistrate would grant an immediate subpoena for the jail doctor, the latter could be examined on the state of the accused's health, and a formal adjournment granted till Monday next.

After some further discussion, the Magistrate decided to take the doctor's evidence as to the state of accused's health, and, Mr. Garth not objecting, to formally adjourn the case till Monday.

An immediate subpoena was then issued for the attendance of the jail doctor.

Shortly after Dr. Walsh arrived, and Mr. Allen addressed the Court, saying that he had had an opportunity of having a word with Dr. Walsh, and did not think that he would be justified in pressing the application for bail. Dr. Walsh was of opinion that the man was in bad health, but not so bad as to endanger his life if he remained in jail. He would therefore withdraw the application for bail, but would ask that the case stand adjourned to Monday as previously arranged.

The Magistrate observed that there was, after all, no necessity for any adjournment, but under the circumstances, and as no earlier date was convenient, the case would remain adjourned till Monday next.—Englishman, June 26.

THE EUROPEAN ARMY IN INDIA.

Under the auspices of the East India Association a meeting of officers and gentlemen interested in the affairs of the British Empire in the East was held on Friday last in the Society's rooms, Victoria-street, for the purpose of considering the proposed reorganisations of the European army in India. General Sir Orfeur Cavenagh read a Paper embodying the result of lengthened and distinguished service in India. Mr. J. H. Thornton, late Secretary of the Punjab Government, presided. General Cavenagh pointed out that three essentials must be regarded in considering the question of organising the European force needed for the protection of the British Eastern Empire—the force must be thoroughly efficient in every respect; the cost should not be excessive, so that no undue strain would be thrown upon the finances of India; and both officers and soldiers should be perfectly contented. It was undeniable that under the present system the necessity for continually withdrawing seasoned soldiers from regiments serving in India and replacing them with comparatively untrained recruits not only entailed a very heavy expenditure upon the State, but materially impaired the efficiency of the whole army; while it was, moreover, from the state of uncertainty it occasioned a frequent cause of dissatisfaction. The disadvantages arising from the unsatisfactory state of affairs had led to a demand for the re-formation of a local army, but to this measure, in the opinion of many competent judges, there were serious objections. It might, however, be possible to devise a scheme under which —though retaining the unity of the army—the advantages likely to accrue from the formation of a separate force for India might be realised. Heavy cavalry was not well suited for Indian warfare, and, with reference to the difficulty of providing them with horses of sufficient power, it might well be a question whether they could ever be considered as thoroughly efficient. It, would, therefore, be advisable in future to have the Indian mounted contingent entirely composed of light horsemen, and with this object the light cavalry, from the 4th Hussars downwards, should be formed into double regiments. Every recruit on enlistment should be called upon to elect either for home or for Indian service, and to the latter the following privileges should be accorded, subject, of course, to good behaviour and physical capability—the right to claim transfer to the reserve any time after eight years' service, with an allowance exclusive of deferred pay of 6d., and after eight years of 8d. per diem; of the reserve pay thus granted one-half of the former and three-fourths of the latter to remain a charge upon the Indian revenue; the further right, under the same conditions, of completing a service of twenty years, after which a private would be entitled to 1s. per diem, plus his good conduct pay, and non-commissioned officers to pensions at proportionately higher rates. A pension of 8d. per diem to be granted to any man invalided after twelve years' actual service in India, or whose service with the colours and in the service might extend to twenty years. The burden thus thrown upon India would not be very onerous, while in the case of men joining the reserve, England would acquire the services of thoroughly trained soldiers on very advantageous terms.

THE OLD POET'S REGRET.

(From the "Bostan of Saadi"—Book IX.)

We sat one night in our youth gone-by Youths rejoicing in strength and pride,
Bulbuls singing with faces fresh,
The sound of our mirth through the street spread wide.
Grave and silent the poet sat,
Grey were his hairs with the snows of age:
"Come, join in our revels" the young men cried,
The old man smiling gave answer sage—
"The morning breeze o'er the cornfield blows,
Musk-willow scent on its wings is borne;
The young corn gracefully bows its head,
The old and withered is broken and torn.
"The morning breeze o'er the garden blows;
The young trees gracefully bend and sway,
The green leaves flutter, the dry ones fall,
Withered branches are snap away.
"Your corn, fresh from the earth, waves green,
Mine is yellow for harvest day,
The falcon strains at the slender cord,
Threatening each moment to break away.
"Alas, the season of youth is fled
In mirth and merriment past and gone!
Alas for the days when my heart was young Passed like a lightning flash in Yaman."

Success still attends the arms of Umra Khan of Jandol, says the Civil and Military Gazette.—Information received by letter from Bajaur states that on the 16th inst., Umra Khan, on recovering his health, again prepared to assault the Chunk-Atar Fort belonging to Dir. Before he reached it, he was informed by his men that there was not a single man in the fort, of which he at once took undisputed possession, with everything that was left in it. Malik Fam Jan, who had, in the early part of the campaign, fought against Umra Khan, and been defeated and driven out of his fort of Baroul, was at first with the garrison of Chunk-Atar, but later retreated to Dir with his men to help the Khan. As we anticipated, however, the latter had no stomach for further fighting, and sent a jirga to Umra Khan asking for a truce, and that he should be left in possession of Dir only. In reply, Umra Khan said that he would have accepted these terms had the Khan of Dir not sent his brother to the Ameer of Afghanistan; but, under the circumstances, he cannot accept any terms, but will continue to fight, and see whether the Ameer can come to the rescue. There has, therefore, probably been more fighting in Dir itself, and if, as we expect, it goes against the Khan of Dir, he will either come as a refugee to Peshawar, if allowed to remain there by the Indian Government, or will go to Jellalabad territory to his old jagir of Rs. 12,000 which the Ameer gave him. Then the prediction, which we made years ago, that Umra Khan would fight his way up to the rule of Bajaur and Swat, will have been almost fulfilled. (Just as we are going to press a telegram reaches us that Dir has fallen into Umra Khan's hands, and that the Khan of Dir is a fugitive towards Kohistan.)

THE LIFE AND LETTERS OF THE REV. ADAM SEDGWICK.*

Of all forms of literary composition the most difficult is biography. It is so easy to record too much; it is not less more difficult to say too little. The one fault makes the work diffuse and tedious; the other defect leaves the narrative halting and incomplete. Then, again, the story may include too many technical allusions to the studies and pursuits of the individual whose life is the subject under consideration. This blot on the biographical escutcheon weakens the interest of the majority of readers, and narrows their circle to the comparatively few who delight in the same branch of learning. Lastly, there is the fatal rock of "private confidence," on which many an author finds his barque shattered to pieces, and his reputation for sagacity and prudence scattered to the winds of heaven.

How far, then, does the recent life of Adam Sedgwick, by Messrs. Clark and Hughes, answer the expectation which the honoured and venerable name of the Woodwardian Professor of Geology was calculated to arouse in the minds of the numerous admirers of one of the best known of Cambridge's best known sons? The answer, we fear, can only be partially satisfactory, inasmuch as, to our judgment, the two volumes might well have been pruned down to a single tome, a course the more desirable, inasmuch as this compression would have necessitated the omission of page after page now dedicated to geological discussions, which are utterly of place in a biography of Adam Sedgwick the man. As regards the matter of publishing letters and opinions which had better remain in the pigeon-holes of reclusion the verdict is, on the whole, in favour of the author. It is true that a writer in the Times has lately drawn attention to the slur which, in his opinion, has been cast upon an ancestor whose memory he was charged to defend; but to us the correspondent in question did not seem to make sufficient allowance for the softening effects of father "Time," and treated "ancient history" as a thing of to-day.

Amidst the cares and toils of modern life it is somewhat a tax upon a reader to wade through more than 1,200 pages of close print to learn what manner of man was Adam Sedgwick; but the many—perhaps we should have written the few—who take an interest in academic life will find their trouble more than repaid by the excellent picture which these volumes afford of Cambridge in the olden days, when the present century had not as yet assisted at the birth of the two greatest discoveries of modern times—the Railway and the Electric Telegraph. It is refreshing to learn the views of a keen intellect as to what, in his opinion, "would happen," and compare this with the results which "have occurred." Not a few, however, will turn to the second volume, which treats largely with the personal life and character of "Old Seggy" as a man, as a Canon of the Church, and as a devout Christian. Here there is much to interest and little less to instruct. The genial, loving and loved patriarch of more than threescore years and ten will find many an admirer amongst those who are apt to think, and the feeling is wide-spread, that a "Professor" is a pedantic, animated man of learning, dead to the gentler feelings of the human breast, unimpressionable and unimpressed. Ay, after all, there is "a deal of humanity in human nature, or to clothe the same idea in a classical garb "homo sum, nihil humanum a me alienum puto." Some, then, may love to think of Adam Sedgwick as the founder of the Science of Geology from a practical point of view; but we prefer to call him to mind as one who has taught mankind the greatest of all lessons—how to live; so that when death is triumphant there shall remain a memory of all that is great and good. This is what these volumes teach us, and their appearance affords a welcome change to the never-ending flow of sensational literature which is one of the landmarks of this nineteenth century of grace.

THE Burma Press is looking on its police, as it ever has, with an eye of suspicion and distrust. There are one or two matters requiring explanation in some incomprehensible instances of late. An old Madrassi was arrested for being supposed to have a guilty knowledge of an offence, and bail was refused, on the ground that it was a non-bailable offence; but shortly after the Madrassi was released on bail tendered by a man of no position whatever. The Burma Press states that this is strange, more especially as the man is said to have returned with ten rupees less than the amount he had. Another unexplained case is that of some gamblers arrested in the act—that is, with dice and money; but the case has never come on, and probably never will. Why? A Burma paper gives an answer. "Some of the money, we believe, was handed in by the police, but only a small portion." These are innuendoes.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

WEDNESDAY, JULY 23, 1890.

KASHMIR.

THE official publication which has just been made of the "Papers relating to Kashmir" furnishes the best answer to the charges made by Mr. Bradlaugh, and those who prompted him, against the Government of India for having dealt unjustly with the ruler and people of this State. When Mr. Bradlaugh moved the adjournment of the House of Commons "in order to call attention to the withdrawal by the Government of India from the Maharaja of Kashmir of the Government of his State and part of his revenues, while refusing him any inquiry which led to this step," he made a very energetic speech on behalf of his client, and demanded a judicial or Parliamentary inquiry into the action of the Indian Government. Sir J. Gorst replied, defending, of course, the action of that Government, and after a brief, but not altogether inanimate, debate, the motion for the adjournment of the House was negatived by 226 to 88 votes. Commenting on this debate, the Times very correctly said that the House of Commons illustrated once more its incompetence to control in detail the acts of an Executive Government such as that of India, and that it was a singular destiny which caused "ignorant and ingenious Radicals" who visited India to fall as a matter of course into the hands of the agents of Native Princes or pretenders, whose principles and practice are the very negation of democracy, and whose power is only rendered tolerable by the supreme control of the Viceroy. "Mr. Bradlaugh," it went on to say, "is honest, but imperfectly informed, and has, it is clear, been coached by the Hindoo hangers-on of the Maharaja, without any real knowledge of the real grievances of the Mahomedan inhabitants of the country. Sir John Gorst's answer was conclusive. He showed that the misgovernment of Kashmir, and the oppression of the peasantry by a corrupt Court, had been again and again brought under the notice of the Government of India, and that the information conveyed to the Viceroy left him no choice but to remove an incapable and discreditable ruler. Mr. Bradlaugh, as the advocate of the divine right of Maharajas—originating in this particular case in treachery and bribery—is a spectacle for gods and men." But whether Mr. Bradlaugh was "coached" by the Hindú hangers on of the Maharaja in India, or, as the Globe suggested, by the Congress-leaders here, to champion a corrupt and tyrannical rule against the rights of the people, he must, after Sir John Gorst's crushing reply, have felt "sorry he spoke." But the Government here has done wisely in making public the papers which have passed between the Government of India and the India Office concerning the action of the former towards the Kashmir State and its Ruler. A more complete vindication of the wise, just and merciful policy of British rule in India has seldom been published. Englishmen at home, who have never visited the East, have formed any notions they may have about Kashmir from a cursory glance at the celebrated poem by the late Mr. Thomas Moore, which dwelt with rapture upon the bowers and flowers, the beams and streams, &c., &c., of the Valley of Bliss:—

"And, oh! if there be an Elysium on earth,
It is this, it is this."

That was Mr. Moore's poetic opinion, derived from what he had read in printed volumes which diligent research had brought to his hand, and it must be admitted that he described the natural beauties of the place admirably. But he also unconsciously described the Kashmir peasant, not, perhaps, as it was then, but certainly as he was under the government of Mr. Bradlaugh's protégé, the present Maharaja of Kashmir and his predecessor, a slave

"Beholding heaven, and feeling hell."

The Blue-book to hand gives ample evidence of the miserable condition in which the unfortunate people of this beautiful country were in under the tyrannical and oppressive rule of those Maharajas, and shows also how patient and long-forbearing the Government of India has been. So long ago as April 7th, 1884, the Secretary of State for India was informed in an official despatch that the administration of the Kashmir State was so thoroughly disorganised as to threaten a complete breakdown, that the Maharaja was dying, and that the heir-apparent to the Chiefship was unfitted in character and habits to govern the State. The misgovernment to which the people of the country had long been subjected was well known to the Governor-General and his Council, but the despatch explained why no action was then taken:—"We did not take action at once conceiving that a more favourable opportunity would present itself on the occurrence of a fresh succession—an event which seemed unlikely to be long postponed. When that event takes place we consider that it will be our duty to impress upon the Kashmir Government its obligations to its own subjects, and to see that the reforms which are so urgently needed are no longer postponed." The reforms required were stated to be the introduction of a reasonably light assessment of land revenue, the construction of good roads, the cessation of State monopolies, the revision of existing taxes and dues, especially transit dues and the numerous taxes upon trades and professions, the abolition of the system of farming the revenue, the appointment of respectable officials, the establishment of a careful system of financial control, the removal of all restrictions upon emigration, the reorganisation and regular payment of the army and the improvement of the judicial administration. It cannot be said that these measures were "far-fetched" or "heavy burdening," and when the present Maharaja succeeded his father these were the simple reforms which he was urged to undertake. But the Government of India went further in their desire to ameliorate matters. His Highness was officially informed that, in order to afford him all possible help in the introduction of these reforms, the Governor-General in Council would, if necessary, grant him a loan from Imperial revenues, and would place at his disposal for a time the services of officers of the British Government specially qualified to assist in carrying out the measures of reform specified. At first the new ruler of Kashmir pretended to desire reform as much as the Government of India, and made a show to that purpose; but it was all pretence. Weak, vicious, and irresolute, he became a tool in the hands of unscrupulous advisers; things went from bad to worse, and when a foolish, if not treacherous, correspondence on his part was discovered, he asked to be relieved of power, and placed his State in the hands of the British Government. Even then the Government of India tried to have the administration carried on altogether through Native agency, and with the least possible show of interference on the part of the Paramount Power; but Native intrigue went again to work—the Maharaja tried to revoke his resignation—and all would have been chaos and confusion had not the Government of India shown that it was determined that the reforms it suggested should be carried out. This is being done in no harsh or hurried way, and there has been no annexing of territory or usurpation of royal rights. Kashmir is being ruled by Native Councillors, but under the just and impartial supervision of the Government of India as represented by a British Resident of experience and intelligence. The changes which are taking place are all for the better; the country is becoming prosperous and settled, and the poor heavy-burdened peasants, who have suffered extortion and tyranny for long years, are beginning to feel and appreciate the blessings of freedom, justice, and good government.

This is all the British Government in India has done to Kashmir, and this is what Mr. Bradlaugh and his Congress friends would have undone.

THE position of women in India formed the topic of discussion at an influential meeting held on Monday at No. 37, Wimpole-street, W., the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Jeune. By reason of the position which he had lately occupied, as official head of the Presidency of Bombay, Lord Reay was in the chair, supported by Princess Christian and the Duchess of Connaught, the latter embracing the first opportunity since her return from India to show her interest in matters affecting the welfare of the people of that Empire. There were also present Lady George Hamilton, the Countess of Waldegrave, Lady Edward Cavendish, the Earl and Countess of Aberdeen, Mrs. Gladstone, Lady Wantage, and the Countess of Jersey. Spoken to by Sir William Jenner, Sir Charles Aitchison, Mr. Malabari, Sir Alfred Lyall, and others, resolutions were passed as to the remarriage of widows and kindred subjects. Mr. Malabari, it may be mentioned, has been for some time in England, urging that a determined effort should be made to improve the condition of Indian women.

India in Parliament.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—JULY 15.

CULTIVATION OF BEET IN INDIA.

Sir G. CAMPBELL asked the Under-Secretary of State for India whether the Indian Agricultural Department had made any trials with the view of introducing the cultivation of beet and manufacture of beetroot sugar into India, or would do so in view of the present shortness and dearness of sugar in that country, necessitating importation.

Sir J. GORST: Trials have been made at Seharunpore and other places, not, so far, with any conspicuous success.

THE UNCOVENANTED CIVIL SERVICE.

Mr. BRYCE asked the Under-Secretary of State for India whether the Government would consent to extend the reference of the recently-appointed Select Committee on certain points affecting the rights and claims of members of the Uncovenanted Civil Service of India, so as to include various grievances of which the Civil Engineers in the employment of the Government of India complained in respect to their promotion, and to the manner in which posts in the Public Works Department were allotted.

Sir J. GORST said that the subject raised in the hon. member's question was rather for the House to consider than the Government.

Mr. BRYCE asked whether the Government would oppose the extension of the reference if a private member were to propose it.

Sir J. GORST said that that question ought hardly to be addressed to him.

JULY 21.

INDIA COUNCIL BILLS.

Mr. S. SMITH asked the Under-Secretary for India whether it is the case that for some time past India Council Bills have been sold much beyond the average monthly rate; whether this was done to take advantage of the higher exchange caused by anticipated silver legislation in America; whether the present rate of exchange is much higher than that at which those surplus sales of Council Bills were made; whether the Indian Treasury has thereby sustained a considerable loss; and whether he will consider the advisability of delaying action as far as possible and await the full effect of the passage of the American Silver Bill, in view of the possibility of a rise to about 1s. 11d. per rupee, the old rate of exchange before silver demonetisation took place?

Sir JOHN GORST: The answer to the first paragraph is in the negative. The answer to the second is also in the negative. The expectation of legislation in the United States has not influenced the amount of currency bills sold. As to the third paragraph, the present rate of exchange is higher than it has been for the last five years. The answer to the fourth paragraph is in the negative. There has been no such loss, because there have been no surplus sales. In answer to the fifth paragraph, the Secretary of State cannot delay such sale of bills as is necessary to meet the wants of the service on the chance of a future rise in the price of silver.

SILVER CURRENCY.

Mr. STEPHEN WILLIAMSON asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if in view of the marked influence of American legislation on the gold price of silver in the London market, he is taking steps to secure a full supply for mintage purposes for our token silver currency?

The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER: No, sir; the Mint does not speculate in silver, but, subject to reasonable foresight and forecast, must buy according to its requirements.

THE BURMA RUBY MINES COMPANY, LIMITED.

Dr. CAMERON asked the Under-Secretary of State for India whether his attention has been called to the statement made by the chairman of the Burma Ruby Mines Company, Limited, at the ordinary general meeting of shareholders of that company held on the 16th inst., to the effect that the Board had that day discussed the propriety of applying to the Government of India to relieve them of the payment of four lakhs of rupees per annum agreed on as the price of their concession, on the ground that the operations of the company had not resulted profitably; and whether he will undertake that no remission of this portion of the Indian Revenue shall take place without the House of Commons being previously informed of the fact?

Sir JOHN GORST: The Secretary of State has had no official communication on the subject, and he has not seen the newspaper report of the meeting referred to. The secretary could not give such an undertaking as is suggested in the question, as no such application has been made to him, nor, so far as he knows, to the Government of India. He was not aware of any grounds which would justify the remission.

THE CALCUTTA REVIEW.(The only Quarterly Review in India.)

ESTABLISHED 1844.

OPINIONS.

The Calcutta Review for October reached us a day or two ago, and a glance at its contents shows that the number more than sustains the reputation which this old and favourite publication is again achieving. The Review is rapidly regaining the position which it... there is no fear of the Indian Review, or the Asiatic Quarterly rivalling it in public favour.—Statesman, October 1886.

... The best service which I ever rendered in India, or, indeed, for India, was the establishment, single-handed, of the Calcutta Review, which has done far more for Indian literature than anything I have written under my own name.—J. W. KAYE, Athenaeum Club, June 28, 1872.

The Calcutta Review has given us valuable articles on the army. Some from the pen of Sir Henry Lawrence, who wrote with the spirit of prophecy of the coming storm of which he was one of the noblest victims.—Address of the C-in-C. at the U.S. Inst. of India.

... The Calcutta Review has not only throughout its career reflected the highest honour on its public-spirited promoters and its well-known distinguished contributors, but has done much to help forward the reconstruction of our system of governing India.—Westminster Review.

NAVAL AND MILITARY GAZETTE

ESTABLISHED 1933

EVERY SATURDAY. PRICE SIXPENCE.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" has acquired a reputation for early and exclusive intelligence as to Appointments and other service News, for the high character of its articles, the independent course of its staff of writers, and for its earnest support of all measures for the good of the Services. Articles on specially interesting subjects appear from week to week written for the most part by officers of rank and experience, or by men of note in literature who have made the Naval and Military affairs of the country their special study. A series of Illustrated Articles is appearing weekly on Regimental Badges and History. Illustrations with descriptions are also given of new Service Inventions.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" freely opens its correspondence columns to all grades in the Services. By this means an opportunity for interchange of opinion is afforded, such as is offered by no other Service Journal. Its ordinary weekly issue contains fully one-fourth more matter than the other Service Journals, even with their frequent "supplements."

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" circulates largely throughout India and the Colonies. It is supplied direct to the Army and Marine bureaux of the French, Russian, and other Governments, and it is read extensively by Officers of Foreign Services, especially of the German, French, and American Armies, who desire to acquire a true impression of facts and public opinion in England regarding Military affairs.

LIGHT versus DARKNESS.

"SHAKESPEARE, the Greatest Genius who has ever yet lived," taught the Divineness of Forgiveness, of Perpetual Mercy, of Constant Patience, of Endless Peace, of Perpetual Gentleness. If you can show me one who knew things better than this man, show him!! I know him not!! If he had appeared as a Divine, they would have Burned him; as a Politician, they would have Beheaded him; but God made him a Player.

"He taught that kindness is nobler than Revenge!!"—The Rev. GEORGE DAWSON, M.A.

"Earthly power doth then show likest God's
When mercy seasons justice,
And that same prayer doth teach us all to render
The Deeds of Mercy."—Shakespeare.

What higher aim can man attain, than conquest over human pain?

JEOPARDY OF LIFE, THE GREAT DANGER OF DELAY.

You can change the Trickling Stream, but not the Raging Torrent.

WHAT EVERYBODY SHOULD READ.—How important it is to have at hand some simple, effective, and palatable remedy, such as ENO'S "FRUIT SALT," to check disease at the onset!! With little trouble you can change the course of the trickling mountain stream, but not the rolling river. It will defy all your tiny efforts. I feel I cannot sufficiently impress this important information upon everybody. Let ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" be your companion; under any circumstances its use is beneficial, and never can do harm. When out of sorts, Restless, Sleepless, yet unable to say why, then your whole body is out of order, but you do not know where it may end; it is a real necessity to have a simple remedy at hand. The Pilot can so steer and direct as to bring the ship into safety, but he cannot quell the raging storm. The common idea when not feeling well is: "I will wait and see; perhaps I shall be better to-morrow;" whereas, had a supply of ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" been at hand, and its use made of it at the onset, all calamitous results might have been avoided. What dashes to the earth so many hopes, breaks so many sweet alliances, blasts so many auspicious enterprises, as untimely Death?

I used my 'FRUIT SALT' freely in my last severe attack of Fever, and I have every reason to say I believe it saved my life."—J. C. ENO.

CAUTION.—Examine each Bottle, and see that the Capsule is marked ENO'S "FRUIT SALT." Without it you have been imposed on by a worthless imitation.

SOLD BY ALL CHEMISTS. PREPARED ONLY AT

ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" WORKS POMEROY STREET, NEW CROSS ROAD, LONDON, S.E. (BY J. ENO'S PATENT.)

NATURE RULES ALL THINGS.

In every form of weakness use Scalded Milk.

ENO'S "VEGETABLE MOTO" occasionally a desirable adjunct to ENO'S "FRUIT SALT," as a simple and Natural Laxative, Stomachic, Blood, Brain, Nerve, Bile, or Liver Tonic; or, in other words, when taken as directed, their action is as simple as a tomato, whole meal bread or porridge (with scalded milk); you cannot overstate their great value in causing a natural, slow, and gentle action of the Liver: by that means you keep the blood pure and prevent disease. In advanced life they are everything you could wish. Read Practical Hints on Constipation, Liver Diseases, Impure Blood, Sleeplessness, Nervous Headache, Treatment of Gout and Rheumatism, how to Prevent Consumption, Jaundice, and other disastrous diseases by Rules for Health and Longevity, &c., in a pamphlet given with each Bottle of ENO'S "VEGETABLE MOTO." They can be used for any length of time without fear or harm."

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

WEDNESDAY JULY 30, 1890.

General Intelligence.

[BY OVERLAND MAIL.]

THE Overland Mail brings us letters and advices from Bombay to the 11th July; from Allahabad and Madras to the 9th July; and from Calcutta to the 8th July.

At the meeting of the Legislative Council at Simla Sir Andrew Scoble introduced a Bill amending the Indian Evidence Act, 1872, and the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1882. Mr. Hutchins brought forward a Bill amending the Cattle Tresspass Act.

THE VICEROY, on July 2nd, despatched a congratulatory message to the Postmaster-General in London on the occasion of the Penny Post Jubilee. His Excellency alluded to India having practically adopted Sir Rowland Hill's halfpenny post scheme and benefited thereby, and her hope to be able to reduce the home postage to two and a-half annas as soon as the rate from England to India was lowered.

SIR AUCKLAND COLVIN, accompanied by his Private Secretary, Captain Strachey, reached Bareilly from Naini Tal on July 12th. He proceeded the following evening to Agra, where he halted three days and inspected the waterworks.

BRIGADIER-GENERAL SYMONS, lately commanding the Chin Field Force, has arrived at Simla on a short visit to the Commander-in-Chief before starting for England.

COLONEL POLE-CAREW has quite recovered from the injury received while elephant-shooting in the Pegu jungles, and has left Rangoon for England.

LIEUTENANT-COLONEL W. G. NICHOLSON, R.E., has been gazetted Military Secretary to the Commander-in-Chief in India in succession to Colonel Pole-Carew, for whom he has been officiating for some months past.

MR. HAROLD KING, a well-known Bombay resident, died on July 7th from heat apoplexy. He was returning to India by the s.s. Oriental from a three months' trip to England.

THE Calcutta High Court has given its decision regarding the status of the General Family Pension Fund. The point was raised as to whether the Fund was not an association carrying on business for the sake of gain, and therefore requiring to be registered under the Indian Companies Act. Mr. Justice Wilson held that it was not such an association, and that registration was not necessary.

A DESTRUCTIVE fire occurred at the Army Clothing Depot, Alipore, on July 2nd, damage being done to the extent of Rs. 20,000.

THE Mussoorie Fine Arts Exhibition was opened on July 4th by Sir John Hudson.

FEBRUARY 26TH, 1891, has been fixed as the day on which the census in India shall be taken.

LORD AND LADY HARRIS gave their first dance of the season at Gunesh Khind, Poona, on July 2nd. Nearly 300 ladies and gentlemen were present on the occasion.

LADY ROBERTS' Fund for Nurses has made good progress during the year, and sixteen more nurses are to arrive next cold weather.

THE HON. MR. HUTCHINS will in all probability pay a flying visit to Burma in the cold weather.

MISS E. L. PALMAN, medical student in the Madras Medical College, has won the Viceroy's Silver Medal as first lady student of the year.

THE men concerned in the Jhanda dacoities have been convicted, and sentenced at Meerut to transportation for life.

A PUBLIC MEETING of the Native community of Bombay was held on Sunday, July 6th, to accord a suitable welcome to Mr. Surendra Nath Bannerjee, a Congress delegate, who returned from England.

At the Bombay Criminal Sessions, on July 3rd, two Mahomedans, named Cassum Fakroodin and Mahomed Hoosein, and a Hindoo, named Pandoo Mankojee, were sentenced to be hanged for murdering a Hindoo lad on May 27th last—the two former for actually committing the murder, and the latter for inciting them to do so by a payment of Rs. 50. The Hindoo who incited the Mahomedans to commit the murder was the uncle of the boy who was murdered.

IN the Bhownugger defamation cases at the Sessions Brahmachari and his accomplice Chagan were sentenced to 'two years' imprisonment for defaming Mr. M. M. Bhow-nuggree, Mr. Proctor Sims, and Dr. Burjorjee in the Bhownugger Exposure Gazette.

H.E. THE VICEROY goes on tour into the interior next month, and will be accompanied by Lord Kerry, Captain the Hon. Harbord, and Dr. Fenn.

THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF's cold weather tour is not yet settled, but he will probably accompany H.E. the Viceroy during a portion of the Rajputana trip.

At the Viceregal Legislative Council on July 10th the Census Bill and the Bill to amend the Indian Christian Marriage Act were brought forward.

THE Ganges is unusually high for this time of the year, and a portion of the civil station and town of Bullia seem doomed.

A SMALL frontier expedition will probably be undertaken into the country south of Kurram next cold season.

THE Chins are now quiet, and have ceased interfering with the telegraph wires.

MR. SURENDRANATH BANERJEE, Congress Delegate, addressed a largely-attended meeting on his return from England in Bombay last Sunday. The hall was so crowded that a section of the staircase gave way, injuring several persons.

THE case of the three English officers against the sowar of H.H. the Nizam's guard for assault, has apparently ended in a fiasco, and the commission adjourned sine die on Monday.

A SURVEY for a direct line between Madras and Nellore will be undertaken shortly.

TYPHUS fever is creating some havoc amongst the workmen engaged on the construction of Jhelum Valley cart-road.

A TRIAL of the Westinghouse and Vacuum Brakes took place in the East Bengal Railway last Saturday, when the Vacuum was reported to be more suitable for India than the other.

LIEUT.-COLONEL W. G. NICHOLSON, R.E. is appointed Military Secretary to Sir Frederick Roberts.

THE death-rate of Bombay, which has been very low for the last few months, has during last week fallen to the extraordinary low rate of 16.64 per 1,000 per annum.

DURING June the total yield of gold from the Mysore mine was 4,461 ounces.

NOTES.

THERE is little or no news of interest or importance from India either by wire or mail.

FROM Burma the Times correspondent at Rangoon telegraphs that the severe sickness up to July 26th continues amongst the garrison of Fort White. The Rangoon Gazette states that Captain Carnegy and Lieutenants Battye and Cunningham are disabled. The Goorkhas not actually in hospital are greatly weakened by sickness. The sick Sepoys have been sent to an adjoining higher ridge, but the change has proved unavailing. The accommodation is miserable, and the rain and fog are so severe and incessant that it is impossible to keep clothes or bedding dry. Telegraphic communication with Haka and Fort White is interrupted.

THE local government recently represented to the Government of India its objection to the rule that the judgeship of Moulmein, an important commercial centre, should be reserved for members of the Burma Commission. The Chief Commissioner asked that the order might be cancelled in order to allow the appointment of a barrister as judge on a future vacancy. The Government of India has refused this request.

THIS decision is gravely unjust, says the Times correspondent, to the commercial community of Moulmein. Under the new system important questions of commercial law will probably be tried by lieutenants in the Staff Corps or police officers, who are numerously represented on the Burma Commission.

THE Legislative Council at Simla has been doing something, if not much. According to its latest proceedings, dated July 10th, here is what it has done:—"At the meeting of the Viceregal Legislative Council to-day the Hon. Mr. Hutchins moved that the Cattle Trespass Amendment Bill be referred to a Select Committee. The hon. member also moved for leave to introduce the Census Bill, and requested the Council to re-enact the provisions of the Act of 1880. The Bill provides for the formal appointment of persons to aid in taking the census, investing them in that capacity with the character of public servants within the meaning of the Penal Code. Also for the enumeration of special aggregates of people, such as in regiments, jails, and hospitals, by the officers in charge if so required. To guard against the loss of schedules or incorrect returns the documents will be retained in custody of the Census Officers, and filled in by them in case of illiterate householders. Provision is made for the proper numbering of houses, and the numbers are not to be effaced before March 31, while the enumerators who undertake duty and fail without reasonable excuse to fulfil it are liable to punishment. The Hon. Sir Andrew Scoble moved for leave to introduce the Bill to amend the Indian Christian Marriage Act, the main features of which are precautions to guard against the possibility of a marriage being solemnised by a person who, though episcopally ordained, does not hold the Bishop's license in the diocese, and to render persons taking a false oath before a Surrogate liable to punishment under the Penal Code. The Bill also provides for a greater regularity in the record of marriages of Native Christians, and extends the jurisdiction to States bordering on, as well as those situated within, the limits of a presidency. Both the Bills were introduced, and the Council then adjourned."

ON the information furnished by the Indian Press we commented some short time ago in pretty strong terms on the way in which British soldiers from India had been treated in the manner of getting employment in the Corps of Commissionaires in Sydney. The Pioneer, from which we then took our information, gives now the following further intelligence:—We reproduced some time ago a letter from the Paying Officer of Imperial Pensions in New South Wales, in which serious allegations were made against the management of the Corps of Commissionaires in Sydney. Among other things it was asserted that when the Corps was disbanded all the men were turned adrift to find employment for themselves; that men of excellent character presented themselves for admission to the corps and were refused admission; and, finally, that the system of fines left the men penniless, or with very little spare cash at the end of the month. Major Hawkins now writes emphatically contradicting these statements, and, as he commanded the corps, it is only fair that his version should be given. The corps, he tells us, had to be broken up, partly owing to the bad conduct of a number of the men, and partly because it was systematically boycotted by the trades union of the colony: but twenty-four out of the twenty-six men on the roll at the date of disbandment were in good permanent situations obtained for them by the corps, while the remaining two had been in permanent situations, but failed to keep them. As for the statement that men with good characters were refused admission, Major Hawkins states that this was true only of those with good paper characters, whose conduct on boardship had, on inquiry, turned out to be bad. Good men, it is added, were receiving from £3 to £4 a week, a wage which could scarcely have been reduced to nothing by fines.

LIES or wonders will never cease in this world. Here is one or either. A Hindoo correspondent writes to the Lahore paper:—"There has died lately at a place called Baorodi, in the district a hermit of great piety and renown at the marvellous old age of a century and a-half, or, as some of the vernacular papers of Bengal say, at the age of 159. The real name of this sage and philosopher was Lokenath Ghoshal. He was a native of Western Bengal, and a Brahmin by birth. At the comparatively young age of eleven, just when he wore the sacred thread, and was installed a twice-born, he left his home, and adopted the hard life of a devotee. It is said of him that he ranged free in wild forests and mountains contemplating the Supreme Being, and thinking of nothing terrestrial. He had been to Mecca, the principal place of pilgrimage of the Mahomedans, and saw that the great Shiva there, who is styled the God of Mecca, and whose touch alone is sufficient to make a Hindoo the sovereign lord of the Universe according to the notions prevalent in Bengal amongst Hindoos. He was in Thibet, Tartary, China, Ceylon, and also in all places where there are any traces of divinity to be found under the sun. In Thibet he is said to have come across many sages and hermits whose silver visage and broad forehead had seen many a deluge and many a creation, and who had successfully weeded out of their mind all desires and passions by concentrating their whole attention on the contemplation of the Almighty. He led a solitary life during his latter days at Baorodi—a little quiet hamlet removed from the haunts of worldly people. He lived only thirty-six years in this village, where he was revered and respected by all. His powers of healing the sick and the afflicted was something wonderful. Diseases which baffled the skill and experience of the best doctors and physicians of the land he healed without recourse to any medicine but by simple touch of his hand. "Thou art healed," said he, as he touched or cast a glance on the afflicted individual, and directly the sick man was restored to health and energy. Many educated and enlightened Baboos, some of them pleaders of the Dacca Judge's Court, became his disciples in his latter days and were his devout admirers. He died like the famous monk of Beda, while teaching his disciples. Such was Lokenath Ghoshal, the Baorodi Brahmachari (devotee) whom a vernacular paper of Dacca extols above the names of Christ and Mahomet, and whose death seems to be a remarkable event—at least among the people of Eastern Bengal.

THE Government of India has reduced the pass-duty on Malwa opium by fifty rupees per chest, making it Rs. 600.

ANGLO-INDIAN PRESS.

THE ECLIPSE AT PATNA.

(Statesman.)

While erudite astronomers were watching the solar eclipse on the 17th instant from diverse stations in India with all the eagerness of scientific enthusiasts, the occasion was kept in due religious form in Patna and all around it by pious Hindoos. Both sides of the Ganges presented a most picturesque scene of throngs of humanity who had temporarily left their dry abode and taken up their stand in water—some knee-deep, some waist-deep, and some up to their neck, all mumbling the mystic incantation. Men, women, and children disported themselves in the muddy water of the Ganges in oblivious confusion of their sexes, and even cattle were led out into the river to be washed of their sins. The river bank presented a variegated sight of crowds, who lined the edge of the river, dressed in all colours, while shops, tents, and all the paraphernalia of an Indian outing helped to complete the medley. Streams of sightseers continually poured through the many alleys and bye-lanes until there was barely room to stand on the bank. No one who has seen a concourse of Indians on festive occasions will deny that they are a quiet and orderly crowd of people who take their pleasures, if not exactly in a sad manner, yet without any display of that exuberance of spirits which characterises the holidays of most European nations. Each gang of pious pilgrims came in an orderly, almost solemn fashion, undressed leisurely on the river bank, took their plunge, and went home satisfied with a pious consciousness, no doubt, that they had done the right thing. There are few festivals in which the women are allowed to take a part. This occasion was, therefore, an exception in which the women were permitted to share with the men the pious ceremony of moral cleansing. Kanats from tents ran into the river, and, thus screened from the public gaze, the females of the more respectable classes were allowed to perform their ablution.

Alms were given away liberally, and many were the mendicants who reaped a harvest on the occasion. But prominent among all was the dom, the lowest of the low classes in India. It is a characteristic feature of this eclipse ceremony to give alms to the dom. He went about, the basket in hand, gathering all he could in it—wheat, barley, rice, pieces of gold and silver, were thrown into the receptacle; and as the time during which he could have his innings was limited, he had to be active on his legs. A dom can claim his share of alms that are given away on this occasion only during the interval the eclipse lasts, and he made very good use of the two or three hours. He went about calling Sona-dan rupan-dan, ghoru-dan, bachi-dan, kanikowri-dan—i.e., "Pray give in alms gold, silver, a horse, a heifer, or even a cracked shell;" and it was marvellous to see how much he collected—everyone gave something.

The story connected with this alms-giving to the doms in particular is an interesting bit of astrologic mythology, and will bear repetition here. Before the beginning of this world, when there was utter chaos and disorder, and the gods were eternally at war with the demons, it was decided to churn the waters of the ocean in order to bring out the good things they contained. So, with the Mandrachal mountain as the pivot, or churning pole (which rested on the back of a tortoise that held on to the earth), the basin of the ocean as the churning vessel, and the Sas-nag, or the great primæval snake, as the churning string, the waters were whirled about in a terrific manner by the giants and gods, who held the churning string at opposite ends. Among other good and evil things that we possess in this world were brought out the "elixir of life," a draught of which ensures eternal life; "wine," which makes this life happy; and "poison," which puts an end to it. None would agree to accept the poison. Siu, one of the gods, bravely attempted to swallow it, but was arrested in the act by the Supreme God. But the poison had already gone down as far as his throat, so his neck henceforth turned blue, and is so represented in all images of him. Then a terrific dispute arose between the gods and the demons as to who should have the "elixir of life." While they were in hot dispute over this point, the chief god, disguised as a very pretty damsel, appeared on the scene, and offered to settle the dispute if she would be accepted by both sides as an umpire. The giants, who were one and all struck with her beauty, readily consented, and the damsel proceeded to distribute the two articles left. She cunningly took the vessel which contained the "elixir of life" in her right hand and the wine in her left, and proceeded to help out the elixir to the gods and the wine to the giants. The latter, who were already charmed with the fair umpire's beauty, soon got inebriated, and paid little heed to what was going on; but one Rao among them, who was more cunning than the rest, and who had kept his wits about him, perceived what was happening, and stole to the side of the gods, and took his seat between the Sun and Moon. So, when it came to his turn, he quietly put his hand out and received his share of the elixir, the distributor being unaware that she was helping a demon who had changed places. But the Sun and the Moon at once perceived the trick, and immediately told the umpire, who was so enraged at being duped by the wily Rao that she struck him with the thali (vessel) she was carrying, and severed him in two. Henceforth Rao, whose lower half was called Kepe, swore eternal enmity to the Sun and the Moon, and on every occasion when he comes round before the sun and the moon he tries to darken their lustre by casting his shadow on them; but it is only temporary, as he is never allowed to remain long in one position. The popular idea is that it is a kind of affliction that comes over the Sun when the shadow of Rao falls on him, and, as Rao is the lowest of the demons, his lineal descendant on earth is the dom, by propitiating whom they propitiate Rao, and induce him to move off quickly, and thus save the Sun from prolonged agony.

There are many popular superstitions connected with the eclipse, chief among which is that women encientes ought not to be asleep while the eclipse lasts, but be up and about, as otherwise the child is sure to be deformed. A child born with a hare-lip, a crooked limb, or any other defect is ascribed to the non-observance of this important law. Even cattle in this condition are not allowed to sit or lie down so long as the eclipse continues, but are kept either standing or are made to walk about. Nothing of any importance is begun so long as the eclipse is on, as the undertaking is certain to end in a failure. Hence, pious Hindoos never begin a journey or perform an "unclean" act during the eclipse. They do not taste any food either until the eclipse is over. Women, as a rule, observe the phenomenon more religiously than men, and give away whatever they can afford in alms on the occasion. The Ganges is the holy river in which all Hindoos ought to bathe on the occasion; but, failing this, any river serves the purpose.

INDIAN RAILWAYS.

(Times of India.)

In Mr. Lawson's interesting little book on Spain of to-day he says:—"Railway progress in Spain is, curiously enough, in a similar stage to what it has reached in India. The skeleton of main lines has been laid down, and the filling up of it with ribs and muscle must begin." Tramways, feeder lines, and provincial railways should be the ribs and muscle of all our existing main lines, which have been laid down since Lord Dalhousie first inaugurated Indian railways. We believe it is the opinion of Sir Charles Elliott, the Minister of Public Works with the Government of India, that the Bombay Presidency has been decidedly backward in the matter of provincial railways. Now that this Government is freed from the burden of a contribution of 17 lakhs to the Imperial Treasury, and from the financial depression which affected every official mind, from the Viceroy and Sir D. Barbour downwards, we trust that his Excellency the Governor in Council will give his earnest attention to the construction of provincial feeder lines. The Bombay Chamber of Commerce, which has already done so much for railway extension, should continue to press the subject on the attention of Government. We fear that with the exception of what may be done by Native Chiefs, there is very little chance of the public taking up railways under the administration of the present head of the Public Works Department. In a vigorous letter to the Manchester Guardian, "Progress" attacks Sir Charles Elliott for his "narrowminded and illiberal policy." Lord Cross invited the public to aid in the development of the country, and promised to meet them fairly, but Sir Charles Elliott said in his speech on the Budget that if Government could borrow at 3 per cent. it was unnecessary to go to a company to ask them to borrow at 3½ per cent. or 4 per cent. He praised two companies, the Bengal and North-West Railway Company and the Delhi-Kalka Railway Company, as affording admirable examples of genuine private enterprise. The former is not paying 3 per cent., its stock is at a discount, and its Directors complain that they have received "none of that often promised and long-expected encouragement from Government in the difficulties with which they have had to contend." With the latter, we understand, difficulties still stand in the way of its construction, and Government have had to offer a subsidy of one and a-half lakhs for the first ten years, and of one lakh for the succeeding ten years. "Progress" considers that Government may as well say at once, "We intend to raise all the necessary capital on the easy terms now open to us, but in doing so the public must lay their account with years of delay in extending the railway system of India to its full requirements." There is all the more reason for the public to agitate for a larger expenditure on railways by Government. If ever the Ahmedabad and Dhollera line is accomplished, it will be entirely due to the influence and energy of Mr. James, the late Collector of Ahmedabad, but with this exception it is hopeless, we fear, to expect the public to take up any other railway construction, at any rate in this Presidency. The B.B. and C.I. Railway have offered to work any broad gauge line connected with their system on remarkably good terms, lending the whole of the rolling-stock, and only taking about 48 per cent. of the receipts for expenses. We trust his Highness the Gaekwar of Baroda will push on with a line from Surat to Khandeish, passing, as it will do, through very fertile country. The G.I.P. Railway will, no doubt, follow the example of its neighbour, and we hope the Government of Bombay will this next cold weather sanction the survey of a line from Munmar to Dhulia, passing through Malegaum, and will endeavour to smooth over the difficulties which are said to still exist in the construction of a tramway between Barsee-road Station and the town of Barsee. The development of the country by railways is, without doubt, the paramount need of India in the interests alike of the Native population and of English merchants, manufacturers, and workmen.

HILL OF THE SACRED KITES.

(Madras Mail.)

Tirukalukundram, or "the hill of the sacred kites," is situated in the Chingleput district, half-way between Chingleput and Sadras. Tirukalukundram is a ridge terminating in a spiked hill about 500 feet above sea level, and is surmounted by a temple dedicated to Siva. The shrine appears to have been patronised and endowed by both Chola and Pandian princes who visited the place, and who benefited by the peculiar properties of the soil and the water of its tanks for the cure of leprosy, &c. The name of the idol is Vedgirivarar, or the god of the hill of the Vedas, who is said to have taken the Vedas under his special protection, and to have, at their request, transferred them into the hill where his temple now stands. Tirukalukundram derives its name of "the hill of the sacred kites" from the fact that every day two kites resort to it to partake of the food that is prepared for them by the pundarum of the place. The kites are said to fly all the way from Benares in the morning, and, after having filled the inner kite, to wing their lazy way to Ramesweran, there to bathe, and thence to subsequently fly on to Benares to sleep. The pundarum—or a Sudra who has devoted himself to the service of the gods—the first thing in the morning goes into the village and begs money of the villagers and of the pilgrims—who resort hither in large numbers. When he has received a sufficient amount he buys some rice, jaggery, milk, and ghee, and goes to the tank to bathe. Having done so, he proceeds to a little mantapam half-way up the hill, where he cooks the rice, &c.; and then resumes his journey to the top of the hill, where he addresses the pilgrims who have there congregated, giving them a short account of the kites. He states that there were originally eight of them, and that at the completion of each yugum two of the birds disappear; and that as three of the yugums have terminated six of the birds have disappeared. After bathing in the Ganges the kites wing their way to the hill, &c.; the pundarum then kneels down and prostrates himself towards the direction from which the birds are expected, and prays to the Rishis, or kites, to make their appearance. In a minute or two the birds are seen to be approaching, and, after once circling the hill in their flight, descend close to the pundarum, who holds out to them the rice, &c., made up into little balls. The kites approach and take the food out of his hand; the pundarum also offers them ghee, and after having partaken thereof, the kites take their departure for Ramesweran. When they are out of sight the pundarum repeats his lecture, then makes another collection, and distributes food to the more necessitous of the pilgrims present.

THE KACHINS.

(Pioneer.)

A very interesting paper has been published in the Burma official Gazette from the Deputy Commissioner of Bhamo, Mr. G. W. Shaw, on the Myauk Kodoung division of Momeik, a tract some fifty miles long by thirty broad, unknown until the other day when our troops were acting against Kau Hlaing, a noted outlaw of those parts, and his following of Kachins, Shans and others. Mr. Shaw describes the tract as a mass of hills some 7,000 feet above sea-level. The only flat ground consists of elevated valleys found here and there between the hills. Rice is cultivated, and a little tea. The tea, however, is said to be bitter and of small value, fetching only one-fifth the price of Taungbaing tea of the same kind. The people say they are sufficiently occupied with growing rice for home consumption, and have not time to look after improving their tea. For the last three years there has been constant petty warfare going on between the Palaings and Kachins. Mr. Shaw notes how the Kachins have been spreading southwards during the last hundred years, securing a permanent footing in most of the circles and driving out the Palaings. The Palaings and Burmese Shans of this State are more peaceful, civilised and industrious than the Kachins; but they cannot hold their own against these hardy and pushing savages. When the Kachins are in a minority they are very submissive and give no trouble; but the time invariably comes when their numbers increase and they rebel, and in the end always get the best of the struggle. Mr. Shaw observes that the Kachins, from their ability to push their way as they do, must have some grit in them, but nothing except punitive expeditions has as yet been done to bring them under effective control, and turn them into useful and orderly subjects. This will have, he says, to be done very soon. In Minglon the prestige of the British Government has emboldened the Sawbwa to tax the Kachins for the first time in their history, and the Momeik Sawbwa has followed his example. The British authorities have not yet ventured on this course, and Mr. Shaw thinks they should not attempt it until they are in a position to enforce their demands promptly. The operations already undertaken have paved the way for the permanent occupation of some posts in the Kachin hills, and the appointment of a special officer or officers to live among them and keep them in order. "Managed by a British officer acquainted with their language and treating them with firmness and justice, the Kachins would probably turn out more orderly and amenable to control than now, corrupted as they are, where we know them best, by the weakness and treachery of Burmese and Shan policy in the past."

THE BENGAL-NAGPUR RAILWAY.

(Englishman.)

Now that the Bengal-Nagpur Railway is rapidly advancing towards completion the interest taken in its progress is increasing proportionately. The Government of Bengal would doubtless have been able to do a good deal in the way of making feeder roads if the construction of the line had been pushed on more vigorously at the Bengal end. It could hardly be expected that Government would devote itself to making roads at one end of the line while the Company was directing its efforts mainly to the work of construction at the other. Now, however, it is to be hoped that Government will give the matter its attention, for it is in the interests of the country traversed by the line as well as of the trade of Calcutta that the line should be successful from the start. At the end of March last the new line was open to the extent of 501 miles, 209 miles having been opened during the year. In addition 150 miles more were laid, but not yet opened for traffic, and this leaves 170 miles more to lay in order to complete the line. Of course, the section to Raigarh has been open for some time, and now that to Sambalpur road is complete, excepting the girder-work of the Eeb Bridge (nine spans of 150 feet girders) and the station buildings. Beyond this point to Goilkeria both earthwork and bridging are far advanced. All the piers of the Brahmini Bridge, also nine spans of 150 feet girders, are well forward, and it was expected that the rails would be laid on both sides of the Brahmini River before the rains began. Between Goilkeria and Aansol, the Saranda Tunnel is being pushed on, while a diversion has been made over the tunnel to enable the platelaying to proceed beyond it. The other day the Damuda Bridge was opened, and now the line is opened at the Bengal end as far as Chakardharpur. The branch line to Umari is also making progress, but in the scarcity of labour it would, we believe, have been well to leave this portion alone till the main line was finished. However, the tunnels between Bilaspur and Khndri are nearly completed, and the earthwork beyond to Umari is done, platelaying having been carried for twenty-five miles out from the latter station. Nothing has been heard lately of the find of coal on the main line, but even if the seam turns out to be of no value it is strange to have to go so far as Umari when the Bengal terminus of the line touches the Barakar field.

THE ROYAL BOTANIC GARDENS.

(Englishman.)

Among the many places of interest in and around Calcutta there is none of which the Presidency may be more justly proud than the Royal Botanic Garden, and it is interesting to note each year the progress that has been made in increasing the beauty and extending the usefulness of this centre of scientific horticulture. Although during last year no new works of importance were carried out, the display of orchids was brought to the greatest perfection it has ever yet attained. This improvement was due partly to the great recent extension of correspondence and interchange with collectors both in India and outside its borders, and partly to improvements in the conservatories and the methods of cultivation. The number of South American orchids in the collection is steadily increasing, and this has been accomplished mainly through exchanges made for indigenous species. A considerable correspondence has been carried on by the Superintendent regarding plants of economic interest, and specimens have been issued to Government officers and others. Much good is done in this way, and at present many questions connected with the preparation of fibres are under consideration. A suggestion that babui grass was a good raw material for paper-making was first made in one of the annual reports of the garden, and it is now largely used in the paper mills of Northern India. The Superintendent, Dr. King, also published during the year a monograph on the jackfruits, aks, and chestnuts of the Indo-Malayan region. The work is illustrated with 104 quarto figures drawn by the garden artists, and lithographed mostly at the Government School of Art. One feature of the garden which attracts little public interest, but which from a scientific point of view is exceedingly important, is the herbarium of dried and named plants. This department involves much troublesome work, which can only be done by a skilled botanist. During last year 6,000 specimens were received and over 9,000 specimens sent out to various scientific bodies both in India and in Europe. During last year the gardens received a grant of Rs. 1,000 from the Agricultural Department for explorations in Burma and Assam. This was turned to good account, one Native collector going into the Shan Hills from which many interesting specimens were obtained, and another penetrating into the Aka country, who was a little less fortunate. Dr. Prain visited the Andaman and Coco Islands, and a Eurasian collector was subsidised in Cachar. The little branch garden at Darjiling, known as the Lloyd Botanic Garden, was carefully looked after during the year by Messrs. Kennedy and Hartless. In connection with this garden efforts have been made to plant the station with young trees, but this is said to be a thankless task. For the present the happiness and unchecked freedom of milk-cows and goats is considered by many of the residents a more important matter.

ARMY CLOTHING.

(Civil and Military Gazette.)

When the amalgamation of the Madras and Bombay Military Clothing Departments was announced last year we said the arrangement could hardly be expected to work satisfactorily. Already one of the British regiments in the Bombay Presidency has complained about the quality of the clothing supplied by the Madras Department. The clothing was examined by the usual committee and found to be inferior both in make and quality. The Madras authorities admit that it is not up to the scale pattern, nor as good as the high standard the Bombay troops have apparently been used to, but that the clothing is as good as can be turned out in Madras, and, if inferior, is at least serviceable. This is only one instance of the kind of thing which may be constantly expected if one Presidency has to supply another with clothing. If the presidential system is to be kept up each Presidency should be complete in every department of supply. On the other hand, if it is intended to pave the way for the easy introduction of the four army corps scheme, as we hope it is, then it would be preferable to have four clothing centres, in the same way as there are now four commissariat, four ordnance, and four military accounts centres. Failing this, there should be one department for the whole of India, situated in a rational and accessible centre. In a few years' time there seems to be no reason why Karachi should not be our great military store depôt, not only in the matter of clothing, but for all imported goods that may be urgently required for the North-West. At any rate, the idea will bear a great deal of consideration, both on the score of economy and despatch.

CIVIL vs. ROYAL ENGINEERS.

(Englishman.)

It does not appear that Sir George Campbell's obstruction was caused by any action of the Civil Engineers' Association, though they are pressing for a full inquiry into all their grievances, which extend to the constitution of the Department in addition to the exchange question. Our London correspondent does not appear to think that there is any other point than exchange upon which Parliament should interfere with the discretion of the Government of India; but so far as we understand the case, it is not a question of personal selection that they desire to raise, where the discretion of the Executive could not well be interfered with, but is one of the organisation of the Public Works. If it be possible, as is asserted by the Civil Engineers, that the Royal Engineers so manage the Department through the medium of the Secretariat and Revenue Branch of State Railways as to keep it entirely to themselves, it is time that a question was raised on grounds of public policy, and not merely out of justice to the Civil Engineers who were led to believe it to be an open Department. Certainly experience on the Sind-Pishin Railway, both as regards cost and construction, are not such as to inspire confidence in the absolute handing over of the Public Works to the Royal Engineers, even as regards railways that are military lines, while there appears to be no particular reason why they should be concerned with commercial lines at all. Further frontier lines up the Gomal Pass and in other directions are now being talked of, and therefore the present is a very good time to raise the question of a full inquiry into how these things are done, and for the Government to oppose this on the ground of undue interference with their executive power is begging the question, and looks as if a full inquiry would not be favourable to the existing order of things. It may appear extremely desirable to the Royal Engineers, who advise the Government of India in the Public Works to lay down the principle that they should have the monopoly of certain places, but this ought at least to be formally enunciated, so that both those who enter the Department and the public who pay for it may know what to expect.

THE SOMALI COAST EXPEDITION.

(Civil and Military Gazette.)

It is now five months since, in January last, a small expedition set out from Aden to punish one of the tribes on the Somali coast, and yet nothing has appeared in the official Gazette up to date regarding the conduct of the operations that took place. The whole affair did not last a fortnight; but, as there was considerable loss of life attending one of the small engagements, we think the public have some right to be made acquainted with the official account of the circumstances. The expedition was about 300 strong of various arms, cavalry, infantry, and sappers, as well as a small naval detachment with machine guns. They embarked at Aden in the Indian Government steamer for Zeyla. Here they were reinforced by the Zeyla detachment. The enemy were met a few miles inland; and, after a slight engagement, a large number of their cattle and sheep were captured by the British. It appears that this was one of the principal objects of the expedition, namely, to punish the tribe by taking away their live stock by force of arms. No doubt this was as severe a form of punishment as could possibly be inflicted upon one of the Somali Coast tribes, and it was therefore necessary, in order to make the punishment complete and effective, to take strong measures to guard the captured live stock, and so prevent its being recaptured by the enemy. A detachment of the British force was told off to bring in the sheep, we believe; but it was suddenly surprised by the enemy, who inflicted a loss upon our side of one native officer and twelve sowars killed. Whether more men were lost during the expedition we are not aware, but it seems that the loss of thirteen out of 300 against an enemy without firearms, we presume, is unprecedented, and is also, in our opinion, another proof of how prone we are to underrate our enemy. That a detachment of trained men armed with modern firearms, should be slaughtered to the number of thirteen by a force of tribesmen probably armed with spears, argues one of two things, namely, that either the trained detachment was too small, or that they allowed themselves to be surprised without their arms. As no official account has been published with regard to the force of the enemy, the strength of the detachment, or the exact circumstances of the case, we must refrain from hazarding a definite opinion. Knowing, however, the discipline and courage of our troops, it looks very much as if the detachment was too small for the purpose for which it was required.

MR. DALGLEISH'S MURDER.—THE DETAILED NARRATIVE.

(Englishman.)

At the very moment when attention is directed afresh to the murder of Mr. Dalgleish by the capture and reported suicide of Dad Muhammad Khan, the full particulars of the crime have just reached India, and we are now able to make them known for the first time. An investigation is a terribly tedious affair in Central Asia, and communications with India are neither frequent nor rapid. Consequently it is hardly surprising that two years should have elapsed since the death of the notable trading traveller, and that we are only now in possession of the actual details of the crime by which he fell. The drama of bloods, however, loses nothing of tragic interest from age. Indeed, the whole circumstances as now revealed throw into striking relief the adventurous nature of the frontier life which Dalgleish had been pursuing successfully for many years, as well as the sombre scene in which his rough, roving, hazardous career was finally extinguished.

The occurrence took place on the 8th of April, 1888, while Mr. Dalgleish was travelling from Ladakh to Yarkund on one of his regular trading expeditions. The date of the murder is indubitably fixed, not only by the evidence of Mr. Dalgleish's servants, and the known dates on which he arrived at previous stages of his journey, but by a diary which the deceased kept, and which was found in the pocket of his overcoat. In this diary the following entry appeared under date the 7th of April:—"Camp Chijash-Jilgah. Reached here this afternoon after two long marches through deep snow. Both men and ponies are very much done up owing to the hard breathing, severe cold, and toiling through the snow. The hard and trying work of cutting and treading a road through the snow has fallen to a Tartar and myself, the other members of the party being perfectly useless at such work. They give in to the hard breathing, and have no pluck. Two of my Tartars are snow-blind and all but useless." Mr. Dalgleish was accompanied by two servants named Muhammad Jan and Funchak, and also by two Mohamedan followers called Bhots, besides the men in charge of his baggage animals.

The servants returned to Ladakh with their master's body, and although there was a little conflict in their testimony they were quite agreed on certain main points. They stated that Dad Muhammad, who had left Leh after their departure, came up accompanied by a Bhot, and joined the Sahib's party at Yachuskum. It must be remembered that Muhammad Jan was an old friend of Mr. Dalgleish, who had known him for fully five years, and three years before when the Chinese turned Mr. Dalgleish out of Yarkund, Dad Muhammad came to his help and supplied him with his own ponies. Dad Muhammad used constantly to travel between Leh and Yarkund carrying bread and tea with him, and had often received presents from Mr. Dalgleish. Also when Mr. Ney Elias was going to Yarkund Mr. Dalgleish supplied him with ponies which Dad Muhammad had for hire, saying, "These horses belong to a friend of mine." The events which followed the arrival of Dad Muhammad at Mr. Dalgleish's camp show not only the friendly relations that existed between the two men, but they also give an insight into Mr. Dalgleish's kindly mode of treating the people of the country with whom he came in contact, which had made his trading expeditions so singularly successful.

No sooner had Dad Muhammad arrived than quite a friendly greeting took place, and Mr. Dalgleish asked him into his tent to have some tea. After that they proceeded in company from stage to stage, often taking their food together. Mr. Dalgleish distributed a part of Dad Muhammad's baggage among his own men, and often in the evening after the day's march he would spend a short time in the Osman's tent. Nothing particular happened until the party arrived at Chijash-Jilgah, where Mr. Dalgleish's tent was pitched about thirty yards from that of the Yarkundi's. Here, according to one account, Mr. Dalgleish had some tea, and Dad Muhammad came up with his hookah, but declined to take tea on the ground that he was feeling unwell. This was the first indication, if it can be called so, of the treachery he was contemplating. As to what happened after this the statements of Mr. Dalgleish's servants are somewhat at variance. According to Muhammad Jan, the Yarkundi servant, the Sahib entered his tent, changed his travelling coat for a warm fur coat, and went, as usual, to Osman's tent, where Dad Muhammad had preceded him. Shortly after this a shot was heard, and on Muhammad Jan going up to see what had happened, Dad Muhammad came up with a sword in his hand and said: "You will also be treated by me like this kaffir here." Whereupon Muhammad Jan ran away, chased by Dad Muhammad, who tripped. The Yarkundi escaped round the back of the tent, and established himself between two hadjis who were of the party, and it was only on the intercession of these men that his life was spared by his pursuer.

It was now dark, and there is no reliable evidence as to what occurred. Three witnesses speak to having heard a shot, but there is only secondary evidence as to one man who heard Mr. Dalgleish call out "Dad Muhammad, don't behave to me thus." A general panic seems to have seized all present, although the evidence is agreed in throwing the entire blame of the murder on Dad Muhammad, and not on his party. One witness says, "We were all afraid of his gun and sword," and another, that he was acting like a madman, and they all bolted for their lives. Not only did the faithless followers make no attempt to save their master, but for the next few days we find them slavishly obeying every order of Dad Muhammad. After Muhammad Jan's life was spared Dad Muhammad adjourned with some of his followers into Mr. Dalgleish's tent, and ordered the servants to get a hookah for him and also some tea, and then a conference was held. Mr. Dalgleish's dog was on his bed when Dad Muhammad came in, and he ordered it to be carried to the Sahib's corpse, and there strangled close to his head, an order which was carried out by two of his men. Mr. Dalgleish's two servants and the Bhots were then ordered to go to sleep in front of the tent under a mound, and not stir at the risk of their lives. Dad Muhammad and a fakir of his party who had seized Mr. Dalgleish's sword and gun sat up watching all night.

In the morning Dad Muhammad ordered the men to serve him just as they had served the Sahib, and said he would see that all the wages due were paid when he got to Shahidullah. One of the Bhots made contradictory statements about the men having their hands tied behind their backs, and their pig-tails cut off, while Muhammad Jan was said to have had his beard cropped by Dad Muhammad himself with a pair of scissors. Mr. Dalgleish is said to have started on his last journey from Ladakh with thirteen pony loads of goods, including his personal effects and packages, and all these Dad Muhammad appropriated, leaving only a few minor things like cups and saucers, which were recovered. On arriving at Wahab-Jirgali, Dad Muhammad ordered the men to fetch brushwood for fuel and snow for melting down into water, and he then dismissed Mr. Dalgleish's servants with a message "to the Wazir." The message was to the effect that he was sorry he could not write a letter, as pen and ink were not handy; that the Bhots would take at least ten days before they could get back with news to Leh; that meantime he would be the lord of the jungle, and a party of Punjabis would only die of cold, and could not get at him. He is also said to have added that he could not well go to Yarkand, but would either make off in the direction of Kunjut or live among the Kirghiz. Muhammad Jan and his companions declare that they returned immediately to Mr. Dalgleish's camp, and, putting the body in a sack, hastened back as fast as reduced provisions and exhausted ponies would allow them. When they arrived at Shyok they were among friends. The body when brought into Ladakh was in a wonderful state of preservation. It was duly buried in the cemetery there by Mr. Redslob, a Moravian missionary.

CEYLON AND THE DEFENCE OF TRINCOMALIE

(Times of Ceylon.)

The report of the Second Annual Meeting of the Ceylon Association in London is of more than usual interest from the important information conveyed in the remarks of Sir William Gregory who presided. Furthermore, we have every reason for believing that Sir William only gave the Colony timely warning of a demand of the most iniquitous nature which is about to be made upon us by the Treasury and the War Office. It appears that, so far from acquiescing in the protest which has already been sent home from the Legislative Council of Ceylon regarding the increase which it is now proposed to make in our Military Contribution, the Home authorities have appointed a Committee, which is now sitting, to consider amongst other things the contribution to be paid by Ceylon to the Imperial Treasury in respect to the entire system of defences existing in the island. This Committee, it is believed in London, intend to propose to the Colonial Office to mulct the island of such sum in excess of the Rs. 600,000 we now pay annually, as may be shown to be necessary for the naval and military defence of Trincomalie. Such a demand is even more unjust and unbearable than that which the complaisance of Sir Hercules Robinson forced on us for many years, and of which we were only partially relieved on Sir Andrew Gordon's arrival. The iniquity and injustice of this exaction is manifest to every resident in the island acquainted with the condition of things at Trincomalie, which might be bombarded and captured by a foreign enemy with no more inconvenience to the rest of the island or its commercial and industrial enterprise than to those of any other Indian city. Bombay and Calcutta are just as much interested in the defence of Trincomalie as we are, and to ask this colony alone to contribute of its scanty resources to maintain a head-quarter station for the Imperial Navy in Eastern waters is the very acme of official wrong-headedness and injustice. Burdens that may rightly be fixed upon us we should cheerfully bear, irksome though they may be, and we ourselves would welcome such an addition to our annual military contribution as would suffice to support the cost of another battery of European artillery at, and a proper torpedo defence of, Colombo; but it is inconceivable that any attempt should be made to wring from this colony any proportion of the cost of defending Trincomalie. In such an emergency we turn with confidence to H.E. the Governor. With his support and that of the official and unofficial members of the Legislature we ought to be able to resist this last attempt at Downing-street theft.

THE "TRIBUTE" OF INDIA.

(Pioneer.)

That assiduous perverter of economic fact, Mr. Dadabhai Naoroji, has been favouring the readers of India with another sermon on the "tribute" India pay to England. He takes the years 1879-88, and finds that the average exports from the United Kingdom during that period were valued at 307 millions nominal sterling, while the value of the imports was 407 millions. On the other hand, taking the figures for the Indian trade for the corresponding period, he finds that while the average value of the exports was 82 millions nominal sterling that of the imports was only 64 millions. Putting these two familiar facts together—that England imports more han she exports, and that a contrary rule holds good for India.—Mr. Naoroji contends that “under natural economic circumstances” Indian imports also ought to exceed her exports by about 32 per cent. There is no word which has enabled sophists to palm off fallacies on an undiscerning vulgar more frequently and easily than the word natural. Rousseau taught that because it was natural for savages to do without laws, therefore the world should discard civilisation and revert to the golden time when “wild in woods the noble savage ran.” and the eighteenth century screamed applause as at a new evangel. Nor in everyday life is there anything more common than to find stupidity and folly excused on the ground that it is “natural.” Mr. Naoroji’s argument depends on a similar juggle. It is in reality no more natural that the balance of trade in India should be the same as in England than that a youth of twenty should have grey hair and gouty limbs. Considered from a commercial and economic point of view India is young, and England is aged. The latter, therefore, has immense accumulations of capital and invests in foreign lands; the former has no capital, and has therefore to look elsewhere for the means to develop her resources. In the case of England, the balance of imports over exports is the return of foreign investments; in the case of India, the excess of exports is simply the interest on the capital she cannot provide herself—capital which is none the less profitable to the country where it is invested, because the return on a portion of it comes, not in a shape commercially rateable, but in secure frontiers and good administration. If Mr. Naoroji keeps on attempting to persuade people of the reality of this “tribute” bogey, we shall come, in time, to think it is “natural” for him to be nonsensical.

GOOD NEWS, INDEED!

(Civil and Military Gazette.)

Hurroo! for the tiligram splendid
That heads all the papers to-day!
Sure we feared, now his service was inded,
Our “Bobs” would be goin’ away.
But his time, so they say, is extended
Another two years, may be more,
And the army he shuperintended
Is dhrinkin his health wid a roar.
Ashtore!
That would warm his brave heart to the core.
Could he hear it in Simla, the Darlin’!
Where high in his grandeur he dwells,
Dictatin’ his Ginerall Ordhers
An’ dinin’ the Viceregal swells;
For in spite of the glory an’ splendour
Surroundin’ his feather’d shako
His heart is still gentle and tinder.
He cares for poor Tommy below,
And so,
Our gratitude, Boys, let us show.
Never talk of Napoleon or Naro,
Both ginerals grand in their day,
But ould Oirland’s modern haro
At fightin’ would show them the way.
Thim Ancients was famed for the total
Of foes they had slaughtered in fight
But to shin up the steep Peiwar Kotal
In the dark on a could winther’s night,
Was a sight
Bedad! would have bother’d thim quite.
And her Ladyship—Angels assist her!
A noble invintion she plann’d
For to bring out the good Nursing Sisther
To tind on this plague-stricken land.
Poor Tommy is given to cursing
But his blessings to Heaven ascend
When he thinks of the illigant nursing
Her Ladyship’s bounty will send—

When he’s sick he will ne’er want a friend.
Thin, long life to Sir Frederick Roberts!
The gallantest soldier on earth,
And more power to his kind-hearted Lady,
And the land that has given him birth!
The Rooshians may prate of invadin’,
Well, let thim come on, an’ they dar’,
An’ they’ll find we’ve a Ginerall ladin’
That knows his way round Candahar—Hurrah!
Faith he’ll soon sind thim back to their Czar.

LATAKIA

RAILWAYS AND TAXATION.

(Englishman.)

The action of Government in passing a Railway Act which exempts railway administrations from local taxation on and after the 1st of May, and then notifies in June they are to continue paying as before until further orders, is not calculated to impress the public with a sense of business capacity. “Lokil Stuff” appears to have an unfortunate influence upon the minds of all who are brought into contact with it. Surely, it was not too much to expect that in modifying abuses so notorious as those which have arisen between Railways and Local Boards the details at least would have been well thought out before any step was taken. The provisions of the Railway Act as they now stand appear to be perfectly reasonable and just, namely, that a Railway may be called upon to pay such contributions as an officer appointed for that purpose may consider fair. The solution would have been simple and effectual if only proper steps had been taken to arrange the details, and we trust that abrogation of this section of the Act is only temporary. It is a matter of common knowledge that all over India the local taxation on railways is excessive, while in some cases it is absolutely illegal. Probably it is only the prospect of redress by the withdrawal of the power of assessment from local bodies that has induced the companies to submit hitherto rather than go to law. The matter is one of public interest, and not merely a private grievance of the railways, because such taxes if they exceed the bounds of fair remuneration for what the railway receives are simply transit dues, and as such are equally opposed to sound financial principles. If it be a State line or Guaranteed Railway not earning the minimum, this portion of the deficit is directly made good from the general taxation of the country, which is thus burdened to support the mal-administration of the Municipalities. If the railways do pay, still if there be heavy taxation to be met for which they get no adequate return, they cover it by raising their rates and thus obstructing the trade of the country. A fair and independent report on the relative taxation of railway property and of adjacent property owned by private individuals in Municipalities would give some curious results, especially if what the railways get for their money be taken as a measure of what they should pay.

BENGAL

(July 8.)

ARRANGEMENTS are being made for the removal of the Leper Asylum, Calcutta, from its present site. The land at present occupied by the asylum is estimated to be worth nearly a lakh of rupees, and with the sale proceeds another site will be acquired by Government somewhere in the suburbs not yet fixed. The new institution will be under a governing body, to which members will be nominated by Government, the Municipal Corporation, and the District Charitable Society. Pending the passing of the Leper Bill, the rules of the institution will require an inmate to undertake on admission to remain in the asylum, and anyone insisting upon being discharged will be denied readmission. The District Charitable Society will make over trusts amounting to some Rs. 20,000.

On the 28th ult. the Dacca Shibalooy steam tramway scheme came on for sanction before the District Board of Dacca. It was submitted to a sub-committee for consideration and report, with Mr. Hare as chairman, and Mr. Garth and four Native gentlemen as members. The District Engineer has estimated the entire cost of its construction to be at ten lakhs and fifty-two thousand rupees, including rolling-stock. It includes also cost of two steamers required for crossing the Padma and Dhaleswari rivers, which amounts to ninety thousand rupees. There are no engineering difficulties in the way; only four canals are to be bridged over, which will cost Rs. 1,60,000. The line will tap a rich, prosperous, and populous tract of East Bengal, and promises success.

In his review of the police administration of the town of Calcutta for the past year, Sir Steuart Bayley very wisely, says the Pioneer, draws attention to the absurd leniency of the sentences frequently passed by magistrates in cases where cruelty to animals is concerned. Thanks in a great measure to the energy of the Society for the prevention of such brutality, over 98 per cent. of the persons arrested last year were convicted and received some punishment; but until magistrates learn to appreciate at its proper value the gravity of the offence, these punishments will not have their due effect. The difficulty is that in many cases it is not so much the knowledge as the sensibility of the magistrate which is deficient.

MADRAS.

(July 9.)

THE Bank of Madras has declared a dividend for the past half-year at the rate of 12 per annum. The net earnings are

Rs. 5,28,000, which, including Rs. 26,000 brought forward from the last half-year, have been disposed of as follows:—Rs. 3,00,000 in payment of dividend; Rs. 50,000 to reserve fund, and Rs. 2,04,000 carried forward. The reserve now amounts to Rs. 14,00,000.

A HYDERABAD vernacular paper gives currency to the following curious story:—"The daughter of a respectable English gentleman living in Chudderghaut fell in love with one of the Arabs who formed the guard at her father's gate. The cause of her attraction was that he was a good singer. The nikka ceremony was performed by an Arab chief, as is their custom, over dates. The Kazi did not wish to enter the marriage in the register, but the young lady went to live with her bridegroom and his comrades in the guard, who subscribed between themselves Rs. 7,000 as her dowry. The parents are said to be dissatisfied with the marriage."

THE scheme for the employment of Native military pensioners in civil capacities is working extremely well in the Madras Presidency. Colonel Leigh Hunt, Superintendent of Pensions, reports that over 3,000 men have already been found posts, and he is justified in quoting this as a proof of the high estimation in which the services of ex-sepoys are held by employers generally, official and non-official. None but men with good characters are borne on the employment registers, and the public are warned against engaging others who offer themselves without previous application to their pension officers. At the present time there are some hundreds of pensioned sepoys to choose from, owing to the disbandment of three Madras infantry regiments.

BOMBAY.

(July 11.)

PROFESSOR LINGARD, who has been appointed Bacteriologist, &c., at the College of Science, Poona, has arrived from England.

MR. A. BARRETT, Professor of English Literature, Elphinstone College, has been granted privilege leave for one month.

MR. E. G. OLIVER, Assistant Conservator of Forests, Third Grade, has been promoted to the Second Grade.

WE regret to hear that Major Selby has resigned the Standing Committee. His vigour and independence will be sorely missed there.

SURGEON W. H. QUICKE, on being relieved by Surgeon-Major F. C. Barker, M.D., F.R.C.S.I., at Rajkote, will act as Civil Surgeon, Kaira.

MR. L. H. SPENCE, District Superintendent of Police, Kaira, has been allowed privilege leave for three months.

MR. J. D. S. FITZMAURICE is appointed, on the return to duty of Mr. M. B. Baker, to do duty as Assistant Judge and Sessions Judge at Poona.

CAPTAIN F. E. JOHNSON, Royal Artillery, acts as Cantonment Magistrate at Deesa, vice Captain W. A. Thompson.

KURRACHEE is, says the writer of "Notes by the Way" in the Civil and Military Gazette, having an unusually dull season this year. The leading members of society have been seized with a desire to see England again, and the new generation are not so generally useful. It is actually five weeks since Kurrachee has had a dance! Possibly the ladies are exhausted after the series of entertainments in honour of the visit of the H.M.S. Boadicea, whose arrival in Kurrachee was quite an event. In fact, the oldest Sindi cannot remember having seen a flagship in the harbour before. The merchants were jubilant, as it was an excellent advertisement for the capabilities of the harbour. There is no doubt that Kurrachee port is daily increasing in importance, and rumours are flying about that before long the English troopships will land the reliefs for the Punjab and North-West at Kurrachee.

It will be remembered that when the foundation stone of the new Petit Leper Asylum was laid about a few months ago at Trombay, Sir Dinshaw Manockjee Petit alluded in his speech to the treatment of leprosy by a Native hakim, named Damodher Megjee. The latter recently applied to Surgeon-General Pinkerton with letters of recommendation from Sir D. M. Petit, Bart., Mr. Vurjeevandas Madhowdas, and Dr. Edaljee Nusserwanjee, to allow him to treat as an experimental measure leprosy cases in the local hospitals. The Surgeon-General wrote back to the applicant to say that as lepers were not admitted in the hospitals, Mr. Damodher might apply to the committee of the Albless Leper Asylum for permission to treat the patients at that asylum. Mr. Damodher has written to the committee for necessary permission, but there has been yet no reply sent to his communication. It is said that two lepers are at present in Mr. Damodher's treatment, and they are making satisfactory progress.

NORTH-WEST PROVINCES AND PUNJAB.

(July 9.)

THE Raja of Bhinga has been appointed a member of the Police Committee of the North-West Provinces.

SIR STEUART BAYLEY'S son, in the Political Department, Rajputana, is likely to become Private Secretary to his Honour.

THE Fine Arts Exhibition at Mussoorie was opened on Friday last by Sir John Hudson. About 100 persons were present. The number of exhibits is smaller than last year. The weather is bad, and the light not good enough to criticise the pictures on their merits.

It will be remembered that during the floods of last year a portion of the town of Ballia in the North-West Provinces was inundated, and fears for its safety were entertained. For years the Ganges has been cutting away its left bank, and during the present rise, which is unprecedented for this season of the year, the river is reported to be making a dead set for the town. Nothing that the Government have tried in the way of protective works has proved of any avail, and this monsoon will see the destruction of a portion at any rate of the civil station and city, and may necessitate the removal of the district head-quarters to some other locality.

The following is from the Pioneer:—"Year after year we find the leaders of the Eurasian community in the North-West Provinces appealing to their fellows, as Mr. Chick did to Mrs. Dombey, to 'make an effort,' and year after year passes without the effort being made. A meeting of the Association was held at Allahabad on Friday evening, but the tone of the annual report and of the speakers was as dispirited and dismal as the attendance was meagre. 'What were they to think,' asked the Rev. Mr. Hackett, 'of a community which had a difficulty in getting up a quorum of twenty-five at its annual meeting?' What, indeed, unless that it is a community which might as well be without annual meetings altogether. The president, we are told, declared himself 'quite disheartened and almost heart-broken' at the lack of interest taken by the Eurasian community in the Association, and no wonder. For our own part, we think that people who will do nothing to help themselves, from whose indifference and stolid apathy it is impossible to strike the tiniest spark of interest and enthusiasm, have very little claim to be helped by others, even if the help of others by itself could do them much good, which it certainly cannot."

BURMA.

(July 9.)

OUTSIDE jail the Burman is popularly supposed to be rather indolent than otherwise; but Dr. Lethbridge, in his latest report on the administration of the Jail Department in Bengal, states that in prison, though he is a dangerous customer to deal with on account of his instability of character, his impulsive nature, and his great impatience of restraint, his capacity for work is superior to that of other Native convicts. These two characteristics together have led the jail authorities to suggest a ticket-of-leave scheme for their special behoof, and the proposals on this subject are now before the Government of India.

WE take the following from the Englishman:—"A curious lawsuit is pending at Mandalay in which a Burman sues the Bombay-Burma Trading Corporation for sixteen lakhs of rupees. The applicant desired to sue in forma pauperis. The history of the case goes back to the three years preceding the annexation, when the applicants and other foresters agreed to work timber in the Pyinmana and other forests for the Trading Company. These foresters allege that they worked out 56,177 logs for their employers during the year mentioned, but finding that they were not paid what they expected, they put the matter before the then Supreme Court of Burma, the Hlootdaw. Their claim was for expenses incurred in working out the timber and for money remaining due to them. It appears to have been mutually agreed that the Forest Office registers should be examined, and a commission was appointed with one representative on behalf of the claimants, one for the defendants, and one for the Burmese Government. The commission having finished its report, the Hlootdaw delivered a remarkable judgment. The Court found that beyond doubt the 50,000 logs had been artfully extracted without paying the Royal revenue. It was therefore ordered that the claim of the plaintiffs should be paid in full, and also a fine of double the amount of the Royal revenue. This decree was delivered on the 12th of August, 1885, but the claimants were never able to enforce it. The plaintiffs will need something more now than the judgment of the Hlootdaw to support their claim."

IN order to prevent the reserves of Martini-Henry and Snider ammunition maintained in Fort Jhansi becoming too old, the British and Native infantry regiments located there will draw their practice ammunition to the extent available from the reserves in the fort.

NATIVE PRESS.

THE PRESIDENCY ARMIES.

(Hindu.)

The Military authorities at Simla are reported to be dissatisfied with the efficiency of the presidency armies, and especially of that of this presidency, and the present method of recruitment. They are consequently inclined more on its effacement than on its improvement. They are charmed with the excellent fighting materials that the table-land of Afghanistan, the province of Nepal and the Punjab furnish. If the sturdier Afghan, the Goorka, and the Sikh excel the Madras-see and the Bombayite in build, stature, powers of endurance and prowess, why should they not be given preference and made to supersede in large numbers the less strong and manly sepoys available in other parts of India? The chief and probably the only merit of the new scheme is the superior fighting qualities of the races referred to above, to whom the sepoys of our Presidency are forced to make room. And it must be conceded that "It would be difficult, if not impossible, to find anywhere a race so thoroughly fitted for soldiering by disposition, habit, traditions, religion as the Afghan nation," and this observation applies equally to the Sikhs and the Goorkhas. But there are considerations equally weighty that ought to weigh with the statesmen responsible for the well-being of the Empire, of which the purely military man at Simla scarcely takes note of. The effect of ready compliance with the demands of the latter cannot but prove disastrous in several respects. Firstly, the rate at which the demartialisation of the Indian races proceeds will be accelerated, so much so that before the expiry of a decade or two after the adoption of the new scheme, recruitment of a single sepoy from the existing sources of supply would well-nigh be impossible. The Indian Army would be a close preserve which certain select races will preponderate in, nay, exclusively monopolise. It is with a view to equip ourselves strongly against troublous times that we are asked to efface the policy so successfully followed since the establishment of the British supremacy in India. And it is therefore worthy of dispassionate consideration whether the new policy would serve that end as best as its originators would have us believe. We hope not. The complete extinction of soldierly instincts in all provinces would be a calamity of no small significance. Firstly, the Government will have to face the danger of being unable to raise sufficient militia for local or imperial purposes when the thread by which hangs the peace of India is cut asunder. Secondly, the fate of England's supremacy in the East would to a great extent have been consigned to the keeping of a few races, and if by any unforeseen contingency the Afghans are armed against us the supply from the borders of Afghanistan would be arrested. And there would be the spectacle of our opposing to the Afghans their own kith and kin, with what success time alone can show. If military spirit is fast dying out in the parts that have longest enjoyed the blessing of undisturbed peace, the remedy is certainly not to hasten its complete disappearance, but to make a strenuous attempt to revive and foster such a spirit. And the past military history of Madras and other provinces prove that such an attempt will not be wholly unavailing. At such a time the representatives of England in the East cannot be too careful in the proposals they make, especially so if they desire to subvert the old order of things; and it must be distinctly understood that it is easier to extinguish military spirit than to create it, and that a brand-new policy may not be the safest, even though its promoters are anxious as others in the effective reform of the Indian Army.

THE Cantonment Code will comprise about eight chapters, dealing with the old difficulty as to immovable property, and also with general administration, the cantonment fund, general sanitation, public convenience, public health, and statistics. Four of the chapters are, we believe, already drafted, and the remainder are well advanced.

THE forthcoming number of the Indian Church Quarterly Review will contain two important papers, one by the Bishop of Bombay on "The Liturgies of the Anglican Communion," and the other by the Rev. R. M. Benson, Superior of the Society of St. John the Evangelist, Oxford, on "The Divine Purpose and Inspiration of the Christian Scriptures."

IN Cachar, it is alleged by Silchar, a vernacular paper, that the substitution of the new form of accounts in place of the old orthodox one in revenue collections has resulted in confusion. Under the present system there is no means, it is said, of ascertaining whether a particular sum which a mohurir has collected from a mirasdar has been deposited in the treasury, and as the challans are now destroyed after two years, there is no means of detecting errors of account. According to the writer, the system is almost certain to lead to defalcations.

ASSAM AND CEYLON TEA CROPS.

Assam-proper and Ceylon will this year be very nearly matched in the tea crops likely to be harvested within their bounds; and it should be extremely interesting to watch henceforward the development of each country under tea production and export. We are apt to regard "Assam" as if it really represented the great Indian tea enterprise altogether; but of 115,000,000 lbs. expected to be harvested in 1890-91 for all India, less than half, or 41,295,044 lbs., is put down for "Assam proper." Now against this, Ceylon may ship 47,000,000 lbs. in the present year, or possibly more. Already up to June 19th the return is 22,000,000 lbs.—say, 24,000,000 lbs. to July 3rd—and the larger shipments have uniformly been in the latter half of the year.

The Indian Tea Association, as we have indicated, treat "Assam" separately from "Cachar and Sylhet," the current tea crop of the latter being given at 33,385,650 lbs.; but unfortunately they do not give us the acreages of cultivated land on which their estimates are based; and when we turn to the official records we invariably find that "Assam" includes "Sylhet and Cachar." One official return, for instance, gives the area under tea in Assam in 1889 as 227,249 acres—196,689 acres mature and 30,560 acres young teas. Another Indian Bluebook return makes the total for 1888-89 as 216,676 acres, but this extent, we find, on going over the detailed statement, is made up as follows:—

	Acres.		Acres.
Cachar	equal to 55,401	Sibsagar	equal to 47,377
Sylhet	" 44,145	Lakhimpur	" 32,144
Coalpara	" 367	Nagar Hills	" —
Kamrup	" 6,227	Khasa and	" —
Dairang	" 20,012	Jaintia Hills	" 30
Nowgong	" 10,973	Garro Hills	" —

Total acres 216,676

Deducting 99,546 acres for Cachar and Sylhet, we have only 117,130 acres for "Assam proper" to represent the estimated current crop of 48,295,344 lbs., and this shows an average out-turn of over 400 lbs. per acre. In the case of Cachar and Sylhet the crop estimated is equal to 340 lbs. an acre, and that without making allowance in either case for immature tea. Ceylon, on the other hand, will gather her 47 to 48 million lbs. from a considerably larger area nominally; for even leaving out all tea planted within the past three years we cannot reduce the area below 150,000 to 160,000 acres. Of course the Assam tea fields are on the whole much older than ours, and if we suppose that 105,000 acres represent the mature tea yielding 48 million lbs. we may get a fair idea of the difference in yield. The explanation of course is that Assam was all planted on virgin land (forest or otherwise), whereas the greater proportion of Ceylon tea is found on old coffee plantations varying from those that scarcely yielded any coffee crops to others so long heavily cropped with the fragrant berry that 200lb. of made tea per acre is a liberal estimate of their yield in this new era. Although, therefore, Ceylon may steadily compete with "Assam" (in the limited sense) in her total crops, it must be borne in mind that our harvesting will be from a considerably wider area in tea. The total extent in tea in Assam districts, Cachar and Sylhet—whether 216,676 or more likely 227,249 (including 30,560 acres young tea)—is singularly close to the present return for Ceylon of 219,847 acres; but the difference is that the former is to give nearly 8½ million lb. tea this season against not more than 48 millions for Ceylon.—Ceylon Observer.

A QUESTION OF EXCHANGE

In consequence of the yearly fluctuations in the rate of exchange at which British soldiers in India are paid, a difficulty has arisen with regard to the rate of exchange at which their Savings' Bank balances should be remitted on their transfer to England. The rule is for these balances to be transferred both from and to England on coming out to India, and proceeding home respectively at the rate of exchange fixed for the years in which the transactions took place. It therefore follows that if a soldier with £20 in the Bank, came out to India when the rate of exchange was at 1s. 8d., wishes to have the Rs. 240 allowed him on arrival in India as the equivalent of that sum retransferred to England on his return home, when the rate is 1s. 5d., he finds on arrival that his £20 has dwindled down to £17, the latter being the equivalent of Rs. 240 at 1s. 5d. the rupee. This was certainly rather hard on the soldier, but it has now been arranged between the Home and the Indian authorities that in such cases the actual loss incurred shall be made good on arrival in England, and that the soldier shall receive the same amount in sterling on his return home as he had at his credit when he left England for India, provided that during his term of service in the latter country he has not withdrawn from the Bank any portion of the amount transferred to India.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

WEDNESDAY, JULY 30, 1890.

THE MADRAS ARMY.

It was only to be expected that the Madras Press would protest against any proposition to "efface" the Madras army. In all the propositions which have been made in the various recommendations of the Commissions held for the past ten years in India regarding army reorganisation there it never was suggested that the Bengal, Bombay, and Madras armies should be amalgamated into one military force; and that the decentralisation, which had been looked upon as such a protection to the Empire, should altogether be done away with. The early history of the British rule in India speaks justly and truly of the good service always done by Madras troops whenever called upon to aid the British power. But it has been the habit, why or wherefore we do not know, of sneering in Bengal and Bombay at Madras as the "benighted" Presidency, and of saying all manner of unkind things regarding its administration—civil, political, and military. Nothing can be more false or unjust than this. Bengal "exclusiveness" is a very old complaint, and no doubt the foolish prejudices which were allowed to spread broadcast throughout India against Madras have had a considerable influence in maligning that Presidency. Madras, however, can hold its own in all the matters in which it has been maligning. Lord Connamara, as the representative of British rule, and Sir Charles Lawson, as the representative of British Press intelligence, require no compliments at anybody's hands. They know their duty, and they do it. But it cannot be denied that, through misrepresentation or otherwise, a feeling has gone abroad, through military men at home and in India, that the Madras army is valueless either for the purpose of defensive or offensive warfare. Sir Charles Dilke has, in his brief visit to India, done much to stir up the old prejudice against the Madras army, and we do not wonder at the indignation which prompts the editor of the Madras Mail to write as follows:—

"We have already ceased," says Sir Charles Dilke, with obvious satisfaction, 'to enlist Bengalis, and I should wish the same principle extended, and that we should no longer enlist men from Southern India.' In this connection he brackets Bombay with Madras. The population of Bengal being about 67 millions, that of Madras 31 millions, and that of Bombay 17 millions, Sir Charles Dilke—a supporter of the 'territorial' organisation of the British Army—concurs in a policy of distrusts that would degrade 115 millions of Her Majesty's subjects in the chief territories of India, and would assign the duty of protecting the Empire against internal and external foes to frontier tribesmen and such portion of the British Army as can be conveniently spared for the purpose. In the time of Major-General Sir Thomas Munro, Bart., K.C.B.—the 'Father of the People,' as the Natives of this Presidency called him—employment was easily obtainable in the Army by Natives of Madras with martial instincts, but in the Civil Departments of the Government none but unimportant posts were open to Natives. The reverse of this state of things is now observable; for while, on account of their alleged want of martial instincts, the Natives of Madras are being excluded from the Army, they are being admitted in large numbers to valuable posts of a civil nature. Sir Thomas Munro's words, notwithstanding their special application when he wrote them, may well be considered by the Government of India in connection with its military policy towards almost the whole of what constitutes British India in his time. 'With what grace,' he asked, 'can we talk of our paternal Government, if we pass a sentence of degradation on a whole people, for which no benefit can compensate? The 'advocates of improvement,' in his day, 'placed no confidence in the Natives, gave them no authority, and excluded them from office as much as possible,' thus forgetting that no scientific attainments by themselves will raise the character of any people. 'Let Britain,' he continued, 'be subjugated by a foreign Power to-morrow; let the people be excluded from all share in the Government, from public honours, from every office of high trust and emolument, and let them in every situation be considered as unworthy of trust, and all their knowledge, all their literature, sacred and profane, would not save them from becoming, in another generation or two, a low-minded, deceitful, and dishonest race.' He denied that the British Government in India should be 'satisfied with merely securing its power and protecting the inhabitants, while leaving them to sink gradually in character; and he maintained that the Government should endeavour both to 'raise the character of the people,' in order to 'render them worthy of filling higher situations in the management of their country,' and to strive to 'give them a higher opinion of themselves by placing more confidence in them.'

The paper from which we quote goes on to say that the cause of all the abuse against Madras, its Government, and its army is owing to the alleged fact that the Government of India is formed entirely of Bengal officers with little, if any, personal knowledge of Madras, but possessed of the belief that the lincal descendants in Madras of those who laid the foundation of the Indian Empire cannot be safely trusted with military responsibility.

We cannot help thinking this is a foolish and querulous complaint. The Madras soldier, if properly handled and disciplined, is an excellent "war material," but if treated by a system of "grandmotherly" administration he is likely to become of no use, either ornamental or otherwise.

Madras army organisation wants, in fact, a little more energy in the way of practical reform. The material is good; the want is—energy and discretion at headquarters.

UNDER Lord Harris the Government of Bombay may not have much to do, but from the following his lordship has had to exercise his intellectual faculties to a considerable extent in a way peculiarly his own. A Bombay paper says:—"H.E. Lord Harris has been appealed to for his opinion on two disputed points in the laws of cricket, which appear to have been exercising the minds of Parsee cricketers in Bombay. Mr. Dosabhai Bomanji Tapia writes asking us to publish those questions and replies, in the hope that the decisions given will prevent some captains in future from acting as directed by their whims and quite ignorant of the use of the law. The disputed points decided by Lord Harris are as follows:—(1) Can a side which has in a one day's match declared its first innings at an end, and has won the match on the first innings, go in for the second innings? Lord Harris replies:—My opinion is that it can. (2) Can a side which in a two-days' match has declared its first innings at an end (the side that went in second having saved the follow-on) go in for the second innings? His Excellency answers:—I presume that the innings was declared at an end on the second day. If so, I am of opinion that it can. If not, it is impossible to give a ruling, as Law 54 has not been adhered to. I think these opinions are correct, both according to the wording and the spirit of Law 54, but I am not aware of such questions having been raised before, and it would be safer to refer them to the Committee of the Marylebone Cricket Club."

THE Rangoon Times writes relative to the financial progress of Upper Burma:—"The first budget estimates prepared and submitted by Sir Charles Bernard amounted on the Revenue side to 66,50,000 rupees, and on the expenditure side to 77,50,000 rupees, the latter figures containing 30 lakhs on account of extra charges for troops then in the country, and ten lakhs for public works. This official year the Civil estimates for receipts amount to nearly 110 lakhs, while the expenditure stands at about 124½ lakhs. The Public Works estimates are altogether more than 63½ lakhs on the expenditure side, while the receipts from State Railways are put down at 18 lakhs. Such a budget as this only shows how great are the possibilities of Upper Burma in the future. At one time the deficits were so great as to amount to almost a million and three-quarters sterling. This was in 1888-89. Then the difference between revenue and expenditure went down to nearly a million and a half; and during the current official year it is estimated the difference will be still less, something like a million and a third. Thus annually, by wise and economical rule, we get nearer and nearer the time when we shall have an equilibrium, and the prospect of this is not very far distant."

HAKA, in the Southern Chin country, has so far justified the prediction that it would prove an extremely healthy station. Out of some 300 men of the 4th Gurkhas there are only thirteen on the sick list, or less than 5 per cent. This would seem to show that even during the rains the climate is one well adapted for Indian troops.

MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

It has been decided that the first instalment of advances to regimental institutions will be due on the expiration of six months from the date of the advance.

It has been decided on sanitary grounds to send a party of 100 selected men of the North Lancashire Regiment from Kampti to Deolali for the next three months.

SIR GEORGE GREAVES inspected the Poona Garrison Class on Wednesday, July 2nd, and witnessed the construction of a single-lock bridge. He was much pleased with the work.

It has been ruled that officers liable for the cost of their successor's passages are not, under the regulations and practice of the service, held liable for any land travelling expenses in addition.

ON Tuesday, July 8th, Sergeant Woodham, of the Commissariat Department, was taken out of the mail train at Jacobabad dead, it is supposed, from heat apoplexy. He was travelling on duty from Harnai to Sibi, and is thought to have died on the journey.

THE Government of India have ruled that the railway fares of recruits bona fide brought by Native troops from their homes for enlistment in a Native battery of artillery shall be defrayed by the State in the same way as in the case of recruits for Native cavalry and infantry regiments.

THE news that the 7th Bombay Cavalry—raised and commanded by Colonel McNair—have been converted into Lancers has been received with joy at Quetta. The selection is a very popular one, and there are rumours of certain festivities in the shape of a fancy dress ball in consequence.

A REGIMENTAL officer appointed to the charge of a field treasure-chest will be relieved of regimental duties and allowed staff pay at Rs. 180 per mensem, in addition to regimental or Staff Corps pay of rank. If it is necessary to appoint a regimental or departmental officer to the charge of a field-treasure chest in addition to his usual duties, he will be allowed staff pay at Rs. 120 per mensem for the additional charge.

SCARCELY half-a-dozen names have yet been sent in as volunteers for the proposed Lahore or Punjab Light Horse. Nor has any public-spirited resident of Lahore volunteered to undertake the necessary correspondence. Three names, however, come from Simla, and, as a beginning might be made as soon as twenty-five names are got together, it is hoped others who are inclined to follow the good example will do so with as little delay as possible.

It is matter for surprise that there are so few regimental papers in India, considering the matters of interest to the soldier with which they could deal. It is, therefore, pleasant to notice that the 4th battalion of the King's Royal Rifle Corps, stationed at Allahabad, have just started a monthly paper, The Rifleman. The first number is full of readable matter, well balanced and arranged, due attention being paid to battalion news. The paper should be read not merely in the 4th, but in all the other battalions of the regiment.

THE Karachi Naval Volunteers have asked the Government for a free issue of pistols or revolvers for the use and instruction of the officers of that force. It seems unlikely, according to the Lahore paper, that Government will sanction the issue, as officers of the Land Volunteer Forces have to provide their own weapons, and it is doubtful whether an exception should be made in the case of Naval Volunteers. If a free issue be made to one force, the same must be conceded to the other; and that Volunteer officers should provide their own weapons follows the rule obtaining in the regular army. But the latter are paid for their services, while the former are not, so perhaps the case may reasonably be reconsidered. If by giving a free issue of equipment Government can obtain the services of good Volunteer officers, then by all means make the concession.

THE Fund started by Lady Roberts for officers' hospitals and homes in the hills for Nursing Sisters made good progress during the year ending with the 30th of June. The receipts exceeded Rs. 24,000, and the expenditure was a little over Rs. 21,240. Of the latter sum the salaries of nurses amounted to Rs. 6,108; while Rs. 5,000 were advanced for the building of the Quetta home, and Rs. 7,000 was invested. Since the Fund was started about a lakh of rupees has been collected, and the Army is under a deep debt of gratitude to Lady Roberts for all that she has done in connection with the nursing movement. We are glad to be able to state that there will be a sensible increase to the number of lady nurses in India during the ensuing cold weather, the Secretary of State having consented to send out eighteen more nurses. This will admit of the Bombay Circle and the Eastern Circle in Bengal being started. There will then be four Circles—two in Bengal, and one each in Madras and Bombay. The Quetta home, too, is well advanced, so that the troops in Beluchistan will shortly share in the benefits of the scheme.

THE INCOME-TAX.

The Bengal National Chamber of Commerce has submitted a Memorial to the Government of India, joining in the movement set on foot by the European Chambers in India for the repeal of the Income-tax. The memorialists say that the tax, when proposed in 1886, would have met with considerable opposition had it not been brought forward in the guise of an expansion of the License-tax; and that its introduction was acquiesced in only on account of the prevailing fall in silver and the deficit in the revenue caused by the heavy expenditure incurred over the North-West Frontier defences and the annexation of Upper Burma. Although no limit was fixed to the duration of the tax, the Government pledged itself to effect a reduction of expenditure and to improve the condition of the Imperial Exchequer on a revision of the Provincial Contracts. A Finance Committee was, it is true, appointed in order to devise measures of economy in the existing scale of Government offices and establishments; but its recommendations, which if carried out would have resulted in considerable saving, have been but very partially adopted. One of the chief grounds of the Chambers' objection to the Income-tax is that it is worked in a way most oppressive to Native merchants and traders, even in Calcutta, where the assessments are unduly severe, arbitrary, and unequal; and that their business, in which secrecy is very essential to success, is exposed to serious risk by the liability of their books to inspection by low paid and therefore easily tempted clerks. While deprecating the proposed taxation of consignors' profits, the Chambers suggest that it would be a more straightforward and satisfactory course towards all parties if the Government were to re-impose an import duty on all merchandise. The finances of the country being now in a healthy condition, with a surplus of two and three-quarters crores of rupees, the Bengal National Chamber prays that the income-tax under Act II. of 1886 may be abandoned, "as it is unsuited to the country, as it is a cause of permanent irritation and dissatisfaction to the people, and chiefly because the special necessity which called it into being has now ceased to operate."

FOR COUGHS, COLDS, ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE

SPECIFIC

of Cholera itself, we have witnessed its surpassingly controlling power. We have never used any other form of this medicine than Collis Browne's, from a firm conviction that it is decidedly the best, and also from a sense of duty we owe to the profession and the public, as we are of opinion that the substitution of any other than Collis Browne's is a deliberate breach of faith on the part of the chemist to prescribe and patient alike.—We are, Sir, faithfully yours, SYMES & CO., Members of the Pharm. Society of Great Britain, His Excellency the Viceroy's Chemists.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is a liquid medicine which assuages PAIN OF EVERY KIND affords a calm, refreshing sleep WITHOUT HEAD-ACHE, and INVIGORATES the nervous system when exhausted.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE rapidly cuts short all attacks of EPILEPSY, SPASMS, COLIC, PALPITATION, Hysteria.

IMPORTANT CAUTION.—The IMMENSE SALE of this REMEDY has given rise to many UNSUBSTANTIAL IMITATIONS. Be careful to observe Trade Mark. Of all Chemists, 1s. 1/4d., 2s. 6d., and 4s. 6d.

SOLE MANUFACTURER, J. T. DAVENPORT, 33, St. Russell St. W.C.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE (late Army Medical Staff) discovered a REMEDY to denote which he coined the word CHLORODYNE. Dr. Browne is the SOLE INVENTOR, and as the composition of Chlorodyne cannot possibly be discovered by Analysis (organic substances) destroying elimination, and since the formula has never been published, it is evident that any statement to the effect that a compound is identical with Dr. Browne's Chlorodyne must be false.

This Caution is necessary, as many persons deceive purchasers by false representations.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is the TRUE PALLIATIVE in NEURALGIA, GOUT, CANCER, TOOTHACHE, RHEUMATISM.

DIARRHŒA, DYSENTERY. GENERAL BOARD OF HEALTH, London, REPORT that it ACTS as a CHARM, one dose generally sufficient. Dr. GIBBON, Army Medical Staff, Calcutta, states: "2 DOSES COMPLETELY CURED ME OF DIARRHŒA." From Symes & Co., Pharmaceutical Chemists, Simla, Jan. 5, 1880.

To J. T. DAVENPORT, London.

DEAR SIR,—We congratulate you upon the widespread reputation this justly-esteemed medicine has earned for itself all over the East. As a remedy of general utility, we much question whether a better is imported, and we shall be glad to hear of its finding a place in every Anglo-Indian home. The other brands, we are happy to say, are now relegated to the native bazaars, and, judging from their sale, we fancy their sojourn there will be but evanescent. We could multiply instances ad infinitum of the extraordinary efficacy of DR. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE in Diarrhœa and Dysentery, Spasms, Cramps, Neuralgia, the Vomiting of Pregnancy, and as a general sedative, that have occurred under our personal observation during many years. In Choleraic Diarrhœa, and even in the more terrible forms

BROAD ARROW

AND

ESTABLISHED 1833

EVERY SATURDAY. PRICE SIXPENCE.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" has acquired a reputation for early and exclusive intelligence as to Appointments and other service News, for the high character of its articles, the independent course of its staff of writers, and for its earnest support of all measures for the good of the Services. Articles on specially interesting subjects appear from week to week written for the most part by officers of rank and experience, or by men of note in literature who have made the Naval and Military affairs of the country their special study. A series of Illustrated Articles is appearing weekly on Regimental Badges and History. Illustrations with descriptions are also given of new Service Inventions.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" freely opens its correspondence columns to all grades in the Services. By this means an opportunity for interchange of opinion is afforded, such as is offered by no other Service Journal. Its ordinary weekly issue contains fully one-fourth more matter than the other Service Journals, even with their frequent "supplements."

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" circulates largely throughout India and the Colonies. It is supplied direct to the Army and Marine bureaux of the French, Russian, and other Governments, and it is read extensively by Officers of Foreign Services, especially of the German, French, and American Armies, who desire to acquire a true impression of facts and public opinion in England regarding Military affairs.

THE CALCUTTA REVIEW.

(The only Quarterly Review in India.)

ESTABLISHED 1844.

OPINIONS.

The Calcutta Review for October reached us a day or two ago, and a glance at its contents shows that the number more than sustains the reputation which this old and favourite publication is again achieving. The Review is rapidly regaining the position which it . . . there is no fear of the Indian Review, or the Asiatic Quarterly rivalling it in public favour.—Statesman, October 1886.

. . . The best service which I ever rendered in India, or, indeed, for India, was the establishment, single-handed, of the Calcutta Review, which has done far more for Indian literature than anything I have written under my own name.—J. W. KAYE, Athenæum Club, June 23, 1872.

The Calcutta Review has given us valuable articles on the army. Some from the pen of Sir Henry Lawrence, who wrote with the spirit of prophesy of the coming storm of which he was one of the noblest victims.—Address of the C.-in-C. at the U.S. Inst. of India.

. . . The Calcutta Review has not only throughout its career reflected the highest honour on its public-spirited promoters and its well-known distinguished contributors, but has done much to help forward the reconstruction of our system of governing India.—Westminster Review.

LIGHT versus DARKNESS.

"SHAKESPEARE, the Greatest Genius who has ever yet lived," taught the Divineness of Forgiveness, of Perpetual Mercy, of Constant Patience, of Endless Peace, of Perpetual Gentleness. If you can show me one who knew things better than this man, show him!! I know him not!! If he had appeared as a Divine, they would have Burned him; as a Politician, they would have Beheaded him; but God made him a Player.

"He taught that kindness is nobler than Revenge!!"—The Rev. GEORGE DAWSON, M.A.

"Earthly power doth then show likest God's
When mercy seasons justice,
And that same prayer doth teach us all to render
The Deeds of Mercy."—Shakespeare.

What higher aim can man attain, than conquest over human pair?

JEOPARDY OF LIFE, THE GREAT DANGER OF DELAY.

You can change the Trickling Stream, but not the Raging Torrent.

WHAT EVERYBODY SHOULD READ.—How important it is to have at hand some simple, effective, and palatable remedy, such as ENO'S "FRUIT SALT," to check disease at the onset! With little trouble you can change the course of the trickling mountain stream, but not the rolling river. It will defy all your tiny efforts. I feel I cannot sufficiently impress this important information upon everybody. Let ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" be your companion; under any circumstances its use is beneficial, and never can do harm. When out of sorts, Restless, Sleepless, yet unable to say why, then your whole body is out of order, but you do not know where it may end; it is a real necessity to have a simple remedy at hand. The Pilot can so steer and direct as to bring the ship into safety, but he cannot quell the raging storm. The common idea when not feeling well is: "I will wait and see; perhaps I shall be better to-morrow;" whereas, had a supply of ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" been at hand, and use made of it at the onset, all calamitous results might have been avoided. What dashes to the earth so many hopes, breaks so many sweet alliances, blisters so many auspicious enterprises, as untimely Death?

I used my 'FRUIT SALT' freely in my last severe attack of Fever, and I have every reason to say I believe it saved my life."—
J. C. ENO.

NATURE RULES ALL THINGS.

In every form of weakness use Scalded Milk.

ENO'S "VEGETABLE MOTO," occasionally a desirable adjunct to ENO'S "FRUIT SALT," as a simple and Natural Laxative, Stomachic, Blood, Brain, Nerve, Bile, or Liver Tonic; or, in other words, when taken as directed, their action is as simple as a tomato, whole meal bread or porridge (with scalded milk); you cannot overstate their great value in causing a natural, slow, and gentle action of the Liver; by that means you keep the blood pure and prevent disease. In advanced Life they are everything you could wish. Read Practical Hints on Constipation, Indigestion, Liver Diseases, Impure Blood, Sleeplessness, Nervous Headache, Treatment of Gout and Rheumatism, how to Prevent Consumption, Jaundice, and other disastrous diseases by Rules for Health and Longevity, &c., in a pamphlet given with each Bottle of ENO'S "VEGETABLE MOTO." They can be used for any length of time without fear or harm.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

THURSDAY AUGUST 7, 1890.

General Intelligence.

[BY OVERLAND MAIL.]

THE Overland Mail brings us letters and advices from Bombay to the 18th July; from Allahabad and Madras to the 16th July; and from Calcutta to the 15th July.

H.E. THE VICEROY was to start on his trip into the interior on Aug. 8th.

THE VICEROY will open the Simla Fine Arts Exhibition on Aug. 20th.

LADY LANSDOWNE's farewell dance came off on July 10th at the Viceregal Lodge, Simla, with brilliant success.

LADY LANSDOWNE is a passenger for Brindisi by to-day's (July 18th) mail steamer.

H.E. LORD HARRIS, in the absence of Lady Harris, who was slightly indisposed, opened the Young Women's Christian Association at Poona on July 16th.

THE Indian Midland Railway has been breached at Bhilsa, and the line is impassable for trains. Lady Lansdowne and suite, who left Simla on the morning of July 15th, had in consequence to alter their plans, and travel via the Rajpootana-Malwa Railway to Bombay.

TWENTY-SEVEN inches of rain fell at Bhilsa in less than twenty-four hours. The temporary works which were erected on the Indian Midland Railway were entirely demolished.

ELEVEN inches of rain fell at Muscat in twenty-four hours during the recent cyclone.

SIR G. GREAVES, the Commander-in-Chief, Bombay, is proceeding on a tour of inspection.

THE Cashmere Durbar has reopened communication with the Government of India re the proposed Cashmere Railway.

DURING the months of April and May the foreign trade of India underwent some remarkable fluctuations, compared with the corresponding two months of last year.

THE imports show a decline in value of over 88 lakhs, while the exports in value by no less than 227 lakhs.

THE Bolan Railway has been seriously damaged by floods, and Government is thinking of the expediency of abandoning the line altogether.

It is now arranged that Artillery Camps, consisting of four or five batteries each, will be held at Campbellpore, Muridki, and Cawnpore.

THE Upper India Chamber of Commerce have addressed the Government of India on the subject of the Income-tax. They cordially support the Bengal Chamber in protesting against the taxing of consignors' profits, and in advocating the abolition of the income tax altogether.

ANOTHER serious collision occurred at Calcutta on the 9th. The steamer Sea Gull, with 581 return pilgrims, and one of the Port Commissioner's steam mudhoppers, collided. The latter was sunk, and s.s. Sea Gull had several plates stove in.

LIEUTENANT-COLONEL DURAND, British Agent at Gilgit, after a short stay at Simla, probably goes home on privilege leave.

MR. J. HOOPER, on return from leave in England next month, takes up his post of secretary to the Board of Revenue, Mr. C. J. Connell going to Bareilly as magistrate and collector. Mr. Hamblin, now at Bareilly, will officiate as magistrate of Cawnpore, Mr. F. N. Wright acting as Commissioner of Rai Bareilly during Mr. Spedding's absence on two months' leave.

THE death has occurred at Lahore of the Rev. Dr. Charles Mouard, Roman Catholic Bishop of the Punjab, better known in Upper India as Father Symphorien. He was very popular, and was for many years connected with educational work in the Roman Catholic institutions at Agra.

MR. J. F. STEVENS, C.S., has been added to the Bengal Police Commission.

THE Police Committee of the N.W. Provinces will make Allahabad their headquarters during the cold weather.

THE inquiry in the Cawnpore assault case was opened by Mr. Harington, Commissioner of the Allahabad Division, on July 14th. The signatories of the petition to the Lieutenant-Governor were represented by counsel. Evidence offered in support of the allegations made against the Magistrate and police was recorded. The Lieutenant-Governor, in reply to the second memorial, declined to take any further personal action in a matter which was within the competence of the Commissioner. The points to which the inquiry is directed are the allegations that the Magistrate of Cawnpore acted improperly and illegally in not taking action on being informed of the assault on the pleader, and that the police instigated the attack on the latter.

THE Court of Inquiry at Hyderabad into the alleged attack upon British officers by an African trooper of the Nizam's Bodyguard reassembled on July 11th, counsel for the prisoner having determined to recall Lieutenant Gallie as a witness for the defence. The sittings closed the next day, when the sowar was discharged.

THE Upper India Chamber of Commerce have addressed the Government of India on the subject of the Income Tax. They cordially support the Bengal Chamber in protesting against the taxing of consignors' profits, and in advocating the abolition of the Income Tax altogether.

A COALFIELD of considerable extent has been found at Lashio, in the Shan States, lying to the north-east of Mandalay. Lashio is distant from the latter town about 140 miles, and communications will have to be improved before the coal can be made available for use on the railway or by the river steamers.

THE Ameer left Haibak for Cabul on July 2nd.

THE Afghan troops have completely routed the Ferozkuhis.

LIEUT. GOODENOUGH, Central India Horse, has been appointed Adjutant of the Erinpura Irregular Force, and Lieut. Cockraft will probably be appointed to the Meywar Bheel Corps.

MR. D. C. GORDON, Examiner P.W. Department Accounts, Allahabad, has been granted ten months' furlough. He will probably be succeeded by Colonel Grierson, now at Abu, and Colonel Grierson by Mr. Rainier from Madras.

MAJOR CHRISTIE, Public Works Accounts Department, Madras, goes on three months' privilege leave, and Mr. Morrison will act for him.

THE East Coast Railway will probably not be commenced before December. Mr. F. B. Walker, Superintending Engineer, will be in charge.

EXPORTS of wheat from Calcutta have gradually declined for the past three years, the fall from 1888-89 to 1889-90 being 47½ per cent. The decrease appears in the shipments to all countries, but especially to the United Kingdom, where last year's home crop happened to be very large. All parts of India did not suffer equally; indeed, the exports from Sind rose considerably, and although Bombay was a loser, it did not suffer as much as Calcutta. The official returns show that Russia was the largest wheat-supplier of the United Kingdom; but there is not much reason to fear the continued competition of that country.

It appears from the Indian Railway Report for 1889-90 that the year was a bad one for casualties. The killed numbered 534, and the injured 1,034, the corresponding figures for the previous year being 482 and 452.

MR. R. G. MACDONALD, Accountant-General, will visit Jhansi, Nagpore, and the Umari and Warora Collieries early next month on inspection duty.

RUMOURS come from Rawalpindi of an impending frontier expedition on a large scale. No such expedition, however, is intended; nor is any expedition in immediate contemplation. The real facts are that two sections of the Miranzai, of the Kohat border, have been warned that if they do not pay up certain fines due from them they will be proceeded against by a military force after October or November next. In case of continued contumacy on the part of the tribes the number of men sent against the Miranzai villages would not exceed fifteen hundred, and they would be drawn from the Kohat garrison.

THE orders of the Governor-General in Council on the proceedings of the Conference at Agra in December, 1888, regarding the forthcoming Census arrangements, are published in this week's Gazette. The night of February 26th next is fixed as the date of the census throughout India, with the exception of certain forest and desert tracts. The following is a full list of the Provincial Superintendents of Census operations:—Madras, Mr. H. A. Steuart; Bombay, Mr. W. W. Drow; Bengal, Mr. C. J. O'Donnell; North-West Provinces and Oudh, Mr. E. D. Baillie; Punjab, Mr. E. D. MacLagan; Burma, Captain R. C. Temple; Central Provinces, Mr. E. Robertson; Assam, Mr. E. A. Geit; and Berar, Captain Warren Hastings. The present orders of the Governor-General in Council endorse generally the more important of the suggestions made by the Agra Conference.

THE Civil Service Commissioners have been authorised by the Secretary of State for India in Council to announce that the number of candidates to be selected for the Civil Service of India at the Open Competition to be held in 1892 will be thirty-two.

INDIAN GOLD MINING SHARES.—Mysore Shares yesterday improved 1-16; otherwise there was no alteration. Mysore Shares were last quoted 4 13-16 to 4 15-16, Nundydroog 1 7/8 to 2 xd, Indian Consolidated New Company (9s. paid) 2s. to 2s. 6d., Balaghat-Mysore (New) 8s. 9d. to 9s. 3d., Ooregum Ordinary 1 1/2 to 2, ditto Preference 1 1/2 to 1 3/4, Devala-Moyar 6d. to 1s., Nine Reefs New (19s. paid) 4s. 3d. to 4s. 9d., Mysore Reefs (£1 paid) 6s. 3d. to 6s. 9d., Mysore-Wynaad (18s. paid) 9d. to 1s. 3d., South-East Mysore 1s. 3d. to 1s. 9d., Indian Glenrock New 1s. 9d. to 2s. 3d., Gold Fields of Mysore 8s. 6d. to 9s. 6d., New South-East Wynaad 6d. to 1s., and Mysore West (17s. paid) 9d. to 1s. 3d.

A CURIOUS military order has been issued by "Brigadier-General Bengough, commanding at Bangalore. He has requested the Deputy Surgeon-General 'to arrange for the instruction of two men per company in the infantry in cutting of nails and the treatment of corns and blisters; and these men will, when instructed, be held responsible for the care of men's feet in that company.'"

THE Civil and Military Gazette some time ago announced that the formation of a musketry class for the Hyderabad Contingent was under the consideration of the Government of India, as the Bombay and Madras schools had no room for more than one or two officers from regiments outside the presidential commands. Our contemporary now hears that the formation of a musketry class specially for the Hyderabad Contingent has been preliminarily approved by the Government of India. The details of the scheme of formation are to be fully worked out by the Resident at Hyderabad with the advice of the Assistant Adjutant-General for Musketry, Simla, and in communication with the Commander-in-Chief of the Madras army.

NOTES.

It is always possible to have too much of a good thing, and greatly as all India desired rain during the past trying hot months, the gift of waters it has received has been almost too plentiful to be thankful for, especially by the sojourners in the hills. The telegrams from Calcutta, dated Sunday last, report great damages caused by floods in various parts of the country. In the Bareilly district many villages have been submerged, and the Oude and Rohilkund Railway has been breached in several places. But the deluge has been causing landslips in the hills to the endangering of life, and Darjeeling, which certainly seldom wants moisture, has been a heavy sufferer in this respect. Its railway communication has been interrupted, and the Calcutta Sanitarium is said, owing to the want of provisions, to be almost like a fortress in a state of siege.

In the meantime Calcutta appears to have been seized with the leprosy scare, and Bombay also. Public meetings have been held at both places to discuss the question of the proper housing and care of the afflicted. In Calcutta some differences of opinion appear to have arisen between well-meaning private individuals who advocate the founding of a Leper's Home (to be supported by voluntary contributions) and the Health Society, which advocates that all remedial measures should be under Government regulation and control. It is a pity that in so good a cause any bickerings or displays of bad temper should have been exhibited, but the Calcutta community is used to such emotional displays, especially during the summer season, when attendance and speaking at public meetings are irksome and irritable duties. It is to be hoped, however, that the Government will insist upon keeping the supervision and control of leper asylums altogether in its own hands.

A BRIEF message had, when the mail left Bombay, sent an electrical thrill of delight throughout all India. Reuter had telegraphed:—"President Harrison has approved the Silver Bill." The excitement was tremendous, and in the Calcutta Bazaar the agitation was so great that business was almost suspended. Bombay took its joy more philosophically. "This," says the Times of India, "is the message for which all business people in India, and most of the officials, have been anxiously waiting, and it has come at last. And, as an earnest of what may result from it, the rupee at once touched 1s. 7d., the highest point reached during the past five years." In Calcutta it touched 1s. 7 1/2 d. The Times of India, "chortling" in its joy, goes on to say: "The price of silver may rise so rapidly that the American par of 16-1 may be reached before any appreciable supply takes place. And if this be so silver at 58d. per ounce is not only possible, but probable." It was 50 1/2 d. yesterday.

BUT India has been rejoicing on another important piece of good news also. "Our own correspondent" at Simla has learnt that "Recent telegrams between H.E. the Viceroy and the Postmaster-General in London may be taken as an official intimation that the reduction in postage will be introduced as soon as possible. The point now before the Government is the division of the charge between the Inland Revenue in both England and India, and the cost of the Continental train and sea steamer." The exhilarating atmosphere of Simla is always favourable to the offsprings of hope. We have here in London for a long time been hoping against hope in this matter of postage reduction between the two countries, but the information we have received has not been encouraging. However, "joy," we are told, "cometh from the hills," and we shall be glad to learn soon that "our own correspondent" there is correct in his surmises.

THE Salvation Army in Madras has been having a rather rough time of it of late. At an open-air meeting some officers were severely handled by the mob they were preaching to, or at, and there was much hooting, hissing, and display of ill-feeling towards the army generally. But the Madras magisterial authorities do not appear to be of the same opinion as the Lord Chief Justice of England, that Salvation Army music in the streets is a thing perfectly legal in its exercise. On the contrary, Major Jhai Bhai, Captain Luksing, and three other officers of the Salvation Army were removed to the lock-up for failing to pay a fine imposed on them by the magistrate for having played music through the streets without a license, after having been warned by the police to desist from obstructing the thoroughfare.

Happy London might take a lesson now from "be-nighted" Madras.

THIS, from the Lahore Tribune, the denunciator of Mr. Warburton, the Umritsur Police Superintendent, should be interesting to Mr. J. M. Maclean and Sir Roper Lethbridge:—"We wish for the benefit of their souls that those Anglo-Indians who have done us wrong while in India by doing all that lay in their power to oppose all political progress, spent their last days in pious repentance for their sins committed against us; but instead of doing that—looking after the jeopardised interests of their souls—they continue to do all they can to wrong our interests, even in the retirement of their homes. We are sorry for these hopelessly lost souls—for none more than the whilom fighting journalist, MacLean, who enjoys the distinction of being the most powerful evil-doer in the Commons. We hope when Mr. Gladstone comes to power he, a pious man as he is, will make him powerless for evil, to himself as well as to us, by giving him a lift to the House of Innocents, who offend no one. But in Sir Roper Lethbridge we have an Anglo-Indian (he took the bread from the Indian's mouth by teaching and selling school-books and distributing innocent news, and Mr. MacLean by calling them names) in whom we have discovered the Blavatskie gift of proving white to be black, and vice versa."

WE would call the attention of all who are interested in Indian investments—an interest which we have more than once in these columns done our best to excite—to a comprehensive schedule of Indian Tea Company Shares, which we have taken the liberty of reproducing from our pleasant and able contemporary Vanity Fair. That journal has, for a considerable time past, been regarded in and out of the City as one of the best and most trustworthy authorities on financial matters, and although it has taken the bold, and, of course, somewhat hazardous, step of giving advice to investors, it has, nevertheless, succeeded to a high place in the opinion of a public which is remarkably wide awake to its own interests. It could only have done this by the care, intelligence, and independence with which the financial portion of the paper is edited. In the present instance the return, showing the recent working of Indian tea companies' shares, indicates that the most painstaking care has been bestowed on its compilation. And as such we commend it to general notice.

THE Bank of Bombay has reduced its rate for demand loans on the security of Government paper to 4 per cent. per annum.

THE Great Indian Peninsula Railway Company, says Indian Engineering, have given to the Vacuum Brake Company a contract for a hundred new sets of automatic vacuum brake gear for use on their line in India. It is now some ten years or more since this continuous brake was first sent by the railway company to Bombay to be used on local trains, and since that time more than fifty sets have been applied to them. Mr. Jackson, the company's locomotive superintendent in India, has reported that during this period the vacuum brake has worked perfectly well. In connection with this matter Mr. George Berkeley, the company's consulting engineer in England, states that it is not now a matter of doubt that the introduction of a continuous brake would be found advantageous both to the railway and the public. Mr. Berkeley further states that he remains of the same opinion which he expressed some years ago, based upon a thorough examination of the working of the then existing continuous brakes, including the Westinghouse—viz., that the vacuum brake, especially the automatic vacuum brake, is the best.

CALCUTTA, AUG. 3.

The question of the proper housing and care of lepers is attracting much attention. A public meeting has been held at Bombay, and a committee appointed to frame a scheme. The subscriptions already promised exceed 12,000 rupees; the Governor has headed the list with 1,000 rupees. The Calcutta Health Society has addressed the Government urging the necessity of legislation, and pointing out that all leper asylums should be scientifically regulated and should be under Government control.

Two committees will shortly assemble at Simla to consider the question of reserves for the Native Army. It is understood that General McQueen will preside over the infantry and Colonel Lance over the cavalry committee.

Reports of damage caused by floods continue to come from various parts of the country. The rainfall at Naini Tal during the last half of July amounted to from forty-five to fifty inches. There has been no loss of life or property, but the roads are almost impassable. A large portion of the Bareilly district is flooded, and many villages are submerged. Hundreds of cattle are taking refuge on the railway, which is the only dry piece of land for miles. The Oude and Rohilkhand line has been breached near the Ramganga river. Fresh landslips have been occurring on the Darjeeling line as soon as the old ones have been cleared. It will probably be some weeks before through railway communication is restored. Owing to the difficulty of procuring supplies the condition of Darjeeling is said to resemble a state of siege.

It is believed that the survey of the Zhob Valley Railway will be commenced in three divisions, starting from Pishin. The staff will consist of Major Buchanan Scott and several Royal Engineer officers.

CALCUTTA, AUG. 4.

The Madras Government has called for reports on the Slave Trade with Burma.

The necessary capital for the Ootacamund Railway has been subscribed, and the Government has sanctioned the commencement of the work.

AFGHANISTAN.

CALCUTTA, AUG. 3.

The Ameer, with a large following, arrived at Cabul shortly before the Eed Festival, which took place last Monday. He presented a valuable horse to General Gholam Haider Charki as an acknowledgment of the way in which military affairs had been conducted during his absence.

It is rumoured in the Punjab that the Ameer is about to send an expedition against the Ferozkohi and Jamshedi tribes.

BURMA.

RANGOON, AUG. 2.

The Petroleum Act of 1886 has been brought into force in Burma to-day.

The Government publish a return showing that in the years 1887, 1888, and 1889 372 males and 132 females were tortured by dacoits in the Central Division of Upper Burma. One hundred and eighteen cases resulted in death.

The Mandalay Herald announces that a valuable vein of coals of good quality, some 15 miles long, has been discovered near the Irrawaddy, at Kyoukmyoung.

Telegraphic communication has been re-established with Haka and Fort White.

Mr. Hodgkinson, Judicial Commissioner of Upper Burma, has commenced work. The Chief Commissioner recently stated that the Burma Commission was too weak, especially in officers of trained ability and experience, and that it was difficult to provide for the administration of the districts. As, by the appointment of a Judicial Commissioner for Upper Burma, a trained and qualified Judge is available for the decision of all legal questions arising there, it is urgent that some of the present regulations, which have the force of laws, should be repealed. At present any collector, of his own mere motion, can declare land in the occupation of any person to be State land, and thereupon it becomes Government property until the contrary is proved. The question whether such decision is well-founded can only be tried by the collector, who has already adjudicated ex parte on the case. In Upper Burma many of the collectors are Staff Corps lieutenants. In many instances the proceedings in the Revenue Courts can only be described as confiscation. The Chief Commissioner admits the want of qualification of many of the officers acting as collectors. No reason now exists why the Government claims to land in the occupation of others should not be tried before the ordinary tribunals.

ANGLO-INDIAN PRESS.

THE WORD "BOMBAY."

(Times of India.)

[His lordship concluded by saying that when he died the word "Bombay" would be found engraved on his heart.—Speech of Lord Reay at the Northbrook Club Dinner.]

There is a word, I feel, that Fate
Has graved with hieroglyphics neat
In my inside, so when this great
Batavian heart has ceased to beat,
If you will search in it with care,
Mid superscriptions old and new,
One word you'll find is written there,
It may sound strange, but it is true.
It's there, I know, and come to stay,
It is, in fact, the word "Bombay."

Now something like this observation
Was said before, some years ago,
Some other case of resignation—
It's not original, I know.
I think a Queen did once resign,
With words like these, a conquered place;
She lost her town, but I kept mine,
Ten days beyond the allotted space,
For I—did not resign Bombay,
I only said I would—some day.

So why it's there, I must confess
I am not quite prepared to say,
For ribald men might scoff and guess
At other words besides "Bombay";
At other words more likely far,
Such as, for instance, "Wilson Mess"
Or "Crawford Case," or "Mamlatdar,"
Such words that magic printing press
Might very well have written there,
In all these muddles I'd my share.

But no! these words will not appear,
Though hostile critics may deride,
For N-thbr-k says that my career
Was a success unqualified.
He ought to know, so let them sneer,
I care not for their vain inditings,
I just despise that Pioneer,
And "Romaney's" unpleasant writings;
For on the hearts of such as they Would ne'er be writ that word "Bombay."

For now, methinks, I loved that place—
I did not live there much, 'tis true,
My feet were wont to leave their trace
More often on Mableswhur dew;
With Native editors to be
The Bombay crowds I ever fled;
But they—they did so "doat on me,
Sometimes," as Mr. Pecksniff said,
And that is why I'm bold to say,
That on my heart is writ "Bombay."

"OMNIA DAT QUI JUSTA NEGAT."

(Civil and Military Gazette.)

Civil Engineers, while naturally disappointed that the successors to Colonel Pemberton and Colonel Conway-Gordon should again be both Royal Engineers, will sympathise little with any advocacy of their claims which is used as a stalking-horse for personal attacks upon Royal Engineers of proved ability. The claims of Mr. O'Callaghan, C.E., or Mr. F. Robertson, C.E., for instance, are not advanced, but rather discredited, by denying that Colonel Wallace, R.E., or Colonel Forbes, R.E., possess administrative experience or skill. Any one who takes the trouble to ascertain can find out that both these officers' records are uncommonly good; and if officious friends of the C.E.'s contradict patent facts by way of argument, the impartial reader is misled to think that the case of the C.E.'s must be a very poor one indeed. That it is nothing of the kind we have often insisted; but Civil Engineers themselves are not likely to be so soured by disappointment as to deny that their leading Royal Engineer colleagues in the P.W.D. have ever been or can be successful. To take the case of the present manager of the North-Western Railway, the Government of India is in at least as good a position as outsiders to judge of the management of that much-abused line, and were pleased very recently to express the opinion that the working of the North-Western Railway during the past year was very creditable to Colonel Wallace. Though no doubt anxious to please everybody, the Manager of a State Railway may naturally be expected to consider his employers' interests and wishes, and Colonel Wallace is to be congratulated upon having thus secured their express approval. Of this the inclusion of his name in a recent list of "Honours" may, perhaps, be taken as incidental corroboration. Moreover, the insinuation that the present Manager of the North-Western Railway was a tyro in railway management when he came to the Punjab is quite unfounded. He was Manager of the Northern Bengal State Railway from 1879 to 1882, during which period he was also fortunate enough to receive cordial thanks from the Bengal Government for his "assiduity and complete knowledge" of his work. In March, 1881, the Government of Bengal expressly recommended him for "well-earned promotion" for his skill and success as Manager of the railway. Insinuations of incompetency and inexperience against an officer with this record only weaken the case for the C.E.'s, who may well ask to be saved from the injurious and discreditable officiousness of their friends. Omnia dat, qui justa negat is a sound old maxim, which is too often lost sight of in modern controversy.

MY BUNGALOW.

(Madras Times.)

"I suppose you will keep on my house, it is the only one available," said W. to me, as we drove from the railway station down a road with irrigation channels on each side of it, and mosquitoes so thick one hardly dared open one's mouth for fear of choking; a London fog was child's play compared with those mosquitoes. By the by, I wondered then and I wonder now, what on earth induced the Madras Railway Company to plant all its stations not less than two miles away from the nearest pretence at a village.

I was then what the Australians call a "new chum," that is, I had only been out in India for six months, during which time I had lived mostly under canvas. But now a notice in the Gazette had sent me to take independent charge instead of hunting up out-of-the-way corners of the district, which my "boss" thought it too much trouble to visit himself, and there I was, bowling along to a bungalow, soon to become mine (as soon as the rent was paid), at about 6.30 P.M., with a jolly good fellow driving beside me, and giving me information about all the inhabitants of the station. "Do you see that light over there?" he said suddenly, pointing to a light across the paddy, and occasionally blotted out by a tree for a few seconds. "That's the Collector's house; mine's next to it, but there's a stretch of paddy between, so we have to drive half a mile round; the paddy contains snipe, which is some consolation, but you'll have to be careful, or you'll pepper all the Collector's family while they're sitting at breakfast some day."

It was dark as pitch that night, and I could see nothing of the outside of the bungalow as we drove up. The verandah lamp did nothing beyond lighting up the verandah and showing holes in its whitewashed walls, from which nails had been recently extracted by unskilful hands. Is the careful hoarding of nails peculiar to Madras servants? I have had no experience of other parts of India, but all over this Presidency I have noticed the same characteristic. If anyone goes to a bungalow for a few days nails are hammered into the walls for hat pegs, clothes-pegs, brackets, lamps, etc.; the night before one leaves, not a nail to be seen, but a ghastly addition to the holes in the chunam plaster. I succeeded once in making the servants leave the nails in the walls; it was in a travellers' bungalow (unfurnished); a month later I returned there. From the book I saw that the Sub-Collector had halted there for one day, and from the walls I learned that his butler was evidently a careful man; there wasn't a nail to be seen anywhere. Since then I have given up trying to make servants leave the nails behind them. It looks as if I had got on to a siding, so I must back on to the main line again. In order to reach my bedroom we had to pass through the dining and drawing rooms; the walls were full of holes, and on the ground an irregular hole of powdered chunam along the foot of every wall showed that the destruction had been recent. Next day I took over charge, and W. went off by the evening mail. Never having had a house of my own at home, I naturally looked at my new possession through coloured glasses for a time. I bought fans and brackets and rugs, &c., and made the place look as cosy as possible; but poochies soon took the shine out of the fans on the walls, and rats gnawed holes in the rugs, tore the antimacassars, pulled the cotton out of the sofa, and finally got into the piano and took possession. Then the rains began. The first night it rained was a night to be remembered; it blew pretty hard, and the rain came down in sheets; it began just before dinner. When I went into the dining room I noticed my soup-plate was carefully covered with an inverted dinner plate. "Ramaswami, what for covering up plate to night?" I inquired, "Sometimes chunam falling," replied my experienced boy. Before I had got half through my soup I heard a clatter on the rafters overhead, and, looking up, got a shower of chunam in my eyes. As soon as I could see I picked up the spoon intending to finish the soup, but it was a mass of liquid plaster, and there were stains on the cloth and my clothes which showed that something more than dust had fallen.

The rest of dinner went off fairly well, barring an occasional sprinkling of dust, but just as Ramaswami brought in the pudding the rain came down with a vengeance, and in half a minute a stream from the roof was pouring into the salt cellar. Looking round I saw that two or three more streams had started in various parts of the room. The table was moved to a dry corner, and just as I was about to commence on the pudding a gust of wind came over the house and down came a flat tile straight into my plate, smashing it, and dispersing the pudding all over the cloth, the floor, and me. I swore "some," got up and went into the drawing room; the top of the piano was open, and two small Niagaras were emptying themselves into it. A horrid thought struck me; I rushed into the bedroom. Yes, there was my mattress, the only one I possessed, soaked through and through. A streak of colour on the wall attracted my attention; above it was what had once been a water-colour painting; it was water-colour now, and no mistake. I managed to find a dry corner and slept on the floor all night. Early in the morning I was up, and bubbling over with righteous indignation I indited a pretty sharp letter to my landlord, informing him that I should hold him liable for all the damage done to my belongings, and requesting him to have the roof seen to at once. In due course an answer arrived. It ran thus:—

"Honoured Sir,—

"I regret that your Honour's furniture and comfort should have suffered through the opening of the gates of Heaven last night; truly the noise of the thunder awoke me from my slumbers, and caused my beloved spouse to rise from her couch in horrified terror. Your Honour, I am one very poor man, and only three years bygone the roof of my house which has the honour to shelter your Honour was taken to pieces and made to be rain-tight. If your Honour will add Rs. 10 only to the monthly rent I will again make it rain-tight this year, or your Honour can do it at your own cost, whichever your Honour pleases."

I went into camp after that, and on my next transfer, which wasn't long coming, sold up everything except camp kit, and have never attempted to furnish a house from that time to this. All the same, I think it's a shame of the Powers that be not to build or buy up bungalows, and make sure that up-country officers have good roofs over their heads. As a rule an up-country station contains exactly enough houses for the residents; consequently rents are high, and the houses are generally in a most tumble down condition. Landlords won't do anything to their houses, for they know that it is a case of Hobson's choice with every new-comer. They are sure of a tenant, and as long as the house does not tumble down they don't care a brass farthing for the comfort of the

THE LEPROSY SCARE.

(Civil and Military Gazette.)

The leprosy question appears to be hung up for the present, and will remain so until the English Leprosy Commissioners come out to India in the cold weather or spring. The appointment, indeed, of the English Commission was a mistake, having its genesis in the enthusiasm roused by the story of Father Damien's life and death, and the alarm created by the Prince of Wales's statement regarding a leprosy butcher in London. The Commission is not likely to throw much new light on the subject with which it is to deal. It is curious from all other points of view than the strictly medical one, that the Commission should have been appointed. There is no leprosy in England, or if any, to so slight an extent as certainly not to justify the appointment of a Commission to lessen its effects or to prevent its spread. The fact was lost sight of in the wave of mixed sentiment that lately surged over England and has only recently been recognised. The Commission, however, has been, or is to be, appointed, and with a view, among other things, to discover whether leprosy is infectious or not, will visit India, where the Government will affiliate with it a certain number of Indian medical men, some of whom have made a life-long study of the disease. We doubt very much if the Commission, even with its Indian colleagues to aid it, will really discover anything very new. Some facts that will prove interesting and perhaps useful to the doctor and his patient to know may transpire, but there is not the least likelihood that any sure means of stamping out the plague will be brought to light. It is pretty generally known that the only method of stamping out, or substantially lessening the prevalence of, the disease, is to raise the standard of civilisation in the country where it is rife. It has been said that the case of Norway, where leprosy has become rarer, shows how effective a policy of segregation may be; but we believe that the true reason for the decline of leprosy in Norway is that the country has been remarkably prosperous of late years. The people are better clothed, better housed, better fed; the standard of living has greatly improved; and as a result leprosy has ceased to prevail. It is chiefly dirt and unwholesome conditions of life that gives rise to skin diseases of the leprosy and cognate characters, and where dirt and unwholesome conditions of life are successfully combatted, there leprosy, the history of civilised Europe proves, is doomed to die out. We have, therefore, for this, as well as other reasons, always protested against the premature adoption of a policy of segregation, trusting to the certain operation of better sanitary conditions effecting in time and by degrees the object aimed at.

THE ABKARI DEPARTMENT.

(Bombay Gazette.)

The Resolution of the Government of Bombay on the working of the Abkari Department in 1888-89 is conspicuously brief, but after the four hundred pages which the Secretary of State hurled at Mr. W. S. Caine the other day this can scarcely be a matter of complaint. The Resolution, nevertheless, cannot as it stands be accepted as an adequate review of the Abkari history of a year which was fruitful in experiment and in change. It must be read in connection with a batch of enclosures in the celebrated despatch of the 4th February, in which the great breakdown of the percentage system in the Thana and Kolaba Districts was described, and the arrangements experimentally substituted for it were set forth. Upon these arrangements the Resolution is properly silent, inasmuch as they came into operation some months after the close of the year to which the report relates. Moreover, the future policy of the Department in other districts will largely depend upon the result of the experiments in Thana and Kolaba, and Government may for some time to come be properly reluctant to make large inductions upon the subject. The way is being prepared for the introduction of improved methods in both the Kanara and Rutnagherry districts, where orders have lately been issued for the abolition of the outstill system. The question as to what method shall be substituted for it is expected to be answered by the result of the experiment commenced a year ago in Thana and Kolaba. Meantime, one of the worst features in the old minimum guarantee system is once again brought to notice. In no fewer than four districts, Broach, Nassik, Khandeish, and Kaira, the contractors had to pay deficiencies on their guarantee—a fact whose significance ought by this time to be well understood. It is not satisfactory to learn that a new method of classifying receipts has been adopted in Bombay City and Thana District. To the two old classifications of "spirit" and "toddy" a third, "spirit and toddy," has been added, and some inquiring statistician will one of these days come to grief, as Mr. Caine did, in one of the pitfalls dug for lay minds by the ingenious inventors of the new arrangements of figures.

BENGAL

(July 15.)

THE LIEUT.-GOVERNOR held a durbar at Belvedere to-day, at which Sir Jotendro Mohun Tagore was invested with the title of Maharaja Bahadur and presented with a sword of honour.

MR. COLVIN, Private Secretary to the Lieut.-Governor of Bengal, has been appointed officiating Postmaster of Bengal.

THE honorary secretaries of the Calcutta Permanent Memorial Fund in honour of H.R.H. Prince Albert Victor have informed the Government of Bengal that they have only realised Rs. 20,756 out of the Rs. 46,000 which was promised, and this includes two subscriptions of Rs. 10,000, each given anonymously.

THE Calcutta Criminal Sessions commenced yesterday, and an application was made to have the Chartered Bank Case and the recent Child-Wife Culpable Homicide Case tried by special juries.

THE Englishman hears on excellent authority that the statement regarding the Assam Chittagong Railway scheme having fallen through is unfounded. Three proposals have been submitted, two of which may be regarded as dismissed. The third, however, is being carefully considered, and is likely to be accepted.

IN spite of the preliminary announcements in the papers that Babu Surendra Nath Bannerji would arrive at Howrah Station on his return from England on Thursday last, and there would be a reception, only about a hundred people assembled, fully two-thirds of whom were schoolboys. There were very few men of prominence in the local community present.

THE Statesman of the 9th reports:—"The junctions of Lyons Range and Olive-street was the scene yesterday afternoon of a brutal assault on a European by some fifty Marwaris, who belaboured him with umbrellas and sticks, smashing one of his fingers and wounding him in several parts of the head. The European, evidently a sailor, had been drinking at the groshop at the corner of the above locality, and had playfully snatched the handkerchief of a passing Marwari, who reported the occurrence to his brethren assembled at the adjoining share mart. A crowd immediately issued from there with umbrellas and sticks, and assaulted the unfortunate sailor. Fortunately Mr. Siddons, the sharebroker, and another gentleman were driving past at the time, and were able to rescue the sailor and save him from more severe handling. There were several Native policemen and a large number of peons from the Secretariat offices about, but not one of them made an effort to interfere."

THE news that President Harrison had given his assent to the American Silver Bill was at once followed in Calcutta by a higher exchange than has ruled for years. Six months' sight bills were sold at 1s. 7½d., and the rupee rose to a fraction below 1s. 7½d. The excitement in the bazaar was intense, and business practically ceased.

MADRAS.

(July 16.)

ABDUL HUQ, Sirdar Dilar-ul-Mulk, has been at his own request permitted to re-visit Hyderabad. He is expected from Bombay shortly, and is likely to remain at Hyderabad for over a week.

THE Nizam is in search of a hill retreat within his own domains, and has accordingly directed Major the Nawab Afsur Jung to proceed to the Amrabad district and inspect a certain plateau close by, said to be about 4,000 feet above sea-level.

MAJOR GOUGH, although still confined to his room, is said to be progressing daily, and has considerably improved in health within the past week. Dr. Leahy hopes that, in a few days more, the sporting Major will be able to leave the house for a drive.

ON the 10th instant, before the Town Magistrate of Bangalore, while a witness, who was about 40 years of age, was being examined, in connection with an assault case, he gave out that he earned a quarter of an anna a day in a ginger beer bottling business, maintained by a Native, and seemed to be quite content with his position.

ANOTHER European has been set upon and nearly killed at a place called Satenappally, in the Kistna district. He is Mr. Vinaye, a young man who had lately gone to that place as resident agent for Messrs. Volkart Brothers. Full particulars of the occurrence have not yet been received, but it is said that Mr. Vinaye and his servant were attacked in broad daylight by dacoits, robbed, and left for dead.

A CORRESPONDENT writes to a Madras paper:—"It appears that in 1887 Savari Raja Nayudu, of Kothangudi village, in Thiruthuraiyandi Taluq, very bravely and at very great personal risk to himself, saved the life of two men who were being carried away by the rapid current of the freshet in the Panani river, in the Tanjore district, and that the Inspector of Police, D Division, Mannargudin, furnishing to the superintendent an account of the occurrence, recommended the man strongly for a head constable's place, where he said he could have more scope to exhibit his courage. But Savari, who happens to be a matriculate and comes of a noble family was more ambitious, and put in a petition for an inspector's place. This apparently was not acceded to, so the young man is likely to go without a reward at all. As G. O. No. 2,396, dated October, 1877, provides for the reward of men for such meritorious deeds, it is hoped that Government will see fit to direct some reward to be conferred upon him."

MR. J. A. JONES, the Sanitary Engineer to the Government of Madras, is, says the Madras Mail, still hard at work on his scheme for purifying the River Cooum, and his report is not likely to appear for at least two months. The cleansing of the Cooum is a subject on which a diversity of views is held amongst the engineers who have studied it, and the task which Mr. Jones has had set before him is by no means an easy one. Mr. Jones, it will be remembered, submitted a scheme to the Government as far back as 1877. At that time he probably knew much less about the Cooum than he does now; but though the proposals then made may not be repeated, whatever proposals he now makes will probably tend in the same direction, viz., to keep up a circulation in the lower reaches of the river which will form a salt-water estuary, and to treat the upper reaches so that they will be fresh-water lakes. The Government is apparently determined to do something in the matter at last, and we can only hope that Mr. Jones's scheme will, after due consideration, receive speedy sanction, and that some funds will be allotted at once.

BOTH the Conservators of Forests in the Madras Presidency recently suggested the desirability of the formation of a special class at the Agricultural College, Sydapet, where candidates for the post of Forester and Ranger would be able to obtain instruction sufficient to enable them to pass the Upper Secondary Examination in Forestry. This proposal, says the Madras Mail, was made as the Conservators were of opinion that if no means are now taken to provide training for them it was very improbable that eligible candidates for the post of Forester would be found after 1st April, 1891, when the order of Government would come into force prohibiting the promotion to the class of Forest Ranger of any but passed students of the Dehra Dun Forest School. As it is impossible at present to post an officer of the Forest Department to Chingleput, who will be able to lecture on Forestry at the Agricultural College, the proposal has been negatived; but to compensate the Forest Department for the inconvenience in recruiting its ranks the Government will grant exemptions to non-qualified candidates as long as the Director of Public Instruction is not able to provide in the College the teaching required for candidates for the Forest Department.

MR. H. A. ACWORTH, C.S., is gazetted Major of the Bombay Volunteer Rifle Corps.

MR. H. W. J. BAGNELL has been appointed to act as Professor of English Literature in the Elphinstone College, during the absence of Mr. A. Barrett on privilege leave.

A BARODA PAPER, noticing the return of Sir Harry Prendergast to the Baroda Presidency, says that his locum tenens, Colonel F. H. Jackson, reverts to his pucca appointment of Assistant Agent to the Governor-General in charge of the Amreli Districts. As on many previous occasions, while presiding at the Baroda Residency, the Colonel has exhibited urbanity, tact, industry, and firmness in retaining the cordial relations between the Government of India and his Highness the Gaekwar's Durbar.

THE sporting practices of the B.L.H. were discontinued last week, owing to the lamented death of Lieut. Harold King.

ON the evening of Saturday last, an occurrence took place at Upper Colaba, which, but for timely assistance, might have proved fatal. A woman named Linga, aged about fourteen years, having had a disagreement with her husband, threw herself into a well near the Royal Artillery Sergeants' Mess. Sergeant Fergusson, R.A., the caterer coming out of the mess shortly afterwards heard her groans, and dressed as he was, pluckily jumped into the well to her assistance. The woman in the meantime had sank to the bottom; Sergeant Fergusson dived and brought her to the surface, and she was taken out little the worse for her escapade. Sergeant Fergusson was then got out with but a small wound on the head. The well is about twenty-five feet deep, with sixteen feet of water in it. The woman was at once removed to the G. T. Hospital.

IT is notified in the Government Gazette that Shriman Goswami Shri, 108, Girdharajee Govindrajee, Maharaja Tikayet and High Priest of the Vaishnava community, is exempted from personal appearance in Court.

THE Superintendents of Police of the Great India Peninsula and the Bombay Baroda and Central India Railways respectively are appointed ex-officio Deputy Commissioners of Police in the City of Bombay.

MR. J. F. DARLING, of the National Bank, Bombay, has gained the certificate of the Institute of Bankers (London), having passed both the preliminary and final examinations in political economy, commercial law, practical banking, arithmetic and algebra, and book-keeping. This entitles him to be elected an Associate of the Institute of Bankers.

AMONGST the passengers who arrived from Europe by the overland mail steamer on Saturday were General Sir Harry N. Prendergast, the Governor-General's Agent at Baroda, Surgeon-Major Dhunjeesha Nowrojee Parakh, Surgeon in charge of the Goculdas Tejpal Hospital, Mr. Justice J. W. Handley, and Mr. Ommanney, C.S., late Inspector-General of Police, Bombay.

AN accelerated mail is being arranged between Bombay and Umballa via Itarsi, Tundla and Delhi, over the new Kalka line, from the expected opening on October 1st. It may be taken for granted that a similar acceleration will be made via Rewari and Ferozepore; else a return to the old mail route via Umballa may be found the best for Lahore and stations to the north and west.

SEASONABLE rain has fallen at Kurrachee. It rained on the 1st and 2nd, and a very copious shower fell on the night of the 3rd, placing many roads and compounds of houses under water. Fodder had previously become very scarce, and the water-supply not comforting. The worst fears are now, however, dispelled. The Malir and Hubb River are reported to have brought down freshets, which is an indication of the rainfall being general.

THE DEATH OF MR. HAROLD KING.

WHEN the telegram arrived from Aden last week announcing the sad and sudden death of our respected citizen, Mr. Harold King, mingled with the many regrets at his demise, was a feeling of surprise that heat apoplexy should have been the cause, for no one would ever have dreamt of a man of Mr. King's vigour, constitution, and build, being attacked by that fell disease. From inquiries instituted on Saturday, however, on the arrival of the s.s. Oriental in port it was ascertained how the unfortunate gentleman fell ill and met his death. It would appear he was not in the best of health when he left England, and the long and tedious journey across the Continent so exhausted him that on reaching Brindisi he was quite prostrate. In this exhausted state he was attacked with fever, but it was thought the sea voyage would speedily restore him. Still, he was so weak that he had to be carried on board the vessel, where by the kindness of the captain he was accommodated with a cabin all to himself. At the hands of the doctor and many friends on board he received every attention, and appeared to be recovering both health and spirits rapidly. He was getting on so well, in fact, that it was hoped and expected he would be quite strong again ere Bombay was reached. But another unseen enemy was at work. The trying passage of the Red Sea which Mr. King weathered bravely was almost completed; the ship was less than a day's voyage from Aden, when suddenly Mr. King was stricken down with a fit of heat apoplexy, and ere long he was no more. The event, so unexpected, cast a heavy gloom over the whole vessel, turning mirth—for the voyage up till now had been an exceedingly enjoyable one—into melancholy. The captain, who had been exceedingly kind to his invalid passenger the whole voyage through, felt the event as keenly as any on board. It is usual on such occasions to bury the body at sea, but he determined not to do this on the present occasion. A coffin was made on board; the remains of Mr. King were placed therein, and on Aden being reached the body was sent ashore to be buried there.

By the kindness of a fellow-passenger and intimate friend of the deceased gentleman another account of Mr. King's illness and death has been supplied to us:—

The mail steamer Oriental, which left London at noon on June 20, and Brindisi at midnight on June 29, arrived at Bombay about four P.M. on Saturday. Mr. King was among the passengers who got on board at Brindisi. He was then suffering from fever, brought on probably by the rather long and fatiguing journey from Charing Cross. A comfortable cabin was reserved for his use, and the doctor was unremitting in his attention to him, and this on the journey to Port Said had the desired effect, as he rallied and seemed in good spirits. At Port Said a stay of several hours was made to take in coal, and the voyage was resumed at about seven o'clock in the evening of July 3. The passage down the Red Sea was as favourable as such passages usually are in July, but notwithstanding the care and attention bestowed by Captain Stewart and the ship doctor, who was now assisted by an army doctor who was on board, Mr. King succumbed to heat apoplexy at about six A.M. on the 7th, to the grief of all on board. As the vessel was now within 200 miles of Aden, Captain Stewart, with the consideration that usually characterises him, rather than adopt the usual mode of burial at sea, had a coffin prepared, and on arrival at Aden made the body over to the authorities to be interred in the churchyard early the following day.—Bombay Gazette.

NORTH-WEST PROVINCES AND PUNJAB.

(July 16.)

THE Council of the Institution of Civil Engineers have awarded the Telford medal to Mr. Walton, C.I.E., Engineer-in-Chief of the Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway, for the construction of the Dufferin Bridge over the Ganges at Benares.

SUNDAY, the 6th, was observed as "Hospital Sunday" in all the Simla places of worship, and collections were made for the Ripon Hospital, the finances of which are in anything but a satisfactory condition. The day was not favourable, as the weather was threatening at both the forenoon services. At Christ Church the offertories amounted to Rs. 1,176.

THE third annual Mussoorie Art Exhibition was opened, on the 4th inst., by Sir John Hudson before a considerable audience. Taken as a whole, there is some falling off in the exhibits compared with last year. Mrs. Smythies had the best water-colour from nature; Miss Wagentreibe the best figure subject; Mrs. Burrard the best oil-painting; and Mrs. Benbow the best art decorative painting. Mr. Webb won the prize for Amateur Photography.

THE public inquiry into the Cawnpore assault case was opened on Monday by the Commissioner of Allahabad in his executive capacity. The signatories of the petition to the Lieutenant-Governor were represented by counsel. Evidence offered in support of the allegations made against the magistrate and police was recorded, with a view to testing the truth of the charges advanced in the memorial.

THE Dufferin Hospital at Bareilly has proved a great boon to the women and children of that city. Purdanashin women now resort to it in increasing numbers. The success of the scheme there as elsewhere is in a great measure due to the unflagging interest which his Honour the Lieutenant-Governor takes in it, and the encouragement which those connected with it have at all times received from him. On Sunday last the Lieutenant-Governor went through all the wards of the dispensary, even inspecting the separate barracks for patients suffering from contagious diseases, and expressed great satisfaction at the uniformity and cleanliness of all the arrangements.

ON the 8th inst. the divorce case of Masters versus Masters and Griffin, which had been pending for some time, was heard by the Chief Court of the Punjab in exercise of its Matrimonial Jurisdiction. The petitioner, Mr. Masters, is an officer of the Salt Department, and his prayer is for a divorce from his wife on the ground of her misconduct with the co-respondent, Griffin. This, says a contemporary, is the same gentleman whose extraordinary career as Lieutenant King-Harman, Captain Russell, Lieutenant Biddenfield, and other aliases, was terminated by his arrest the other day at Bombay on a charge of cheating. The Court granted the petitioner a decree nisi, and also Rs. 2,000 damages and Rs. 500 costs against the co-respondent.

Following the example of Bombay and Calcutta, Simla intends to seek profit and amusement in an old English Fair, which will no doubt be a great success. The fair is to be held in the Town Hall, Simla, some time in September, and their Excellencies the Viceroy and Lady Lansdowne have lent their names as patrons, while the Commander-in-Chief and Lady Roberts, the Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab, and Lady Lyall, and all the Members of Council are vice-patrons. The charities to be benefitted are the Ripon Hospital and Lady Dufferin's Fund. There will be the usual stalls and a large number of side shows, including shooting galleries, peep-shows, a mock art exhibition, a dog show, a post office, a café chantant, and a temple of Thespis, where a blood-curdling melo-drama will be played.

AN inexplicable assault was committed on a European gentleman at Lahore on the 9th inst. evening last. Mr. Boyd, agent for Messrs. Cutler, Palmer and Co., was leaving Lahore for Rawal Pindi, and on arriving at the station, the coolie who he had engaged to carry his things to the train, suddenly dropped them on the platform and struck Mr. Boyd on the face three times. A ticket-collector, on going to the gentleman's assistance, was similarly assaulted, and it was with great difficulty that the man was arrested and taken in charge by the police. The man is supposed to be mad and has been sent by the police to the Civil Surgeon for examination; but from enquiries made we learn that the Native was formerly employed at the goods shed on the North-Western Railway, and was recently dismissed, and it is possible that he mistook Mr. Boyd for a railway official.

THE Archaeological Survey perseveres at its unostentatious task of reclaiming from ruin and oblivion the countless inscriptions which lie scattered about India, offering a clue to many a knotty question of ancient history and philology. These despised or neglected records are found in all sorts of likely and unlikely places. One, writes the Englishman, which has lately been recovered from obscurity, and which is just a thousand years old, was found incised on a stone slab partly fixed in the wall of a house and used as a seat, in the bazaar at Pahoa or Pihewa, in the Umballa district. Considerable difficulty was experienced in inducing the owner of the house to allow the stone to be removed, but the treasure was eventually acquired, and now lies in the Lahore Museum. The inscription consists of twenty-one stanzas of Sanskrit verse, and is an account of the building and endowment of a temple of Vishnu, together with a eulogy of the family who performed the meritorious deed. Regarding one of the brothers we are told that "when suppliants with rapture looked on his lotus face their mental anxiety completely vanished in an instant; and the crowd of hostile trumpeting elephants always shook before him in battle ready to disperse." This may be taken as characteristic Oriental rendering of the sentiment of the familiar Scotch song, "His step is first in peaceful hall, His sword in battle keen." For extravagance of laudation, however, a higher place must be given to an inscription found near Jubbulpore, in which it is said of a certain King, that although the tread of his armies roused the apprehension of the three worlds—heaven, earth, and hell—yet there was no dust raised, as the road was flooded by the tears of the captive women who followed in this train.

MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

CAPTAIN APTHORPE has been permanently appointed to be Aide-de-Camp to the Lieut.-Governor of the Punjab.

THERE has been a severe outbreak of cholera amongst the 1st Gurkha Regiment at Dharmasala.

THE title of Instructor in Strategy, Military History and Law at the School of Military Engineering has been changed to "Instructor in Tactics."

OWING to the Camp of Exercise probably taking place from the middle of November to the middle of December between Attock and Nowshera, the Soldiers' Industrial Exhibition will open at Rawal Pindi on Jan 15th, and not on Dec. 11th, as fixed before.

It has been notified that the Government of India have no intention at present of amalgamating the list of honorary commissioned, warrant, and non-commissioned officers belonging to the Commissariat Transport Department in the three Presidencies, whose names will continue to be borne on separate presidential lists.

THE Bangalore, Bellary and Belgaum Division being too large for one executive engineer the Government of India has sanctioned the formation of an additional Executive Division, Military Works Department, comprising the two latter stations, Bangalore being a separate division with another Executive Engineer.

It has been decided that officers who attend the course of equitation with British cavalry regiments laid down in Clause 171, India Army Circulars, 1888, are entitled to draw their staff pay for the whole period of their absence from their regiments instead of for three months only, provided no extra expense is caused to the State.

BOMBAY Volunteers Orders of the 9th of July by Colonel the Hon. Lyttleton Bayley contain the following reference to the death of Mr. King:—"The Commanding Officer has with deep regret to record the death of Lieutenant Harold R. King. Lieutenant King was elected an officer on the formation of the corps, and ever since he has amply justified the choice then made by its members by his hearty co-operation in everything relating to the interests of the corps, and by his energetic attention to duty and his efforts to promote its efficiency. The loss of so good a comrade and friend will be deeply deplored by the officers and members of the Bombay Light Horse."

THE Hyderabad Contingent Cavalry have been much exercised lately by the prospect of a change in their uniform, which threatened their most cherished traditions. For ninety-eight years they have worn a tunic of dark-green, which has thus come to be looked upon as an essential attribute of the Force, all the more so because the Mahomedans, of which the Contingent is chiefly composed, associate it with their national colour. The other day, however, it appears that some new dress regulations were issued which, while making some minor alterations in the tunic with a view of converting it to the lancer pattern, also decreed that the colour should be changed from green to dark-blue with light-blue facings. Accustomed as our army is to suffer from the zeal of military tailors in high places, one has seldom come across so glaring an instance of the fidgety activity of the instinct as this, which would have violated the traditions and the sentiment of the force and put the officers to an expense of about £100 a piece for no purpose whatever. However, we are glad to know that the matter having been brought to the notice of the military authorities at head-quarters, the change has been disallowed; and the Hyderabad Cavalry will be able to celebrate their centenary, which comes due a couple of years hence, in the time-honoured green.

At the request of the Maharaja of Mysore, Captain Jones, of the 1st Madras Lancers, has been appointed to the post of Inspecting Officer of the State troops. The Mysore forces consist at present of three regiments of infantry and two of cavalry. The former is mainly required for local purposes and is hardly up to the mark for foreign service, nor could it be increased or improved to any extent without recruiting from beyond Mysore. The cavalry, on the other hand, is far above the average in Native States. In the first place the material is excellent, the men being nearly all natives of Mysore and descendants of the fighting families of Mussalmans and Mahrattas who followed the fortunes of Hyder and Tippoo in many a bloody campaign. Secondly, though not officered by Europeans or Eurasians, as is the case in Hyderabad and elsewhere, the Mysore Horse has always been under the general supervision of officers of the British service. It is excellently mounted, better, in fact, than any Bengal regiment can afford to be, and sufficiently well drilled to be brigaded at Bangalore with the Hussars and Madras cavalry of the garrison. It has, therefore, been decided to accept from the Maharaja for war service two regiments of Silladar cavalry, each 600 strong, instead of the large force of both arms offered by his Highness for Imperial defence. The formation of one regiment from the existing Silladar horse will be commenced at an early date.

THE OFFICIAL REPORT FROM THE SELECT COMMITTEE ON THE EAST INDIA CIVIL SERVANTS.

The Select Committee appointed to consider and report upon the alleged grievances of the Uncovenanted Civil Servants of India, arising from the change in the relative value of Gold and Silver Money, and their Leave and Pension Rules:—Have considered the matters to them referred, and have agreed to the following Report:—

Your Committee are of opinion:—

1. That the unforeseen change in the relative value of gold and silver money affords equitable grounds for a readjustment of the pensions of Uncovenanted Civil Servants resident in the United Kingdom. Your Committee have taken evidence, and have agreed to the following resolutions:—

2. That a minimum rate of exchange for payment of pensions should be fixed by the Government.

3. That the minimum rate shall be one shilling and ninepence (1s. 9d.) to the rupee.
 4. That no distinction in the furlough and pension rules should be made between Europeans and Natives of India.
 5. That some period of furlough should in all cases count as service for pension.
 6. That pensionable service should commence at the age of twenty.
- Your Committee are further of opinion that the greater part of the grievances of the Uncovenanted Service is due to the ambiguity in which the terms of service have from time to time been stated, and recommend that in future there shall be as nearly as possible a uniform scheme, which shall explicitly describe the terms of pension and furlough.
- Your Committee have had their attention called to the obstacles in taking furlough, arising from the insufficiency of the present furlough pay, and they recommend this matter to the consideration of the Secretary of State in Council.
- July 29, 1890.

THE designations of the three Surgeons-General of Her Majesty's forces are to be altered to Principal Medical Officers in India, Madras and Bombay respectively. An Army Circular which announces this change declares that they will belong to the staff of the Presidency Commander-in-Chief under whom they are serving, and contains further provisions defining their new status in this respect. Another step this in the progress of army administrative reform and the elimination of the Local Government as a middleman.

MR. PINCOTT ON READING AND WRITING.

IN the current number of the National Review there is an article by Mr. Frederick Pincott, which will be read by several Anglo-Indians with a mingled feeling, which astonishment and amusement may have some part in forming. Mr. Pincott has the pen of a ready writer, and he is fond of using it; he is a scholar, and well versed in certain Oriental languages and literature, and he has a very sincere and catholic sympathy with Eastern races; and he has the courage of his opinions, and does not hesitate to give expression to them, whether they please or not. And he thinks he knows India. Which he does not.

If he did the very curious paper which he has contributed to the National Review would not have appeared at least in its present shape. Mr. Pincott's object is to support the Congress agitation for introducing the elective principle of government throughout India, the text upon which his homily is founded being the following words, which Lord Cross addressed to the House of Lords during the debate in May last, when, in bringing in his Bill for the improvement of the Legislative Councils of India, his lordship spoke of the unfitness of the masses for representative institutions:—

"You can only take about five or six per cent. of that vast population as being able to read or write, and about one per cent. of it as being able to speak English; and of those who may be said to have that moderate amount of education, namely, the capacity to read or write, about three-fourths cannot be said to have really any more than a rudimentary education."

Upon this Mr. Pincott asks: "What is education?" and this is the heading of his article.

When "jesting" Pilate asked "What is Truth?" we are told that he hurried from the judgment seat without waiting for a reply. Mr. Pincott, however, puts his question in no jesting mood, and he furnishes the reply himself. He considers that the question of education has no proper connection with the fitness or the right of people to elect their own representatives. As to the "mechanical" arts of reading and writing, he is much of the opinion of Old King Cole, who, according to the song, "neither read nor write could he," and who—

"Scorn'd the fetters
 Of the four-and-twenty letters,
 And it sav'd him a deal of trouble."

Mr. Pincott bids his readers remember that the people of England have lived under elective representative institutions for hundreds of years, whereas the wide diffusion of reading and writing is a development of the last half century. "It is, indeed, a state of things which is still on its trial." This is exactly what the late Prince Consort said of constitutional principles. The argument in either case carried out to its logical conclusion must land the user of it in a quagmire so far as England is concerned, and this Mr. Pincott seems to see, for he half pleadingly adds:—

"Of course I shall be charged with pleading for the rights of ignorance, and inane witticisms may be cracked on the phenomenon of a Tory still surviving who has not yet realised the humanising influence of reading and writing."

We have no intention of "cracking inane witticisms" against Mr. Pincott, whose intelligence, ability, and literary gifts we fully and readily recognise, but we do take objection to his very paradoxical method of reasoning. He wants to give all the Natives of India, without discrimination, the franchise by a sort of manhood suffrage which they can exercise at their own will and discretion in electing representatives wherever representatives are required. He cannot ignore the mighty ignorance of this mighty multitude, and so he argues that if ignorance be not bliss, it is, at all events, a claim to political power. "My argument," says Mr. Pincott, "is intended to establish the position that, whether the franchise be conferred on India or withheld, the more or less prevalence thereof of reading and writing ought not to influence the decision." But the franchise is not withheld on these grounds only.

England holds India—all sophistry notwithstanding—as a conquered country. The peoples of India are not on the same platform of freedom as the people of England. A wise and beneficent rule is gradually raising them to a higher political level, but such raising must be slow and gradual—not spasmodic—such as Congress agitators and other irresponsible chatterers and oratorical wind-bags would have. Mr. Pincott, however, has all the ambition of a reformer who wishes to reform too much. He is not only content that India should remain in ignorance, but he thinks that in England we are being taught too much. Possibly we are. But what does Mr. Pincott mean by the following :—

“Education, so-called, has grown into a monster of ominous dimensions, and is now fairly on the back of the country like the Old Man of the Sea”?

Surely Mr. Pincott does not hold that “education” means the London School Board?

He thinks, however, that a retentive memory makes up for all deficiencies of rudimentary education, and he gives the following instances from his Indian knowledge :—

“The druggist may be seen any day with hundreds of jars around him, containing every kind of medicine, from the simplest to the most hazardous. Not one of these are marked with label or ticket; yet he never fails to place his hand on the right jar the instant its contents are needed. The washerman affords another instance of phenomenal powers of memory. He collects a huge pile of clothes from many different houses, and carries them on his donkey to the river's bank; he there washes them; and, on returning at night with the vast pile, he never fails to deliver each separate article to its rightful owner.”

This information will possibly take away the breath of some old Anglo-Indians who can picture to themselves that ancient native “druggist,” surrounded by his “hundred jars,” dispensing medicines without a mistake, or can call to memory those tattered remnants of clothing which the ancient washerman would insist really belonged to the Sahib—Huzoor ki hai! That Dhubie's donkey clinches the argument, and the argument, according to Mr. Pincott, is that “that the Indian peasant is quite as capable intellectually of exercising the franchise as the ordinary British workman. He is for all practical purposes quite as well educated—that is to say, his thinking power is as good, his mind is as well stored with useful facts, his respect for the law is as great, his passions are more under control, and in deference to authority he far transcends the average Briton. With the attainment of these results reading and writing have nothing to do.”

If this be so, so much the worse for reading and writing, and so much the better for Mr. Pincott's argument that the Indian Dhubie should have the franchise. The Anglo-Indian who has had practical experience of the country may, however, be inclined to ask—Why not enfranchise the donkey too? He would possibly understand the privilege as well, and make as good use of it as his master.

MR. ARTHUR L. MARTIN-WOOD, whose name appears in a good place amongst those forty-five fortunate candidates at the recent open competitive examination for the Indian Civil Service, is the youngest son of Mr. W. Martin-Wood, whose many Anglo-Indian and Native friends will be ready to congratulate him on his boy's success.

THE equipment of Marine Courts of Inquiry at Bombay would seem to be somewhat primitive, if a newspaper report is to be credited, which states that at a late investigation into the grounding of the steamer Suez, a witness asking for a pair of compasses to mark a position on a chart, was informed by the President that no such instrument was in possession of the Court. The nearest approach to it was offered, viz., a pair of scissors.

LORD REAY AND THE "HUMOURISTS."

The Statesman says:—Fun is an excellent thing in its place, especially when it is illumined by humour; but there is a time for all things, and the man who subordinates his better feelings to the desire of being thought funny, is generally a very poor creature. The writer in the Pioneer who has chosen Lord Reay's speech at the recent banquet of the Northbrook Club as a subject for the splutterings of a ribald pen is probably a poorer creature than most of his class, for his humour has not even the merit of being genuine. It may be that Lord Reay spoke more feelingly than it was quite wise to speak, with so many daws about, when he said that at his death the name of Bombay would be found engraven on his heart; but, being the expression, as no one can doubt that it was, of a full heart, this was not quite the kind of utterance that a generous man would set himself to make fun of. While, however, this ill-conditioned critic was in the satiric vein he might for the sake of his readers, if not of his victim, at least have taken a little more pains to polish his shafts. The suggestion that "if his lordship's organ is thus easily impressed, 'Bombay' will be found over-written or postscripted, with 'mamltdars indemnity,' 'Wilson case,' 'Crawford case,' 'Police muddle' and other memoranda which will crowd all the available spaces of so great a heart," bears about as much resemblance to true humour as an elephant to a racehorse."

This fresh outburst of malevolence on the part of the Pioneer is doubly inopportune. Not only does the character of the occasion render it specially ungracious, but it is in conflict with the tendency of public feeling at the moment. The abuse of Lord Reay has been so indiscriminate and so rancorous that even his political opponents are beginning to cry shame. A local contemporary only expresses what every lover of fair play must endorse, when it says he has been pursued with an enmity so outrageous that it has to a large extent defeated its own purpose. The Pioneer itself is apparently not untouched by this reaction; for it has suddenly awoke to the necessity of depreciating virtues which, though it cannot deny them, it has hitherto conveniently ignored. We "do not say," it pleads, "that Lord Reay's rule was in every respect and in every regard a failure: we have never said so. Barring the University muddle, his educational policy was enlightened and attended with excellent results, he did much also to encourage trade and commerce and to improve agriculture by the removal of transit duties, the construction of railways, and the extension of irrigation; but these are things which come into the ordinary day's work of every Indian Governor." To the statement which we have italicised, few persons who know anything about the work of an Indian Governor are likely to take exception; but more than a few will certainly be disposed to supplement it. These are things, they will say, which come into the ordinary day's work of an Indian Governor, but which in too many cases come into that work only to be grievously neglected.

DEATH OF AN OLD HERMIT.

A Hindu correspondent writes to a contemporary:—There has died lately at a place called Baorodi, in the district of Dacca, a hermit of great piety and renown, at the marvellous old age of a century and a-half, or, as some of the vernacular papers of Bengal say, at the age of 159. The real name of this sage and philosopher was Lokenath Ghoshal. He was a native of western Bengal, and a Brahmin by birth. At the comparatively young age of eleven, just when he wore his sacred thread, and was installed a twice-born, he left his home and adopted the hard life of a devotee. It is said of him that he ranged free in wild forests and mountains contemplating the Supreme Being, and thinking of nothing terrestrial. He had been to Mecca, the principal place of pilgrimage of the Muhammadans, and saw that great Shiva there who is styled the god of Mecca, and whose touch alone is sufficient to make a Hindu the sovereign lord of the Universe, according to the notions prevalent in Bengal amongst Hindus. He was in Thibet, Tartary, China, Ceylon, and also in all places where there are any traces of Divinity to be found under the sun. In Thibet he is said to have come across many sages and hermits whose silver visage and broad forehead had seen many a deluge and many a creation, and who had successfully weeded out of their mind all desires and passions by concentrating their whole attention on the contemplation of the Almighty. He led a solitary life during his latter days at Baorodi—a little quiet hamlet removed from the haunts of worldly people. He lived only thirty-six years in this village, where he was revered and respected by all. His powers of healing the sick and the afflicted were something wonderful. Diseases which baffled the skill and experience of the best doctors and physicians of the land he healed without recourse to any medicine by simple touch of his hand. "Thou art healed," said he, as he touched or cast a glance at the afflicted individual, and directly the sick man was restored to health and energy. Many educated and enlightened Babus, some of them pleaders of the Dacca Judge's Court, became his disciples in his latter days, and were his devout admirers. He died, like the famous monk of Beda, while teaching his disciples. Such was Lokenath Ghoshal, the Baorodi Brahmachari (devotee), whom a vernacular paper of Dacca extols above the names of Christ and Mahomet, and whose death seems to be a remarkable event, at least amongst the people of Eastern Bengal.

THE men belonging to the Madras regiments, recently disbanded, are being enrolled as police.

It is now seventeen years since the commencement of the Acheen war, so it is satisfactory to know that the Dutch are at last on the eve of crushing their enemies. Hitherto the Dutch claim to have followed a waiting policy in the hope of tiring the Achinese out and gaining over their leaders, especially the titular Sultan. The coast has been guarded, but for political and financial reasons the blockade has only been vigorously enforced by fits and starts, and during the intervals arms and stores of all kinds have been abundantly supplied to the Achinese by blockade runners. Now the blockade is being enforced with the utmost vigour, and precautions have been taken to prevent the Achinese drawing any supplies from within the Dutch lines. The Achinese war party are said to feel the pinch severely, and they must now either submit or resume the offensive vigorously to improve their position.

The consumption of tea is rapidly increasing, in spite of doctors' warnings. Whether this increase is due to the spread of teetotalism, and whether it is good or bad for the nation's nerves, we do not know; but it is a fact which should be borne in mind by investors who are looking for an outlet for spare capital. In 1720 the amount of tea imported into England was 700,000lb. Since that date its consumption has steadily increased. The approximate figures for the first six months of this year are as follows:—

	Indian.	Ceylon.	Total, Indian and Ceylon.	China, &c.	Grand Total.
	lbs.	lbs.	lbs.	lbs.	lbs.
United Kingdom ...	51,000,000	15,750,000	66,750,000	29,000,000	95,750,000
Exported ...	1,500,000	750,000	2,250,000	15,250,000	17,500,000
Total ...	52,500,000	16,500,000	69,000,000	44,250,000	113,250,000

Since the East India Company began to import tea in 1669, India has been making great strides in the cultivation and exportation of this article, and of late years has left China a long way behind. Investors might with advantage pay a little attention to this industry, in which about £5,000,000 have already been sunk, and which, as our readers will see from the above figures, has, on the whole, proved a very profitable investment.

THE BROAD ARROW

NAVAL AND MILITARY GAZETTE

ESTABLISHED 1833

EVERY SATURDAY. PRICE SIXPENCE.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" has acquired a reputation for early and exclusive intelligence as to Appointments and other service News, for the high character of its articles, the independent course of its staff of writers, and for its earnest support of all measures for the good of the Services. Articles on specially interesting subjects appear from week to week written for the most part by officers of rank and experience, or by men of note in literature who have made the Naval and Military affairs of the country their special study. A series of Illustrated Articles is appearing weekly on Regimental Badges and History. Illustrations with descriptions are also given of new Service Inventions.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" freely opens its correspondence columns to all grades in the Services. By this means an opportunity for interchange of opinion is afforded, such as is offered by no other Service Journal. Its ordinary weekly issue contains fully one-fourth more matter than the other Service Journals, even with their frequent "supplements."

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" circulates largely throughout India and the Colonies. It is supplied direct to the Army and Marine bureaux of the French, Russian, and other Governments, and it is read extensively by Officers of Foreign Services, especially of the German, French, and American Armies, who desire to acquire a true impression of facts and public opinion in England regarding Military affairs.

THE CALCUTTA REVIEW.

(The only Quarterly Review in India.)

ESTABLISHED 1844.

OPINIONS.

The Calcutta Review for October reached us a day or two ago, and a glance at its contents shows that the number more than sustains the reputation which the old and favourite publication is again achieving. The Review is rapidly regaining the position which it... there is no fear of the Indian Review, or the Asiatic Quarterly rivalling it in public favour.—Statesman, October 1886.

... The best service which I ever rendered in India, or, indeed, for India, was the establishment, single-handed, of the Calcutta Review, which has done far more for Indian literature than anything I have written under my own name.—J. W. KAYE, Athenaeum Club, June 23, 1872.

The Calcutta Review has given us valuable articles on the army. Scarcely from the pen of Sir Henry Lawrence, who wrote with the spirit of prophecy of the coming storm of which he was one of the noblest victims.—Address of the C.-in-C. at the U.S. Inst. of India.

... The Calcutta Review has not only throughout its career reflected the highest honour on its public-spirited promoters and its well-known distinguished contributors, but has done much to help forward the reconstruction of our system of governing India.—Westminster Review.

LIGHT versus DARKNESS.

"SHAKESPEARE, the Greatest Genius who has ever yet lived," taught the Divineness of Forgiveness, of Perpetual Mercy, of Constant Patience, of Endless Peace, of Perpetual Gentleness. If you can show me one who knew things better than this man, show him!! I know him not!! If he had appeared as a Divine, they would have Burned him; as a Politician, they would have Beheaded him; but God made him a Player.

"He taught that kindness is nobler than Revenge!!"—The Rev. GEORGE DAWSON, M.A.

"Earthly power doth then show likest God's
When mercy seasons justice,
And that same prayer doth teach us all to render
The Deeds of Mercy."—Shakespeare.

What higher aim can man attain, than conquest over human pain?

JEOPARDY OF LIFE, THE GREAT DANGER OF DELAY.

You can change the Trickling Stream, but not the Raging Torrent.

WHAT EVERYBODY SHOULD READ.—How important it is to have at hand some simple, effective, and palatable remedy, such as ENO'S "FRUIT SALT," to check disease at the onset!! With little trouble you can change the course of the trickling mountain stream, but not the rolling river. It will defy all your tiny efforts. I feel I cannot sufficiently impress this important information upon everybody. Let ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" be your companion; under any circumstances its use is beneficial, and never can do harm. When out of sorts, Restless, Sleepless, yet unable to say why, then your whole body is out of order, but you do not know where it may end; it is a real necessity to have a simple remedy at hand. The Pilot can so steer and direct as to bring the ship into safety, but he cannot quell the raging storm. The common idea when not feeling well is: "I will wait and see; perhaps I shall be better to-morrow;" whereas, had a supply of ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" been at hand, and use made of it at the onset, all calamitous results might have been avoided. What dashes to the earth so many hopes, breaks so many sweet alliances, blisters so many auspicious enterprises, as untimely Death?

I used my 'FRUIT SALT' freely in my last severe attack of Fever, and I have every reason to say I believe it saved my life."—J. C. ENO.

CAUTION.—Examine each Bottle, and see that the Capsule is marked ENO'S "FRUIT SALT." Without it you have been imposed on by a worthless imitation. SOLD BY ALL CHEMISTS. PREPARED ONLY AT

ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" WORKS POMEROY STREET, NEW CROSS ROAD, LONDON, S.E. (BY J. ENO'S PATENT.)

NATURE RULES ALL THINGS.

In every form of weakness use Scalded Milk.

ENO'S "VEGETABLE MOTO," occasionally a desirable adjunct to ENO'S "FRUIT SALT," as a simple and Natural Laxative, Stomachic, Blood, Brain, Nerve, Bile, or Liver Tonic; or, in other words, when taken as directed, their action is as simple as a to-mato, whole meal bread or porridge (with scalded milk); you cannot overstate their great value in causing a natural, slow, and gentle action of the Liver; by that means you keep the blood pure and prevent disease. In advanced life they are everything you could wish. Read Practical Hints on Constipation, Indigestion, Liver Diseases, Impure Blood, Sleeplessness, Nervous Headache, Treatment of Gout and Rheumatism, how to Prevent Consumption, Jaundice, and other disastrous diseases by Rules for Health and Longevity, &c., in a pamphlet given with each Bottle of ENO'S "VEGETABLE MOTO." They can be used for any length of time without fear or harm.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

WEDNESDAY AUGUST 13, 1890.

General Intelligence.

[BY OVERLAND MAIL.]

THE Overland Mail brings us letters and advices from Bombay to the 25th July; from Allahabad and Madras to the 23rd July; and from Calcutta to the 22nd July.

IN the course of his cold weather tour the Viceroy will arrive at Agra on November 22nd, and stay twelve days. His Excellency will open the local waterworks on December 2nd. August 5th is the probable date of Lord Lansdowne's departure from Simla to Chini.

AT the meeting of the Supreme Legislative Council at Simla on July 24th the Census Bill was referred to a Select Committee, with instructions to report after two months.

THE HON. MR. HUTCHINS introduced a Bill to amend the schedule to the Petroleum Act, and explained that the alteration suggested is really of a purely technical character. The schedule was originally prepared in England by Sir Fred. Abel de Warden and Mr. Redwood, but was modified by certain provisions of Dr. Warden's as now drafted.

IN introducing the Bill to amend the Indian Paper Currency Act of 1882 Sir David Barbour said that, under the provisions of the existing law, the whole amount of coin and bullion received for currency notes is retained as a reserve to pay these notes, with the exception of six crores, which is invested in Government of India securities. In 1877-78 the minimum circulation of the year was Rs. 11,13,00,000, and on the 7th of the present month it had increased to Rs. 18,00,00,000. The hon. member stated that, this being the case, it was expedient to increase the limit of investment, and proposed that the legal limit be raised from six to eight crores, which would result in eight lakhs being added yearly to the public revenue. The hon. member stated that the Chambers of Commerce in Bombay, Calcutta, and Madras, the Government of India, and the Secretary of State had approved of the alteration. The Bill was then introduced.

THE HON. MR. CROSTHWAITE moved for leave to introduce a Bill to provide for the better administration of the North-West Provinces and Oudh, and said the Benares Division having been found too extensive a charge for one Commissioner it is proposed to separate the districts of Gorakhpore, Basti, and Azamgaza, and to create a new division, containing three districts; also to transfer the district of Jaunpore from the Allahabad to the Benares Division, and to make the latter consist of the five permanently settled districts of Benares, Mirzapore, Ghazipore, Ballia, and Jaunpore. The transfer of Jaunpore to Benares will enable the local Government to abolish the Jhansi Division, which, comprising Jhansi, Jalaun, and Lalatpore, is a scheduled district under the District Acts of 1874, and can be conveniently administered by the Commissioner of Allahabad. With regard to Oudh it is proposed to transfer to the Board of Revenue of the North-West Provinces the powers and duties performed by the Chief Commissioner as the chief controlling Revenue authority, as such duties cannot be given sufficient direct personal attention by the head of a large Government, care at the same time being taken to preserve the special powers of the Chief Commissioner in the settlement of the Taluqdari Mahals, and annulling the settlement of such Mahals for arrears of the revenue. The next proposal, the hon. mover explained, was to relieve the Commissioner of his judicial functions, and increase the number of the District Judges; and it is, therefore, decided to reduce the Oudh Division to two only, while in order that Munsifs and Subordinate Judges in Oudh may be able to assist the District Judges more effectually it is proposed to confer on them a jurisdiction, similar in extent to that exercised by the same officers in the North-West Provinces. The ordinary jurisdiction of a Munsif is raised from suits of value not exceeding Rs. 500 to suits not exceeding Rs. 1,000, while the local Government is empowered to still further increase their jurisdiction. Certain amendments are also to be made in the Oudh Rent Act.

MR. J. H. TWIGG is permitted to resign the Bengal Civil Service.

MR. C. A. BIRD, District Judge of Godavery, retires from the Madras Civil Service from August 11th.

IT is probable that Surgeon-Major Owen will remain on as medical officer to the Commander-in-Chief instead of going, as previously arranged, as Residency Surgeon in Kashmir. The appointment was made when Sir Frederick Roberts had expressed his willingness to accept the Adjutant-Generalship at home.

MR. HOLDERNESS, Director of Land Records and Agriculture in the North-West Provinces, is now making a tour in the plains, visiting Allahabad and the various divisional headquarters' stations and holding the kanungo examinations, which take place at this time of year.

MR. R. BRERETON, Joint Magistrate of Meerut, goes to Gorakhpur shortly to officiate for three months in the Collectorship of that district.

RAI HARI LALL, Sub-Judge of Hardui, has been appointed to officiate as District Judge of Lucknow until the return from leave of Colonel F. M. Newbery.

NOTES.

THE news from India is scant enough, as will be seen from a perusal of the telegrams and the Overland Summary which we publish to-day.

COMMENTING on the Government resolution on the working of the Indian railways last year, and which working shows, as telegraphed by the Times correspondent, a loss of just under one hundred lakhs of rupees, a financial contemporary says:—"It may be hoped that the loss will not again approach such a sum. The Government this year buys two of the guaranteed lines, and so saves the excess of the rate of interest paid to the shareholders over the rate at which money can now be borrowed. Moreover, the improvement in the rupee will reduce the difference between the receipts handed by the railways to the Government and the sum payable for guarantee. For in the former case the receipts are paid in rupees, calculated at the old par of two shillings, while the payments to the companies are made on a sterling basis. In the end there is not much difference, but through the use of the two-shilling standard the guaranteed railways are frequently able to boast that they pay more to the State than they receive in interest, when in point of fact it is quite the other way. The Government's rupees are counted at the current rate of exchange, while the companies are taken at two shillings all the time."

THE news from Simla is, of course, of pleasure, tempered, however, with some pain, in consequence of the departure of Lady Lansdowne for England. A Simla correspondent writes:—"The 'last Saraband' previous to the departure of her Excellency Lady Lansdowne for home was danced at Viceregal Lodge on Thursday night, in the shape of an old English country dance, Sir Roger de Coverley. For the dance the chief partners were H.E. the Viceroy and Lady Roberts, the Commander-in-Chief and Lady Lansdowne, and Lady Lyall and H.H. the Raja of Kapurthala. The ball room was full, but not overcrowded, and the floor and music were all that could be wished. Of recent arrivals in Simla the Hons. R. J. Crosthwaite and Mrs. and Miss Crosthwaite were present. The dance was kept up until a somewhat later hour than usual, as it was half-past one or two before the last jimrickshaw got away. Thus closes a season of hospitality and kindness at Viceregal Lodge which will serve to keep the memory of our Viceregal hostess green while she is away from India."

LADY HARRIS has been equally happy in winning popularity at Bombay. Commenting on her visits to the Sassoon General Hospital the Madras Times says:—"At the close of each of her visits there the patients have a busy time of it in disposing of the beautiful jellies, custards, and such-like goods things specially prepared by the chef at Ganeshkind. Nor is the nursing staff forgotten. One may often see a Government House carriage standing in the compound of the Hospital waiting to take the hard-working nurses for an evening drive. Would we had a Lady Harris in Madras!"

MADRAS is quite right to "stick up" for itself and repudiate the charge of being "benighted." The Madras Mail gives the following excellent arguments against that charge:—"It is the fashion amongst certain people (some of them living in the city itself) to assert that Madras is behind the times in everything, groping everlastingly in outer darkness. To such people we commend a perusal of the account given elsewhere of the Madras Leper Asylum, which, long before the 'Leprosy Scare' had been started and officially fostered by people of high degree, was doing the same good, quietly and unostentatiously, that it is doing now. There is not another city in India which possesses an institution equal to it. 'A Bombay Man,' who has recently visited Madras, writes as follows in the Times of India: 'The Madras Gardens, with its rare trees and its broad groupings of bright plants and flowers, the Madras museum, with its well-arranged specimens and its scientific catalogues, all impress one with the fact that Madras is, for some matters, far in advance of other towns which are less modest. In the whole of the Bombay Presidency there is not a single botanic garden, and Bombay has a museum which is unworthy of the smallest provincial town. There is grave danger in being satisfied with the historical fact that we are Urbs prima. To speak of Madras as 'benighted' is a foolish slander.'"

JUST as the mail left Calcutta an extraordinary rumour had reached that city from Darjeeling to the effect that the coolies who were carrying the Chinese Amban's baggage ran away with him and it; that subsequently he had the ringleaders executed, but that the remaining coolies rose and killed him!

OUR friends in India are not slow to "take opportunity by the hand." The Englishman says:—"The great rise in exchange comes most opportunely to aid the powerful remonstrances which have lately been addressed to the Indian Government on the subject of the Income-tax. In the face of the renewed and widespread opposition, and of the indignant feeling which the latest extensions of the obnoxious Act have excited, it would be difficult for the Finance Minister to speak of it again as other than a measure to be quickly repealed. If we add also that the revised estimates for the current year will show a large profit on exchange, and that the burden of the home charges will be very sensibly lightened for the future by the improvement in silver, it becomes impossible to believe that a plausible excuse for postponing the abolition of the tax can be offered. Indian Finance Ministers are rid of the bugbear of exchange for at least a considerable period, and for this reason alone the Income-tax should form no item in the Budget of another year. In the last estimates exchange was taken at a fraction over 1s. 4½d. It is now practically certain, however, that actual transactions with the Secretary of State will show an average of twopence more. Sir David Barbour will, therefore, have an unexpected surplus of from two to three crores of rupees under the head of exchange alone. The Income-tax yields much less than one-third of the latter sum, and those who contribute it should be the first to benefit by the new era of fiscal prosperity."

A LETTER will be found in our correspondence column from Mr. Frederic Pincott, in reply to our editorial comments last week upon his curious article in the National Review. We give insertion to this letter with much pleasure, for it explains much in Mr. Pincott's article which certainly was not quite clear to our limited comprehension. We have no desire to misunderstand or misinterpret Mr. Pincott, and we are glad now to learn from him that he is not in favour of giving the franchise indiscriminately to the Natives of India, but recommends a less "monstrous" scheme—a "modicum of enfranchisement"—in which neither the dhoti or his donkey would have any part. This is well, and we are sure that it will be much better for both these parties that it should be so. Into the larger questions which Mr. Pincott suggests for discussion we cannot to-day enter; but we do not hold with him that the Indian peasant is "quite as well educated as the ordinary British workman"—but "contrariwise," as "Alice in Wonderland" hath it.

LATEST INTELLIGENCE.

INDIA.

CALCUTTA, AUG. 10.

The Government resolution on the working of the Indian railways last year, which has just been published, shows encouraging financial results. The net loss to the State was just under a hundred lakhs, and was mainly due to the military and guaranteed lines. The former were never expected to be remunerative, while the loss on the latter was chiefly due to the high rate of guaranteed interest which is payable until the contracts terminate. That rate averages 4½ per cent. in gold, whereas the Government could now borrow at about 3; but after all deductions the railways earned 4·78 per cent. on the capital, of which the State received 4·47 per cent., so that had the whole debt been raised at 4 per cent. there would have been a profit of about 95 lakhs.

The President of the Bank of Bombay, addressing the annual meeting of the shareholders on Friday, said that the rupee value of Indian produce had declined almost in exact proportion to the rise in exchange, and the value of the whole produce of the country had suddenly changed 15 or 20 per cent. It was impossible to predict the result; things might adjust themselves, but he thought there was much cause for anxiety and for caution, as the recent great increase in the trade of Bombay had been concurrent with a falling exchange.

CALCUTTA, AUG. 11.

The Anglo-Indian Defence Association have addressed a memorial to the Government praying for the abolition of the income-tax. They quote the strong expressions of opinion of the Bengal Government, the Revenue Board, and the Divisional Commissioners regarding the unpopularity of the tax and the difficulty of accurate assessment.

AFGHANISTAN.

CALCUTTA, AUG. 11.

The Ameer's arrival at Cabul has been celebrated with great rejoicings. Deputations from the principal chiefs, leading citizens, and military officers presented him with Rs. 60,000 to be applied to charitable purposes.

Several of the Sheik Ali Hazara rebels were brought before the Ameer, who bade them depart and apply their efforts to persuade their tribe to respect their allegiance.

BURMA.

RANGOON, AUG. 9.

There are great floods in the Chindwin valley, the river having risen to an unprecedented height. Kindat and Mingin are inundated. A Government steamer has been sent to assist and relieve the inhabitants. The Irrawaddy is also very high, and some anxiety is felt for the safety of the embankment protecting Mandalay. A vigilant watch is being kept. The water is higher now than it was in 1886, when the embankment burst. In the district immediately around Mandalay scarcely any rain has fallen; the floods are due to the melting snows of Bharno and the heavy rains in the northern districts. In the upper portion of the Irrawaddy the current is so strong that the Government steamer George, which was proceeding to Bharno, was unable to get through a defile and was forced to turn back.

During the visit of the Chief Commissioner to Myingyan a remarkable demonstration was made by the people in favour of Yanyun, a dacoit chief, who recently surrendered on the promise of an amnesty, and who has since been condemned to death. The arches erected to welcome the Chief Commissioner were placarded with prayers for mercy. Fifteen petitions praying that Yanyun's life might be spared were presented to Sir C. Crosthwaite. One petition was presented by a deputation of 190 Phoongyees or Burmese monks; another was signed by men of all nationalities, comprising merchants and several municipal commissioners of Myingyan. The local officials tried to prevent these demonstrations. The sympathy for Yanyun is due to the fact that he did not act towards the people with the cruelty which has marked other dacoit leaders, and that he is regarded by them as a patriot, and not as a brigand.

LIEUTENANT GALLIE, who was the cause of the Hyderabad Commission inquiry, has been permitted to discontinue his studies at Secunderabad, and will re-join his regiment at Mangalore.

IMPORT OF SPIRITS.

(Englishman.)

The import of brandy into Calcutta in 1889-90 declined 13½ per cent., at which the Collector of Customs is not surprised when he reflects upon the quality of the liquor received under that name. Much of it has very little resemblance to brandy, except perhaps in colour. It is the commonest spirit that can be got up to look like brandy, and chiefly emanates from Antwerp and Hamburg, the average declared value being from Rs. 2-8 to Rs. 3 per imperial gallon. Of course, there is good as well as bad, and the best brandies come in bottle from the United Kingdom. Gin drinkers in India are a limited and a diminishing brotherhood. The taste is steadily falling off, and the import is now half as much as it was five years ago. As for whisky, the quality of the favourite brands is maintained, and the best guarantee that distillers and shippers will in future continue to live up to their reputation is the fact that the moment they cease to do so they will instantly lose their hold upon the market. Unfortunately, with the commonest sorts of whisky, as with brandy, the tendency is downwards. A quantity of it is inferior German spirit, made from anything but malt—from rice principally, it is believed—and then coloured and flavoured to represent whisky. Under other "other sorts" are included all the descriptions of spirit not separately shown. Rum, which was formerly an item of importance, has fallen away to insignificant figures, being only 910 gallons in the past year, against 9,047 gallons in 1888-89. China formerly sent the largest quantity of this spirit from that country. The cheap common spirit from Germany has apparently killed this trade. Methylated spirit has fallen off by 13,320 gallons, owing to smaller importations from the United Kingdom and the Straits Settlements. There was a considerable advance from Germany, owing to greater facilities for direct importation.

AJMIRGARH AS A SANITARIUM.

(Civil and Military Gazette.)

It will be remembered that in January last the Government of India sanctioned the establishment of a sanitarium on the hill of Ajmirgarh in the Nagpore district, during the hot weather, for the use of the British troops located at Kampti, as an experimental measure. Well, experiment has been tried, but unfortunately with bad results. It appears that malarial fever prevails on the hill. In April last a large proportion of the small detachment there were down with it, and we regret to hear that one death occurred. The health of the men, too, was reported generally indifferent, and there was even sickness amongst the followers. The authorities in Bombay, acting on sound medical advice, took prompt measures to evacuate the place immediately. It is fortunate that they did so, as had the detachment remained there till the rains it is highly probable that matters might have been worse. From this we may conclude that the idea of forming a permanent sanitarium at Ajmirgarh will be abandoned. Besides being unhealthy, it is also too inaccessible to make it a suitable site. As we have mentioned before Chikalda would seem to be a much better place. Its climate has been tried, for it is the summer headquarters of the civil administration of the Hyderabad Assigned Districts. It is also nearer than Ajmirgarh to Kampti, and may be reached from Amrawatti on the line between Nagpur and Bhusawal. We should say that there was necessarily a large risk in taking up quarters at an untried place like Ajmirgarh; and it would be well if the military authorities were to refrain from these colonising experiments—at any rate with British troops—when the civil authorities prove by the best demonstrations, namely, living there whenever they require a health resort in hot weather, that another suitable place has been reasonably tried and not found wanting. Such a place is Chikalda, which, besides being healthy, has also the advantage of having a post, supplies, and other conveniences already established there. This, too, reduces expenditure which, next to health, is most important.

REVISING THE EVIDENCE ACT.

(Pioneer.)

The Bill recently introduced into the Legislative Council amending the Indian Evidence Act is one which has long been needed. Under Section 54 of the Act evidence of a previous conviction can be admitted against an accused person, with the express purpose of prejudicing him on his trial—a procedure exactly contrary to the law in England. So far back as 1887 we directed attention to this point, quoting a full bench ruling of the Calcutta High Court, and more particularly Mr. Justice Pigott's remarks, as showing how necessary it was that the law should be amended. We then stated that the judges were perplexed to find that if they held that evidence of previous convictions was admissible during the course of a trial, not only would an unjust and unreasonable prejudice operate against the prisoner, but a formidable novelty would be admitted into the rules of evidence applied in criminal proceedings. But the words of Section 54 were clear enough, and, on turning to the report of the Select Committee on the original Act, it was discovered that the section had been deliberately framed. Mr. Justice Stephen, then legal member, and his colleagues had, as a matter of fact, placed on record the following extraordinary note:—"We include under the word 'character' both reputation and disposition, and we permit evidence of previous conviction against a prisoner for the purpose of prejudicing him. We do not see why he should not be prejudiced if it is true." The Calcutta High Court had no option, in the face of this statement, but to rule that the section must be construed as it stood, though the effect might be manifestly unjust. We are glad to see that this blot upon the Indian statute book is now about to be removed, and that due regard will be paid in future to one of the weightiest principles of English law under which an accused person is expressly shielded from prejudice.

THE ETHICS OF TRANSPORTATION.

(Times of India.)

A very interesting note on the ethics of penal transportation is appended to the recent Government despatch on the subject of the habitual offender, with which we dealt at some length the other day. It is an extract from a letter signed jointly by Mr. Lyall and Surgeon-Major Lethbridge, the Inspector-General of Gaols, Bengal, pointing out that it is both impracticable and undesirable to make labour in transportation as severe in its nature as labour in a gaol in a convict's native country. Exile, not hard labour, is the deterrent feature. "The object of the convict's life in the penal settlement should be to do that which, in our Indian gaols we have been obliged to renounce as impossible of attainment, viz., to effect his reformation by removing him for a long period from the scene of his crimes, and by placing before him the prospect of substantial advantages which he can earn by continued good conduct." Inquiry shows that this system of treatment has been very effective at Port Blair. Of 12,549 convicts at the end of last year 9,093 were life-convicts. Of these 3,285 were self-supporters, and had attained the status almost of free persons within the Settlement, living a domestic life in their villages, cultivating the soil, and earning money by trade, service, or agriculture. To this condition well-conducted male convicts can attain after half their term of exile has expired. "We have seen many villages of these people, and had much talk with them; and from all we have heard, and the impressions we ourselves have gathered, it appears to us that the system yields the most satisfactory results in promoting the reformation of transported offenders." Crime among self-supporting convicts is extremely small; self-respect again asserts itself, and, however bad their previous career may have been, the great majority of them appear to lead quiet, industrious, and creditable lives.

BENGAL

(July 22.)

THE whole of the Revenue Secretariat will move down to Offcutta this winter, the experiment tried last cold weather of dividing the office between Simla and Calcutta having been found inconvenient.

The new Government of India Secretariat Office in Calcutta, that has risen on the site of Loudon's Buildings, will be ready for occupation by the end of the year. The walls of the second story are completed.

THE total number of deaths registered during the week ending 12th July in Calcutta was 177 against 172 and 161 in the two preceding weeks, and lower than the corresponding week of last year by 38. There were 56 deaths from cholera, against 10 and 15 in the two preceding weeks; the number is higher than the average of the past quinquennium by 5. There were 2 deaths from small-pox during the week, against 3 in the previous week. There were 8 deaths from tetanus, against 11 in the previous week. The mortality from fevers and bowel-complaints amounted to 60 and 23 respectively, against 64 and 15 in the preceding week. The general death-rate of the week was 21·3 per mille per annum, against 21·5, the mean of the last five years.

FORESTRY is every year yielding better results in Bengal, and bringing in large profits to the Government. In 1884 the net profits were little more than a lakh and a-half; in 1888 they had risen to more than two and a-half lakhs; and last year they amounted to Rs. 3,08,738. Expenditure has increased, but only to a small extent as compared with the receipts. Last year the profits were less than they might have been, as in Orissa, owing to scarcity, the bulk of the forests were thrown open to the public, not only to meet their own personal requirements in produce, but also for the removal of fuel for sale. In this way the Government was saved from cash expenditure on local relief to a considerable extent.

A TELEGRAM informs Messrs. Gillanders, Arthbutnot and Co., the agents of the Darjiling Railway, that, owing to excessive rains (over thirteen inches) and flooded jhoras, two bridges at the twenty-fifth mile, between Gyabarie and Mahanuddy stations have been washed away, and through traffic for both passengers and goods is suspended in consequence. Every effort is now being directed to reconstruct the bridges without delay, but it will probably be a week before traffic can be resumed.

ON Monday, before the Calcutta Chief Presidency, Mr. Dave Carson appeared, and desired to make some complaint. On being asked what it was, Mr. Carson stated that he had been in hospital for some time and left it that morning without the consent or knowledge of the authorities. He was compelled to leave owing to supernatural causes, and could not go back. His Worship suggested that some one should take Mr. Carson back to hospital, where he would be cared for. Mr. Carson replied he could not go back to hospital, as he had to go to prison. "Mr. Marsden, Mr. Hogg, and the public know what deeds I have done and deserve punishment, for I have disgraced my friends and family, and require to be punished for the deeds I have done throughout." As there seemed to be some doubts about his sanity, and to all appearance he was suffering from illness, his Worship advised Mr. Carson to go back to the hospital, where he could tell his story to some of the authorities.

MADRAS.

(July 23.)

THE Forest Department of the Mysore State supplies the Mysore State Railway with fuel, and the Inspector-General of Forest Plantations, having in view the increasing demand of the railway and the mills in the province, has made arrangements for maintaining fuel plantations on a large scale.

THE supply of wood fuel for the Madras Railway is said to be becoming more and more precarious, and even at enhanced rates it is now difficult to meet moderate requirements. It has, therefore, been found necessary to burn patent fuel to a larger extent, and this has been attended with a heavy increase in expenditure. Experiments in Singareni coal have not been found satisfactory, and unless Australian fuel can be placed at a lower figure than at present, it is highly probable that there will be a considerable increase in the general cost of fuel on this line.

IN the district of Nellore no less than 148,957 coercive processes were issued during the year 1889-90 for arrears of land revenue amounting to Rs. 7,55,634. Of these the property of 12,629 defaulters was attached for a total of Rs. 1,25,235, but most of them paid up before their property was brought to sale, excepting 1,837 individuals, whose property was sold for arrears aggregating Rs. 22,897. The property attached was of the estimated value of Rs. 30,468, but only realised Rs. 21,852, or Rs. 1,045 less than the amount due by the defaulters. The loss to these unfortunate ryots must be great, as their property was sold at a loss of 25 per cent. on the estimated value, probably fixed by the subordinate revenue officials, which it is expected was much lower than the real value of the articles or land as the case may be.

THE Resident's proposals for the improvement of the defences of the Hyderabad Residency and the removal of the treasure to Trimulgherry entrenchment have been sanctioned, the estimated cost of the measure being Rs. 80,000. The work will be commenced as soon as possible. The Military Works Department will prepare a design and estimate for the treasure-room in communication with the Resident and the Commander-in-Chief of Madras.

BOMBAY.

(July 25.)

GENERAL SYMONS, of the Chin-Lushai Expedition, sailed on Friday. His three brothers in Bombay are sportsmen well known throughout India, and a large party of their friends assembled to see him off from the Apollo Bunder. Mr. J. A. Baines, the Census Commissioner, also went home on two months' leave, to commence from Aden.

COLONEL MEAKIN on the 16th inst. paid a high compliment to the Parsee Volunteers at Poona. After seeing them through their drill, he said that he was glad to see them come forward so well, and hoped that they would acquit themselves to the Inspecting Officer's satisfaction both in drill and musketry practice.

MESSRS. B. and A. HORMARJEE notify that the directors of the Coorla Mills have decided to pay an interim dividend at the rate of Rs. 20 per share for the half-year ending 30th June last. Due notice will be given by advertisement of the date when the dividend will be made payable next month.

An application for the "exclusive privilege" of using an invention, or discovery, by means of which a saving of 50 per cent. in the consumption of fuel in steam boilers and steam motors can be effected, has been submitted to the Governor-General by the inventor, Mr. George Spiers, C.E., and he has been enabled, through the kindness of his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, to submit a petition to the Patent Commissioners for Letters Patent for the United Kingdom and Ireland.

The Bombay Municipal Corporation devoted nearly the whole of the afternoon of the 17th inst. to discussing the report of their Committee on the subject of the maintenance of primary education in the city. Mr. P. M. Mehta, in a long and elaborate speech, proposed the adoption of the report, and requested the President of the Corporation to address the Government upon the subject in the terms thereof. Mr. Kirkham proposed an amendment, "That the subject be postponed till the opinion of the legal advisers of the Corporation be obtained, regarding the legal obligations of the Corporation and Government, respectively, in the matter of primary education, under the provisions of the City of Bombay Municipal Act. And that the draft letter and legal opinion be remitted to the Committee, with a request that they will kindly revise the draft, and introduce such changes, if any, as they may consider necessary, in the light of the opinion and of this discussion." After a long debate, Mr. Kirkham's amendment was, on a division, lost, Colonel Merewether and Dr. Viegas being the only members who voted with him. Mr. Mehta's proposition was carried by a very large majority. The Corporation also considered the report of their Committee on the treatment of contagious diseases. Mr. Mehta brought forward a proposition adopting the report, and requesting the President, as in the above case, to address Government in terms of that report. In the course of discussion, Colonel Merewether and Sir Henry Morland took exception to the wording and tone of certain paragraphs in the draft report. The debate upon the question was not concluded when the Corporation adjourned.

The Bombay Municipal Corporation on Monday resumed consideration of the proposal brought forward at their last meeting by Mr. P. M. Mehta that the report of the Committee of the Corporation on the subject of the hospitals for the treatment of contagious diseases be adopted, and that the President be requested to address Government upon the subject in the terms of that report. To the above proposition Colonel Merewether had proposed an amendment that the report be sent back to the Committee for revision of the language of paras. 2, 6, and 11. Both the proposition and the amendment were discussed by the meeting at great length. With the permission of the meeting, Mr. Mehta was allowed to omit the following sentence from the report: "They have come to look with suspicion on such opinion as not unfrequently that of experts, whose assertiveness and estimation of their own superiority overpower that sense of caution which the discipline of scientific methods should, though it often fails, teach them." Mr. Mehta's proposition was eventually carried by a very large majority.

The students of the Elphinstone College, past and present, gave an ovation to Professor Wordsworth on Saturday afternoon, on his recent nomination to the Vice-Chancellorship of the local University. Principal Wordsworth was to preside at the lecture of Professor Macmillan on "Indian and Greek Epics," and the passage through which the Principal was to enter the lecture-room was previously occupied by more than two hundred students, who had arrayed themselves in two rows, and greeted him with loud and prolonged cheers, and showered handfuls of roses on him when he passed them. Mr. Manubhai N. Mehta, M.A., Senior Fellow of the College, then decorated the Principal with a garland, and presented him with a bouquet. He at the same time congratulated him on behalf of the students in very cordial terms on the high honour that was conferred upon him by his Excellency the Governor, and said that the illustrious roll of Vice-Chancellors had received a worthy addition in his nomination. The honour, he further said, had come upon him as a fitting crown to his Indian career towards its close. The students had assembled here to offer him a modest tribute of their profound gratitude, and prayed he would put off his intended retirement. Professor Wordsworth in reply said that he was deeply moved by the hearty ovation, and reminded the assembly of the pleasure of similar demonstrations which had been held on his receiving the honour of C.I.E., and on his departure to Europe on furlough. He hoped during these six months he was here no thorny questions would crop up in connection with the University. Two triumphal arches were erected at the entrance, bearing the inscription "Welcome Our Beloved and Sapient Vice-Chancellor." Professors Peter son, Macmillan, Oliver, and Moos were also present to offer the Principal their hearty congratulations.

NORTH-WEST PROVINCES AND PUNJAB.

(July 23.)

MR. BROWN, Deputy Manager of the North-Western Railway, has passed the higher standard in Pushtu, and obtained the usual award of Rs. 800.

THE first lecture of the Simla Institute is likely to be given within the next fortnight on "Smokeless Powder" by Colonel O'Grady Holy, a well-known authority on the subject.

THE Lahore paper regrets to have to report the prevalence of cholera among the troops stationed in Dehra Doon. The 2nd Goorkhas and the Bengal Mountain Battery have both been attacked; out of twenty-six seizures, we hear that nineteen proved fatal. This is a large percentage, but every precaution has now been taken to minimise the spread of the disease. It is, however, feared that it might break out among the neighbouring tea plantations and villages, in which case the danger would assume serious proportions. At present it is mainly confined to certain sections of the cantonment grounds, which are being put under a better system of sanitation.

An indignant correspondent of the Lahore paper wishes to expose a "common trick of the police." He says that a disguised policeman goes to the bazaar and orders a couple of coolies to go to a certain address at a certain hour and bring away a box which they will find in the front room of the house. He then assumes his rôle of defender of the public, and informs his superiors that a burglary is intended at such and such a place. A police ambush is laid, and the door left invitingly open for the coolies to enter, and these are captured red-handed in the act of removing a box! Their story of the strange man in the bazaar is disbelieved by the Court, and the unhappy coolies go to jail and the policeman gets great kulos. The story is a pretty one; but our correspondent who, while desiring to remain anonymous himself, gives places and names of the offending policemen, may have invented the whole of it to get an enemy into trouble.

THE ACCIDENT TO MAJOR PIKE.

A correspondent sends the Civil and Military Gazette a reliable account of Major Pike's recent encounter with a bear. He says he repeats the story very much as he had it from the gallant Major:—

The account is all wrong. The brute when wounded must have followed us up. He jumped out on the shikari, passing me quite close, knocked him down and got on the top of him. I could not shoot him, as his head was between the shikari's shoulders, so gave him a kick to make him stand up. However, he turned on me like a pig, caught me by the leg and threw me, then the row began. At last he got me by the neck, and I got my feet into his belly where he was wounded, and threw him over my head somehow. I fancy he was a bit sick from the pain of the pressure on the wound. He stood steady for some seconds, during which I tried to raise my rifle with my right hand. I had got such a smack from him on the right shoulder that I found I could not raise it. I then got it in my left hand, and shooting with it like a pistol, shot the "bar" in the head. I walked back to my camp, got carried to Coolangan, where General Hadow and McLaughlin made me comfortable for the night. Dr. Davis came in at six A.M., having ridden fourteen miles, dressed my wounds (some forty-one), and I got off in my boat. Dr. Sparkes at Sopor again dressed me, and I got in here at ten P.M., when Dr. Neve overhauled me. All, or nearly all, the wounds healed at "first intention," and I never had a day's fever. The above is the plain, unvarnished tale. I wish the sportsman who put in the other account had asked me about it. It makes one look such a fool to be supposed to go up to a beast to see if it was dead. Of course one would throw stones and such-like first to make sure.

A LINK with the past is severed by the death, at Bedford, at the age of seventy-four years, of Mrs. Caroline Catherine Hill, second daughter of the late General Sir Robert Sale, G.O.B., whose gallant defence of Jellalabad against the Afghans nearly half a century ago was the one redeeming feature in the tale of our terrible disasters in the passes of Cabul, and whose wife, Lady Sale (Mrs. Hill's mother), a captive in the hands of the Afghans, wrote a thrilling narrative of the sufferings of herself and her fellow-captives during their memorable adventures. Mrs. Hill's husband was Captain Rowley John Hill, an officer in the Bengal Irregular Cavalry. Her marriage was celebrated on January 2nd, 1835, and she became a widow in November, 1850. The second of her four sons is Lieutenant-General Rowley Sale-Hill, C.B., a distinguished officer of the Bengal Army, who is engaged in the task of defending the military reputation of his grandfather, the hero of Jellalabad. The latter, it will be remembered, met a soldier's death in one of the great battles of the Sutlej campaign.

MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

It is finally decided that there will be no cavalry camp this year.

THE Volunteer Reserve in the Punjab will not be a separate battalion, as only eighty names have been enrolled in Lahore but will be attached to the 1st Punjab Volunteer Rifles.

THE following are the conditions of service of British officers appointed to regiments of Burma Infantry:—(1.) Present commandants will be subject only to the 52 years' age rule in the matter of tenure of appointment. (2.) Bengal officers will hold their appointments for five years, and be seconded in their Bengal regiments as for any other special appointments. (3.) The names of Madras officers taken from the Punjab Frontier Force will be removed from the rolls of their regiments in that force. (4.) The names of Madras officers belonging to Madras regiments will likewise be removed from the rolls of those regiments, i.e., they will be transferred from their present to their new regiment.

It would be interesting to know what is the real value of the Persian army. Mr. Curzon and other travellers declare that for all practical purposes it would be useless in modern warfare; but General T. E. Gordon, Military Attaché at Teheran, who is well qualified to pass judgment upon Asiatic troops, holds a very different opinion. In a letter to a friend in India describing the parade at Teheran on May 31 in honour of the Swedish Envoy, he mentions that 10,000 men were on the ground, of whom 3,500 were cavalry, 500 artillery, and 6,000 infantry. The cavalry showed first-class "Asiatic form," and were a really fine sight, being especially well mounted; the fifty guns, all of Austrian manufacture, were equally well horsed, while the infantry shaped well. One feature of the review was the presence of 700 Cossacks under Russian officers. If the Shah's regiments were officered by Europeans more generally, they would doubtless soon be equal to our own Native troops, the material available being excellent.

THE annual report for 1889-90 of the Rohilkhand Volunteer Corps has just been published. The battalion comprises three companies—at Bareilly, Chandausi, and Shahjahanpur, with a reserve company at headquarters, Bareilly. The enrolled strength is 117 of all ranks, being a decrease of 13 from last season. There were 37 enrolments and 50 resignations during the year. The reserve company numbers 48 of all ranks, being an increase of 10 over last year. The average attendance at drills by each volunteer was 14.18, as against 20.93 in the previous season. The decrease is chiefly the result of the bad attendance of the Chandausi company, which was mainly owing to their being without an officer during the greater part of the drill season, and to the press of work on the railway. One hundred and nine of all ranks qualified for the capitation grant. In musketry the figure of merit of the corps is 171.64, or an increase of 2.04 points. The number of marksmen increased by one, being 22, and the best shot in the corps in the annual course was Volunteer H. Martin, who scored 243 points. Brigadier-General Sir Robert Low, K.C.B., who held the annual inspection of the corps, expressed himself satisfied with its condition, but was disappointed at the meagre attendance (44 all told), and intimated his intention of reporting to Government the great disadvantages that a company like that at Chandausi laboured under, owing to the absence of the whole of its officers during the greater part of the drill season.

AMONG the usual amendments to the annual Army Act there are this year one or two having special reference to India. We notice, says the Pioneer, a provision relating to that impalpable body, the reserve of officers, which will have the effect of bringing them under military law. As far as we know this will affect no single person at present, but one is glad to see that the almost forgotten scheme of offering temporary commission in the regular army, in case of an emergency, to officers of the police and volunteers, is not so dead as might have been imagined. Another clause which repeals part of section 151 of the Act, relating to Courts of Small Causes and Civil Courts in India, is the outcome of the Indian Act which abolished the Military Courts of Request. A third amendment is directed to the removal of one of the minor anomalies of the admirable Presidency system. It appears that under the Act the Commander-in-Chief of a Presidency could not legally mitigate, remit or commute the punishment of a man belonging to the troops under his command, unless he were undergoing sentence within the territorial limits of his Presidency. Thus the Bombay Commander-in-Chief could not mitigate (although presumably he could enhance) the sentence of a court-martial at Neemuch or Kamptee, nor the Madras Chief one passed at Sambulpur or Rangoon. The case which brought matters to a head was one of a murder in which there were undoubtedly extenuating circumstances. The court-martial, the law leaving no option, passed sentence of death, which the Presidency Commander-in-Chief naturally desired to commute, but found that he could not; the result being that the case had to go up to the Government of India before the prisoner could be delivered from his doom. Doubtless this is only one prominent instance of the circumlocution and inconvenience brought about by the state of the law, which has now been simplified by giving the Commander-in-Chief the necessary powers in any place occupied by the troops under his command.

MR. PINCOTT ON EDUCATION.

TO THE EDITOR.

SIR,—I thank you very warmly for the prominent notice you have so kindly given to my National Review article, and I hope that you will thereby induce several people to read it. If they do, however, they will find it very different from your presentment of it. You have overlooked the careful way in which I everywhere distinguish "education" from "reading and writing"; indeed, the whole object of my Paper is to show that the two terms are not synonymous. Until you can prove that "reading and writing" actually is education, and not merely means to education, all your remarks against my argument are pointless. You make me say that "education" has no proper connection with the fitness or the right of people to elect their own representatives." This is precisely what I do not say, but thoroughly repudiate. I say that "reading and writing" have no proper connection with that subject. Again, you say that I "cannot ignore the mighty ignorance of this mighty multitude." This, also, is what I deny; for, as you in another place quote, my words are, that the Indian peasant is "quite as well educated" as the ordinary British workman.

In justice to the serious subject on which we are writing, I hope you will allow me to point out that you have (no doubt unconsciously) totally misrepresented my views on the question of Indian enfranchisement. I have never said or implied, even in the most distant manner, either in the Paper you notice or in any other of my writings, that I want to give "all the Natives of India, without discrimination, the franchise by a sort of manhood suffrage." Such a monstrous scheme I would exert my utmost powers to crush, were any fanatic wild enough to propose it. But to withhold the franchise altogether is the exactly opposite extreme, which has now become almost as dangerous as its indiscriminate exercise would prove. The modicum of enfranchisement, which, I think, might now be wisely conferred, is that half the Provincial and Supreme Councils should be elected; the voting atoms to be the Municipal and District Local Boards, the Chambers of Commerce, &c. Neither the Dhobi nor his donkey would have any part in this scheme. Those who now elect the Local Boards would continue to do so just as though nothing had happened; but one additional duty would be imposed on the Boards themselves, that is, they would be required to vote for (not send) representatives to the Provincial Councils. The representatives which their combined votes might elect should then, in their turn, act as voters to elect the independent half of the Supreme Council.

I think, now that you know my real views on the subject, you will be disposed to admit that they are not so very revolutionary after all.—Very sincerely yours,

FREDERIC PINCOTT.

THE following is taken from the Daily News:—"On November 16th last we printed a telegram from our regular Correspondent at Calcutta in which it was stated in a general way that various charges had been made against the Maharajah of Bhownuggur, and that the Indian Mirror, a Native paper, which is usually active in the defence of the Native chiefs, had joined in the demands for an inquiry. On the 19th of the same month we published a letter wherein the excellent qualities of his Highness and his many services to the State were set forth. We now learn from Bombay that criminal proceedings were instituted against the authors of a publication which was responsible for the current charges, with the result that two Hindoos formerly connected with the State of Bhownuggur have been convicted and sentenced to the maximum penalty of two years' imprisonment, the verdict being concurred in by the judge who presided, and the imputations made against the Maharajah and other officials were found to be utterly untrue. It was elicited during the trial that a conspiracy had been formed for the purpose of extorting money from the Bhownuggur State. We regret that the good faith of our Indian contemporaries was imposed upon, and that we became the medium of making their statements known."

THE SITUATION IN AFGHANISTAN.

The return of the Ameer Abdurrahman to his capital, after an absence of two years in Aghan Turkestan, is an event of some importance, and will justify a sketch of the present situation in Central Asia. When Abdurrahman left Cabul in the summer of 1888 the rebellion of Ishak Khan threatened the dismemberment of the kingdom which he had laboriously welded together, and which had just been safeguarded against further Russian encroachment by an international agreement. He returns to his capital with the knowledge that his rival cousin is an exile and powerless, and that the northern province is as thoroughly pacified and subjected to his authority as the districts south of the Hindoo Koosh. It is also necessary to recall the fact that when the Ameer set out on this expedition he had agreed to receive an English mission at Cabul, and that such a mission, under the charge of Sir Henry M. Durand, the Viceroy's Foreign Secretary, was on the point of starting, when it was countermanded owing to the departure of the Aghan ruler for the scene of contest. His return to Cabul will necessarily revive the consideration of a project which aimed at strengthening the links binding the Governments of India and of his Highness in cordial alliance. The further consolidation of a stable and central authority in Afghanistan, and the desirability of improving not only our relations, but our means of diplomatic intercourse, with the Afghan ruler combine to render it advisable for us to keep our attention fixed on the position of affairs in that part of Central Asia with which we are most directly concerned.

It would be grave and inexcusable neglect if we omitted to congratulate the Ameer Abdurrahman on the unqualified success which has attended all his operations, and on the ability and energy with which, after a single victory in the field, he tranquillised a disturbed province and a turbulent population. He has apparently neglected no precaution calculated to insure permanency for the administration he has established in the districts dependent on the Governor at Mazar-i-Sherif. He has placed strong and trustworthy garrisons in all the principal towns from Faizabad on the east to Maimana on the west, and those troops who followed the fortunes of Ishak and survived the campaign are fugitives in Bokhara. During his two years' stay in the province he not only formed an administration, but he personally superintended its working and arranged all the details. He believes that he has provided in the simplest manner for the efficient government of Turkestan and for the maintenance of his authority therein. He has certainly done his best to impress upon his subjects, as well as on his lieutenants, his determination to punish with the utmost severity insubordination or rebellion. The justice of the Ameer has acquired as terrible a significance among the Usbeks as it already possessed in the eyes of the Duranis and Ghilzais. Before denouncing the Ameer's mode of proceeding as cruel, however, allowance should be made for the character of the Afghans; nor ought it to be forgotten that his severity to individuals has been the cause of unusual, or rather unprecedented, tranquillity in Afghanistan to the great benefit of the community.

The Ameer is to be complimented for what he refrained from doing as well as for what he did. In the first place, he must have shown no ordinary restraint to prevent his manifesting in the first flush of his victory his antipathy against the Bokharan sympathisers and supporters of Ishak. In the still more important matter of preventing the large Afghan force assembled north of the Hindoo Koosh from giving umbrage to Russia or provoking a conflict on the frontier, the excellence of the Ameer's arrangements and the firmness with which he kept his somewhat unruly troops in hand were equally admirable and successful. On more than one occasion the Russians collected a considerable force at Kerki, with the view of either forcing events on the Oxus or of taking advantage of any émeute in the Kham-i-Ab district. The Russian officers on the border are naturally never averse to a brush which may lead to promotion and the distribution of crosses of honour, and they have often succeeded in precipitating events against the intention of their own Government. But on the occasion to which reference is made the orders of the Czar were too peremptory to admit of disobedience as long as the Afghans abstained from provocation. Instead, therefore, of the proximity of the Russian and Afghan forces entailing a hostile collision, we find that the prudence and precaution of the Ameer resulted in the establishment of fairly satisfactory neighbourly relations with Russia, and in the commencement of that trade intercourse across the Oxus which the maintenance of peace rendered inevitable. Nothing can be more uncalled for or impolitic than to cry out that Abdurrahman is false to the English alliance because he admits Russian caravans to Balkh and allows Afghan caravans to proceed to Kerki and Bokhara. If he were to attempt to prevent trade, he would not merely be injuring himself and his subjects, but he would really be precipitating the date of Russian intervention by increasing the incentive for her taking action.

If the Ameer was wise in avoiding every act calculated to give umbrage to his powerful northern neighbour, he was not less sagacious in abandoning the ambitious and warlike projects which he contemplated against the mountaineers of Kafirstan. The reasons which impelled the Ameer to undertake that expedition, and at the same time rendered it imprudent for him to carry out his intention, were described in an article in our columns on January 15th last, to which we need not add anything. As the Ameer was known to have very much set his heart on crushing the non-Mahomedan community, which had for centuries defied every Afghan ruler, we can easily understand that it required a special effort on his part to defer to the advice of those who yet had not his interests less in their consideration because they dwelt so strongly on the danger and unprofitable nature of a war in the most unknown recesses of the Hindoo Koosh. Whatever the Ameer may do in the upper valley of the Kunar and Chitral, where the internecine strife of the local chiefs may induce and encourage him to take action to extend his authority up to Gilgit and Baroghil, over a portion of Afghanistan which has never been subject to any Cabal Sovereign, it is satisfactory to know that he has abandoned all intention of conquering the hill State of the Kafirs, who have more than once thrown themselves to a certain extent on our sympathy and commiseration. The Ameer Abdurrahman has also carefully abstained from taking any serious or pronounced measures in the Upper Oxus region. He has confined his attention to strengthening his hold on Badakshan and to maintaining the position his lieutenants had acquired in Shignan and Roshan. Perhaps his appointment of Abdul Kudus Khan, one of the earliest lieutenants of the Ameer, to the Governorship of Bamian, the halfway house between the Oxus and Cabul, is the strongest evidence that he realises that for him all the vital points in Afghan Turkestan lie west and not east of Badakshan.

There is still another matter upon which the Ameer has to be congratulated, and perhaps it is the one upon which the permanent duration of tranquillity in Afghanistan most depends, and that is the proved existence of an heir to the Afghan throne capable of continuing the good work wrought by Abdurrahman himself. The most doubtful circumstance connected with Abdurrahman's long absence from his capital was that his representative at Cabul might prove unable to carry on the heavy task of government. His eldest son, Habibullah, whom he left in charge at Cabul, has proved himself to be a youth of great capacity, much firmness of character, and at the same time attached to his father's interests. The old story used to be that Abdurrahman did not appreciate this son as he ought; but we cannot believe that Abdurrahman, with his long experience of Afghan civil strife, chiefly arising from disputed successions, will be indifferent to the fact that he possesses a son and heir capable of carrying on his work in accordance with his own traditions, and for the purpose of insuring the permanent triumph of his family over the Shere Ali branch of the Barukzais.

INDIAN ALLOWANCES.

"W. X." writes to the Army and Navy Gazette:—Can you or any of your readers state whether the Government of India has any right to pay British troops serving in India at lower rates than those laid down in the Royal Warrant in force at the time? I know that the Royal Warrant only professes to lay down the rates to be paid out of India, but the practical result is that in some instances the allowances paid in India are actually less than at home. Thus—(1) A bandmaster is allowed £70 a year out of India, but only Rs. 800 a year when in India. At the present official rate of exchange—Rs. 1=1s. 5d.—Rs. 800 are worth only £56 13s. 4d., so that a bandmaster loses £13 6s. 8d. by being in India. Of course the exchange may improve, but so long as the rupee is worth less than 1s. 9d. the bandmasters must lose. (2) Out of India the Government band allowance to a battalion is £80 a-year; in India Rs. 900 a-year (£63 15s.)—a reduction of £16 5s. So long as the rupee is worth less than 1s. 9½d. the band funds must lose. (3) The non-commissioned officer keeping the accounts of a company gets, out of India, extra-duty pay of 1s. or 1s. 6d. a-day, according to his rank, for so doing. In India he Rs. 7 a month staff pay (9s. 11d.), less than a third of what he gets at home. (4) Out of India the officers' mess allowance of a battalion is £192 a-year; in India Rs. 1,800 a-year (£127 10s.), entailing a loss of £52 10s. a-year, and that, too, in a country where the Government provides neither mess premises, fuel, light, nor furniture, and where—to put it mildly—the staff of servants required is somewhat larger than at home. I know that the War Office disclaims responsibility for the rates paid by the Indian Government, but surely it is not right to engage people (officers and men) for certain emoluments, and then hand those people over to another Government without ensuring that the payments to be made by that other Government are in no case less than what were originally laid down. If the War Office recruits for India, it should see that India behaves fairly in all respects to those whom the War Office has procured for her.

THE FENN DIVORCE CASE.

In the Rangoon Recorder's Court on July 17th, the divorce suit of Fenn v. Fenn was mentioned by Mr. Moylan. His Honour would remember that some time ago he intimated, from facts before him, that it was desirable to appoint a guardian ad litem; and in that proposition he (Mr. Moylan) entirely agreed. The case was accordingly adjourned for a fortnight in order to allow of such an application being made, and such application must necessarily come from the other side. But so far as he knew, no steps had been taken by the other side. His client (Capt. Fenn) is naturally anxious to have the case tried and brought to a final termination.

His Honour observed that there was one point as to jurisdiction under the new Burma Courts Act which would have to be tried.

Mr. Moylan remarked that that was a question which would arise at the trial. But in the meantime no such plea had been raised, and the other side sought the same relief as they did. With reference to the question that had now been raised as to the insanity of Mrs. Fenn, he was somewhat inclined to doubt the existence of that sanity. The only thing he desired was that his Honour would put the other side under certain terms that they would within some fixed date show that there is a prima facie case for believing that Mrs. Fenn's mind was affected.

Mr. Van Someren said he had been in consultation with the Civil Surgeon of the place as to finding out the state of Mrs. Fenn's mind. He had no intention whatever of making any application in this case for the appointment of a guardian ad litem. The matter must end upon the preliminary points in reference to jurisdiction. The case was put down for hearing at an early date.

Mr. Moylan remarked that it was rather late in the day to make a preliminary objection as to jurisdiction, when the other side had themselves filed a suit under which they received the payment under an order from his Honour. He would ask his Honour to name a day for the case, on the ground that Captain Fenn was a Government officer, resident out of Rangoon. He would have to come up from Bassein, and in such cases his Honour had made it a rule that he would be prepared to fix a day.

Mr. van Someren could scarcely believe that Mr. Moylan would bring up his client all the way from Bassein when the preliminary point of jurisdiction was not decided, and run the risk of bringing him up for nothing.

Mr. Moylan said that, if there was any objection to jurisdiction, it ought to have been taken by Mr. van Someren before he filed his suit, and under which he obtained payment of large sums of money from his client (Captain Fenn) under threat of committal.

Mr. Van Someren said he had only recently come into the case; the suit was not filed by him.

Mr. Moylan said he was aware of that; but at any rate his client appeared and sent him numerous notices, and obtained a large sum of money. He (Mr. Moylan) would argue that there was no preliminary point to be discussed; no such question was raised in the pleadings. At any rate, he would ask his Honour to have the case brought on in the usual course, and not to put it down merely for legal argument of this point. His Honour remarked that the ordinary course would be to allow it to remain where it was. At any rate, it was rather early in the day to fix a date.

Mr. Moylan said all he wanted was a week's notice to enable his client to come down. He would mention the case after the sessions. He begged to give his learned friend, Mr. Van Someren, notice that he would himself raise the preliminary objection that until Mr. Van Someren's client refunded all the payments made in that suit he could raise no question of jurisdiction.

His Honour remarked that if any question was raised as to jurisdiction, he would be bound to hear it. He could not give himself jurisdiction.—Rangoon Times.

FACTORY LEGISLATION IN INDIA.

The following letter has been addressed by the Upper India Chamber of Commerce to the Chief Secretary to Government, N.W. Provinces and Oudh:—

SIR,—With reference to the correspondence ending with letter from this Chamber, dated July 23rd, 1889, and to the subsequent postponement of the Indian Factories Act Amendment Bill till the coming cold weather session of the Legislative Council, I am directed to address the Government of the North-Western Provinces and Oudh regarding the agitation now being carried on in England by interested parties with the view of crippling the Indian cotton mill industry through the medium of enactments which are utterly uncalled-for and unsuited to the country, based on the recommendations of the Berlin Labour Conference, and on proposals for the limitation of working hours in factories, regardless of the number of shifts employed, &c.

2. The amendments of the Act of 1891, as introduced to the Legislative Council by Mr. Scoble in February last, amply meet the requirements of the case; and my Committee feel confident that neither the Local Government nor the Government of India are inclined to harass the people who are, beyond doubt, prosperous and exceptionally contented, viz., mill operatives, by legislation that they do not demand. The personal knowledge and experience of his Honour the Lieutenant-Governor and Chief Commissioner as to the well-clothed, well-nurtured and comfortable appearance of the average factory hand in the North-Western Provinces and Oudh, renders it unnecessary for the Chamber to advance proofs of the correctness of its statements as to the condition of the said class of labour.

2. It is clear that factory legislation for this country on European lines could not but be harmful and pernicious, and, therefore, under ordinary circumstances, manufacturers and the operatives they employ might safely rely on Government to protect their welfare. But, unfortunately, experience shows that English party interests and considerations have, in the past, induced more than one Secretary of State to force on India measures which were both needless and hurtful, e.g., the withdrawal of the piece-goods duties, &c.

4. There are twenty-two mill and factory limited liability companies in the North-Western Provinces and Oudh, having share and debenture capital of not less than 125 lakhs; and private manufacturing concerns, presses, &c., with an estimated capital of 45 lakhs; and employing between them, at a very low computation, about 15,000 hands. The capitalists and labourers engaged in manufactures thus constitute a not unimportant community in the Provinces under the control of his Honour the Lieutenant-Governor, North-Western Provinces and Oudh.

5. The Committee of the Upper India Chamber of Commerce trust that his Honour will be good enough to endeavour to induce the Government of India to make public and to allow ample time for the examination and consideration of any further amendments of the Indian Factories Act that may be proposed by the home authorities; also that he will oppose such legislation should it be calculated to affect detrimentally local industries.

6. I am further directed to say that they will be glad to know whether the North-Western Provinces Government can see its way to appoint a special permanent inspector under the Merchandise Marks and Factories Act for these Provinces.

NOTICES OF BOOKS.AN INDIAN NOVEL.

If not a thoroughly artistic performance there is a good deal of realism in "John Bolt." The delineation of possible episodes in an Anglo-Indian career is true to life, though it must not be supposed that every civilian is doomed to encounter hurricanes, inundations, man-eating tigers, bears on the verge of a precipice, desperate thieves, and, above all, faithlessness in woman. The Sepoy revolt dies hard. Writers of fiction still seem to be drawn into it as into a maelstrom. At one time the first Afghan war was all the rage, which was succeeded in due course by the second Sikh campaign. All that, however, is now ancient history; but no Indian novel is yet clear of the fascination of the great Indian Mutiny. Mr. Lodwick, it must be admitted, handles the subject with exceptional ability and vigour, and wisely confines himself to the personal adventures of his own heroes and heroines. There is abundant animation in his narrative, and he wisely abstains from discussing the causes of the rebellion, or the blunders committed in the course of its suppression. Having plunged his dramatis personæ into the seething cauldron, his only care is to pull them out again before they have been quite done to death. The introduction of Haileybury was clearly a mistake, for we are really told nothing of the mad-cap escapades and adventures of the students. It was judged necessary, however, to find a lady-love of a convenient age for the expectant Bombay civilian, and Haileybury appeared a good name to conjure with. Taken all in all the story is a very sad one. The "green-eyed monster" is busied throughout in destroying poor John Bolt's happiness. With regard to his Haileybury engagement he did well to be jealous, and no doubt that melancholy experience rendered him more susceptible of unpleasant impressions when, as a middle-aged man, he married the lovely daughter of his first love, who had so cruelly betrayed him. A deserving public servant, a man universally respected, and, to a certain degree, popular even in ladies' society, John Bolt was miserably unfortunate in his own domestic relations, though it were hard to say why it should have been so. He is depicted as a thorough gentleman, honourable and upright in all his doings, a pleasant companion, and fairly good-looking. And yet he is unsuccessful in both his matrimonial adventures. For one thing, he seems to have been deficient in small talk, nor had he taken Lord Chesterfield's advice to remember "The graces, the graces, the graces." Not that his manners were rude and unseemly, but he was not sociable, and had an unpleasant habit of calling a spade a spade. As already remarked, there is no lack of adventurous incidents in John Bolt's career, though it must not be imagined that every Anglo-Indian has to confront similar scenes of danger and discomfort. It may be regretted that the author has not thought fit to favour his readers with glimpses of social life in the Bombay Presidency. We know no more of the Bombay "ducks" after closing the second volume than we did after opening the first. John Bolt's experiences of the Indian Mutiny, for instance, are laid in the district of Mynpooree, in the North-West Provinces, while the happiest period of his life, all too brief, was spent at a Devonshire watering-place. A story of this kind is bound to end unhappily; but the mystery, as it seems to us, need not have been revealed in such a common-place manner. The whole of the last chapter, in fact, may be taken "as read." For all that, "John Bolt" is a fair average specimen of the novel of the day, except that it is written in grammatical English, and contains not a single indecent allusion from the title-page to the colophon. It may be placed, in all security, in the hands of the most innocent and unsophisticated readers.

KASHMIR AGAIN.

WE were not sanguine enough to suppose that the agitation in favour of the Maharaja of Kashmir, which was raised in the House of Commons by Mr. Bradlaugh, would be put to rest by the explanations given by the Secretary of State for India and the publication of the Blue-book, which we noticed in a previous issue of this paper.
 Although to ordinary minds the despatches from the Government of India and the other documents which were then given to the public might have carried the conviction that, so far from the Maharaja having reason to complain of hasty or harsh treatment at the hands of the Governor-General in Council, he had met not only with every consideration, but with every possible kindness that under the circumstances could be shown to him. But there are minds which are not "ordinary" minds, and these become peculiarly sensitive when appealed to by a Native Prince with a grievance and plenty of money. So far as Mr.

 Bradlaugh is concerned, it is only just to him to say that he does not appear over-anxious to go further on behalf of his client after the well-merited rebuke which his indiscreet questioning brought upon him in the House. In this he shows his great common-sense—a faculty which seldom fails him, except when led away to take up Indian subjects and complaints altogether outside of his own individual knowledge and experience. We have no sympathy with Mr. Bradlaugh's politics and doctrines generally, but we do not shut our eyes to the fact that he is one of the ablest members of the House of Commons, and it is said, one of the most conscientious too. If he recognises his own strength in these respects he will not allow himself to be made a catspaw of by Native intriguers or their English representatives. He was altogether misled in the matter of the Kashmir Maharaja, and, on reflection, after the debate, it must have appeared to himself that he was playing a strange rôle in desiring the Government to perpetuate a rule of tyranny and oppression over the unhappy population who had for years been suffering all the evils that such a rule could bring. It was certainly an anomalous position for the honourable member to stand in—to be at one moment the representative of the "downtrodden" millions of India, asking for consideration at the hands of the cruel British Government in the shape of wider political freedom; and at another the mouthpiece of a clique who desire to bring back the cruel yoke of an imbecile ruler, led by Court favourites, upon a poor and long-suffering people.

But the Maharaja of Kashmir and his favourites have other and more blatant friends in England than Mr. Brad-laugh. Mr. William Digby, C.I.E., Secretary to the "Indian Political Agency," whatever that means, has come forward with a work of some 226 pages large 8vo. to show that the Government of India and the Secretary of State have acted wilfully, unjustly, towards the Maharaja of Kashmir, who, Mr. Digby declares, has been "condemned unheard." This is the title of the work, which takes the form of a letter, addressed to the Right Hon. Sir U. Kay - Shuttleworth—a former Under-Secretary of State for India—and who, on Mr. Bradlaugh's motion before the House of Commons on July 3rd, opposed the appointment of a Committee of Inquiry into the alleged grievances of the Maharaja of Kashmir.
 Sir Kay Shuttleworth had an opportunity of perusing all the documents which the Secretary of State for India had in his possession regarding this matter, and after such perusal he acted like an honourable English gentleman, and voted according to his conscience. He said:—"If hon. members will examine these papers they will find that there is nothing in them to call for a review by a Parliamentary Committee of the patient and deliberate action of the Government of India, who seem to have hesitated long before taking any strong step, although the mis-government of the Maharaja has been, I fear, of a very glaring description." Mr. Digby has the impudence to inform Sir Kay Shuttleworth in reply to this that even if the Government of India had done rightly in the course they took with the Maharaja of Kashmir he should have voted with Mr. Bradlaugh. The logic of Mr. Digby's

"Liberalism" will be understood and appreciated from the following extract from his letter :—

"If ever there was an issue in connection with our administration of India in which a Liberal statesman could have no ground for doubt as to the course he should take, it was, I respectfully submit, the issue presented by Mr. Bradlaugh on the 3rd of July. Your late colleagues, with a minor exception or two, recognised this. While it is a matter for serious regret, and even for indignation, that none of them supported Mr. Bradlaugh, there is this much of grace in their conduct that they left you to go alone into the Government Lobby.

"In the House on Thursday, July 3rd, you represented the past and possibly the future Liberal official relations of your party with two hundred and sixty millions of people. Your vote, therefore, in itself carried great weight. More than that, your conduct must have influenced some of your fellow-members to vote against Mr. Bradlaugh's motion. And, as things go in the House of Commons, not surprisingly so. It is easy to imagine hon. members who would shield themselves under the remark, 'Oh! Shuttleworth has looked into the matter; he is satisfied that the Government of India has done rightly,' and who, having satisfied their consciences by allowing you to think for them, followed you into the 'No' lobby. Your vote, the vote of a sometime Under-Secretary of State for India, a possibly high official in a new Administration, prevents your reconsideration of the case, when, as you must have known in due course, it would in all probability be submitted to you, should Mr. Gladstone, as it is reasonable to suppose he will, again ask you to go to the India Office."

Impudence could hardly go much further than this. Into Mr. Digby's arguments—if such they can be called—in favour of the Maharaja being restored again to the evil exercise of the power he abused, it is not necessary to go. Independent thinkers who devote any time or attention to Indian affairs will possibly prefer to rely, as Sir Kay-Shuttleworth has done, upon the action of the Governor-General in Council, supported by the Secretary of State for India and his council, as an action taken only after due deliberation and calm examination into facts, than to believe with Mr. William Digby that these officials have wickedly and wilfully perverted a grievous wrong, and decreed that an innocent man should be "condemned unheard." The truth is, that everything has been heard in the Maharaja of Kashmir's favour that he or his friends can advance; what has not been heard has been the truth about the wretched condition of the unhappy people who for so long have had to submit to oppression, extortion, and misrule.

BROAD ARROW

NAVAL AND MILITARY GAZETTE

ESTABLISHED 1833

EVERY SATURDAY. PRICE SIXPENCE.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" has acquired a reputation for early and exclusive intelligence as to Appointments and other service News, for the high character of its articles, the independent course of its staff of writers, and for its earnest support of all measures for the good of the Services. Articles on specially interesting subjects appear from week to week written for the most part by officers of rank and experience, or by men of note in literature who have made the Naval and Military affairs of the country their special study. A series of Illustrated Articles is appearing weekly on Regimental Badges and History. Illustrations with descriptions are also given of new Service Inventions.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" freely opens its correspondence columns to all grades in the Services. By this means an opportunity for interchange of opinion is afforded, such as is offered by no other Service Journal. Its ordinary weekly issue contains fully one-fourth more matter than the other Service Journals, even with their frequent "supplements."

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" circulates largely throughout India and the Colonies. It is supplied direct to the Army and Marine bureaux of the French, Russian, and other Governments, and it is read extensively by Officers of Foreign Services, especially of the German, French, and American Armies, who desire to acquire a true impression of facts and public opinion in England regarding Military affairs.

THE CALCUTTA REVIEW.

(The only Quarterly Review in India.)

ESTABLISHED 1844.

OPINIONS.

The Calcutta Review for October reached us a day or two ago, and a glance at its contents shows that the number more than sustains the reputation which this old and favourite publication is again achieving. The Review is rapidly regaining the position which it ... there is no fear of the Indian Review, or the Asiatic Quarterly rivalling it in public favour.—Statesman, October 1886.

... The best service which I ever rendered in India, or, indeed, for India, was the establishment, single-handed, of the Calcutta Review, which has done far more for Indian literature than anything I have written under my own name.—J. W. KAYE, Athenaeum Club, June 23, 1872.

The Calcutta Review has given us valuable articles on the army. Some from the pen of Sir Henry Lawrence, who wrote with the spirit of prophecy of the coming storm of which he was one of the noblest victims.—Address of the C-in-C. at the U.S. Inst. of India.

... The Calcutta Review has not only throughout its career reflected the highest honour on its public-spirited promoters and its well-known distinguished contributors, but has done much to help forward the reconstruction of our system of governing India.—Westminster Review.

LIGHT versus DARKNESS.

"SHAKESPEARE, the Greatest Genius who has ever yet lived," taught the Divineness of Forgiveness, of Perpetual Mercy, of Constant Patience, of Endless Peace, of Perpetual Gentleness. If you can show me one who knew things better than this man, show him! I know him not!! If he had appeared as a Divine, they would have Burned him; as a Politician, they would have Beheaded him; but God made him a Player.

"He taught that kindness is nobler than Revenge!!"—The Rev. GEORGE DAWSON, M.A.

"Earthly power doth then show likest God's
When mercy seasons justice,
And that same prayer doth teach us all to render
The Deeds of Mercy."—Shakespeare.

What higher aim can man attain, than conquest over human pair?

JEOPARDY OF LIFE, THE GREAT DANGER OF DELAY.

You can change the Trickling Stream, but not the Raging Torrent.

WHAT EVERYBODY SHOULD READ.—How important it is to have at hand some simple, effective, and palatable remedy, such as ENO'S "FRUIT SALT," to check disease at the onset! With little trouble you can change the course of the trickling mountain stream, but not the rolling river. It will defy all your tiny efforts. I feel I cannot sufficiently impress this important information upon everybody. Let ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" be your companion; under any circumstances its use is beneficial, and never can do harm. When, out of sorts, Restless, Sleepless, yet unable to say why, then your whole body is out of order, but you do not know where it may end; it is a real necessity to have a simple remedy at hand. The Pilot can so steer and direct as to bring the ship into safety, but he cannot quell the raging storm. The common idea when not feeling well is: "I will wait and see; perhaps I shall be better to-morrow;" whereas, had a supply of ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" been at hand, and use made of it at the onset, all calamitous results might have been avoided. What dashes to the earth so many hopes, breaks so many sweet alliances, blasts so many auspicious enterprises, as untimely Death?

I used my 'FRUIT SALT' freely in my last severe attack of Fever, and I have every reason to say I believe it saved my life."—
J. C. ENO.

CAUTION.—Examine each Bottle, and see that the Capsule is marked ENO'S "FRUIT SALT." Without it you have been imposed on by a worthless imitation.

SOLD BY ALL CHEMISTS. PREPARED ONLY AT

ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" WORKS POMEROY STREET, NEW CROSS ROAD, LONDON, S.E. (BY J. ENO'S PATENT.)

NATURE RULES ALL THINGS.

In every form of weakness use Scalded Milk.

ENO'S "VEGETABLE MOTO," occasionally a desirable adjunct to ENO'S "FRUIT SALT," as a simple and Natural Laxative, Stomachic, Blood, Brain, Nerve, Bile, or Liver Tonic; or, in other words, when taken as directed, their action is as simple as a tomato, whole meal bread or porridge (with scalded milk); you cannot overstate their great value in causing a natural, slow, and gentle action of the Liver; by that means you keep the blood pure and prevent disease. In advanced Life they are everything you could wish. Read Practical Hints on Constipation, Indigestion, Liver Diseases, Impure Blood, Sleeplessness, Nervous Headache, Treatment of Gout and Rheumatism, how to Prevent Consumption, Jaundice, and other disastrous diseases by Rules for Health and Longevity, &c., in a pamphlet given with each Bottle of ENO'S "VEGETABLE MOTO." They can be used for any length of time without fear or harm.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

WEDNESDAY AUGUST 20, 1890.

General Intelligence.

[BY OVERLAND MAIL.]

THE Overland Mail brings us letters and advices from Bombay to the 1st August; from Allahabad and Madras to the 30th July; and from Calcutta to the 30th July.

AT the meeting of the Viceregal Legislative Council held at Simla, July 31st, the Hon. Mr. Hutchins moved that the Bill to amend the schedule to the Petroleum Act, 1886, be taken into consideration. The hon. mover made a short speech, pointing out that the alterations were purely technical; and the Bill was then passed.

THE HON. MR. CROSTHWAITE moved that the North-West Provinces and Oudh Reorganisation Bill be referred to a Select Committee, with instructions to report on it after two months, which was agreed to.

THE HON. MR. HUTCHINS, in introducing the Bill to amend the Indian Emigration Act of 1883, said that the main object was to dispense with the necessity of a fresh survey of a steamer, simply because it proposes to embark emigrants under the Act of 1883. The Protector of Emigration now orders a would-be emigrant vessel to be surveyed at the cost of the master—a procedure which often causes delay for a week at Calcutta, while at Madras, owing to the vessel also taking in cargo, the system becomes quite impossible. The Hon. Member proposed that the provision in the Merchant Shipping Act of 1776, applicable in British Legislation against double survey, should be extended to India, namely, that when a certificate has been granted to a steamer by the Board of Trade, it should be recognised as sufficient. Under the Indian Act at the same time the examination of a ship's log, space for emigrants, ventilation, &c., should be made. The hon. mover also proposed that a field of emigration having been opened up from Southern India to British North Borneo, emigration to that territory should be carried on as it now is, to the Straits Settlements, and to the Native States adjoining, by Act 21 of 1884. The Bill was then introduced.

THE HON. SIR DAVID BARBOUR moved for leave to introduce the Bill to amend the Indian Salt Act of 1882, and explained that the amendment related only to the Indus Preventive Line, which lies along the upper portion of the River Indus in British territory, and which is intended to prevent the passage of lightly-taxed Kohat salt in the Cis-Indus districts. Having pointed out the defect in the present system, the hon. mover said that it is proposed to restore such powers given by the Inland Customs Act of 1875 as are necessary for the maintenance of the line. It is also hoped that Government may be able to shorten the preventive line and abandon the lower portion of the line; and will substitute a preventive line running west from the Indus to the frontier. The Bill was introduced, and the Council then adjourned to August 28th.

THE despatches of Brigadiers-General Symons and Tregear in connection with the Chin-Lushai Expedition have been published in the Gazette of India.

H.E. THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL records his high approbation of General Symons' services, through whose ability, judgment, and perseverance the Chin Expedition was conducted to a successful issue.

THE Government of India will shortly publish an opinion upon the leprosy question.

THE Bombay Government have called up on the Bombay

Municipality to provide at once for the accommodation of the homeless lepers of Bombay, and are prepared to legislate on the subject if necessary.

It is proposed to construct a temporary asylum for lepers until the completion of the permanent one at Trombay.

THE Full Bench of the Bombay High Court decided that they had jurisdiction over the Italian, Constantino, who had been found guilty of culpable homicide not amounting to murder at the Sessions last week. The prisoner was sentenced to one year's rigorous imprisonment.

IN the child-wife case at Calcutta the prisoner was found guilty of causing grievous hurt by a rash and negligent act, and was sentenced to a year's rigorous imprisonment.

A MEETING of the Executive Committee of the Prince Albert Victor Reception Fund was held in Bombay on July 25th. The statement of accounts showed that the Committee had a balance of Rs. 5,370 in hand. It was resolved that Rs. 1,000 be set apart as a bonus for the assistants and clerks of Mr. Marshall and Mr. Murzban, that Rs. 1,000 be given to Mr. Forrest for the Art Society, and that the balance be handed over to the secretaries of the Victoria Gardens Fête.

H.E. LORD HARRIS received the Chiefs and Sirdars of the Deccan at the Council Hall, Poona, on July 29th.

LADY HARRIS gave a garden party to the European and Native ladies at Gunesh Khind, Poona, on July 28th.

H.E. LORD HARRIS has consented to become President of the Bombay Natural History Society.

THE Ameer has reached Cabul, and has appointed Sirdar Abdul Kuddus Khan, ex-Governor of Herat, Governor of Bamian.

THE MAHARAJA OF CASHMERE arrived at Rawal Pindi on the 24th ult., en route to Srinagur.

IN the Hongkong-Shanghai Bank Fraud case at Calcutta Solomon was found guilty of using forged documents and cheating, and was sentenced to eight years' rigorous imprisonment.

H.E. THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF, Bombay Army, has been on a tour of inspection to Khandalla and Deolali during the week.

B. F. DUNCAN, First-grade Advocate at Akyab, who was recently suspended by the Deputy Commissioner for grossly unprofessional conduct, was found guilty at Ran goon, and his license suspended for six months.

DURING the past two years it is estimated that 2,000 persons have been drowned in Indian waters.

AN affray took place between soldiers and villagers near Delhi on the 24th ult., in which a sweeper was killed, and a woman wounded.

HIS HIGHNESS YESHWANTRAO, younger brother of his Highness the Maharajah Holkar, died at Mhow on the 23rd ult.

THE Bengal-Nagpur Railway has suffered severely from the late rains, and considerable damage has been done to the line.

THE value of the imports by land into India has fallen by close on fifty lakhs.

THE total value of exports, on the other hand, has risen by some forty-two lakhs.

COLONEL MEAKIN, the Commandant of the Poona Volunteers, has presented a silver challenge shield, to be competed for annually by the companies.

It is stated that it is proposed to move the office of the Surgeon-General of the Madras Army Medical Department to Ootacamund.

FAMILIES of officers are in future to travel by mail and not by troop trains.

THE EARL OF AVA, 17th Lancers, proceeds to England early next month, and will rejoin his regiment at home.

HEAVY rain has fallen at Simla.

NOTES.

THE news from India continues to be of the same quiet and satisfactory character which it has been the good fortune of the Overland Mails to report week after week. The Legislative Council at Simla are at work as well as play, and have been passing several useful measures. Further railway extension in Oudh is under consideration, and a proposal for an International Exhibition to be held in Bombay was being brought before the municipal corporation of that city—both hopeful signs of peace and progress.

BUT "progress" is not everywhere. It is not to be seen in the Municipality of Simla, where a petition has been submitted to Government praying for the abolition of that institution. The finances of the Municipality, notwithstanding large Government grants, are in disorder; the sanitation of the place is unsatisfactory; the rate of local taxation is abnormally high, and there have been blundering and failure all round. The Town Hall has cost three times the sum estimated, and is still unfinished, and the completed parts require constant repairs. Government has spent money upon roads, has given ground-rents and valuable buildings to the Municipality, and has made free grants on a large scale for public improvements. But the Municipality has failed to gain either confidence or credit with the public.

THE representation urges that the Municipality has never been, and is yearly growing less and less, representative; that the electors take but a shadowy interest in the elections; and that candidates are reluctant to come forward, as they are liable to be swamped by the powerful compact Government vote. Other reasons for the little interest taken in municipal matters are the non-publicity of municipal proceedings, and the fact that from want of funds the Municipality cannot properly discharge its duties.

TWO courses, those who have signed the representation say, are open—one, to appoint a nominated committee; and the other, to regard Simla as a specially conditioned cantonment. The latter proposal is preferred, and it is suggested to appoint a Municipal Commissioner with a sufficient executive staff, and, if desirable, supported by a consultative committee of three or four residents. The Municipal Commissioner should not be connected with the district administration, but give the whole of his time to the municipality.

THIS is a sad picture of municipal affairs in the "Home of the Gods," and has of course given cause to the enemy in the plains to blaspheme. One of these (the Bombay Gazette) says:—"Simla being in more ways than one 'a city set upon a hill' might give example and enlightenment in many things to the rest of India, and, instead of having the worst managed municipality in India, should have something like the best, or none at all. The representation which has gone in to Government on the subject can scarcely fail, we should say, to bring it to an end."

BUT all Simla institutions do not, happily, follow in the wake of the municipality. Judging from the last half-yearly report the Alliance Bank of Simla (Limited) would seem to be amongst the most flourishing banking institutions of India. During the half-year the working capital has increased from Rs. 85,33,369 to Rs. 93,19,057—an increase of nearly eight lakhs. The Reserve Fund, when all the premia is called in on the new shares, will amount to Rs. 5,50,000. This will take place during the current half-year, i.e., with the next two calls of capital. The net profit for the half-year ending the 30th of June (after providing for losses) amounts to Rs. 72,654-6-9, and out of this sum the directors have declared a dividend of 12 per cent. per annum, and are about to add Rs. 20,000 to reserve fund, and Rs. 10,000 to bad debt fund. This would certainly seem to be very successful banking.

AS you have first to catch your Burman and, in some measure, tame him before you can vaccinate him, the record of extended vaccination in the Upper Province during last year may be taken as one of many signs of the rapid pacification of the country. At the beginning of last year there were only nine vaccinators at work outside the dispensaries, but in the twelve months following a scheme for supplying the means of vaccination to every district was brought into operation, and vaccinators were sanctioned for them all. The result was that 29,707 persons were vaccinated. We question, says the Pioneer, whether there is any administration in the world besides the Indian, which, within four years of the conquest of a country, would be issuing a report of this description, and gravely recording as "a serious matter" calling for inquiry that the lymph-supply in the Shwebo district was bad.

THE Times of India discussing the effects of a rising exchange on the different interests of the community observes:—"Many importers of goods from Europe should be in a fairly jubilant mood at present; but in cases where forward exchange has been fixed, or where large stocks of goods are on hand, loss may yet be experienced. Turning to retail prices in India of European goods we have heard complaints that, although shopkeepers were very ready in raising their prices when exchange was falling they are somewhat tardy in reversing the operation with a rising exchange. The tabulated prices in the catalogues of our leading stores bear as yet no alteration. We have refrained from commenting upon this until the rise in exchange was, for a time at least, securely established by American legislation; but we think that the time has now fairly arrived when some change ought to be made in retail prices of European commodities. Wholesale prices will soon adjust themselves."

THE Civil and Military Gazette, commenting on a discussion at the East India Association between Sir George Birdwood and Mr. Purdon Clarke about the Industrial Arts of India, says:—"It is not for us to decide between two such champions as Sir George Birdwood and Mr. Purdon Clarke, and we, therefore, leave the controversy as we found it. But perhaps we may ask, with Mr. Martin Wood, a subsequent speaker, whether it is impossible to conserve the artistic handicrafts of India. It is really not of great importance to us to-day to know whether the industrial arts of the country date from 1,000 years before, or a thousand years after, the Christian era. What is desirable is that they should not utterly perish, or, that if they do perish they will give place to something as beautiful and more useful. To secure the alternative is worth abundance of effort. Mr. Wood's idea—an idea which is partly carried into practice—is that something may be done by means of a society, not to organise agitation, but to keep up a constant course of correspondence and, as it were, semi-private consultations between genuine lovers of true decorative art and the modern Indian craftsman. This is partly the aim of the Imperial Institute, and in working it out that as yet somewhat amorphous institution may have a career of usefulness as well as glitter before it."

INDIA.

CALCUTTA, AUG. 17.

The Government has published a despatch to the Secretary of State on the subject of leprosy. It states that many of the highest medical authorities consider the disease contagious only in the sense that it is inoculable, and that inoculation plays a very small part in spreading it. Much uncertainty exists amongst the local Governments and the public bodies who have been consulted regarding the cause and character of the disease and the best means of stamping it out, and, therefore, the Government deems it expedient to postpone legislation for the present. Meanwhile, it is prepared to appoint officers to co-operate with the proposed commission of the National Leprosy Fund, but cannot pledge itself to accept its conclusions.

It is understood that General White will march with a small force through the Zhob country next winter.

CALCUTTA, AUG. 18.

Further details of the floods in the Bolan Pass state that a great wave rushed down the valley, carrying huge boulders which smashed the bridge girders. A gang of thirty-five coolies was swept away. It is stated that it is impossible to reconstruct the line.

The recent Ganges floods interrupted communication between Cawnpore and Lucknow for some days, and are believed to have caused great loss of property and some loss of life, but particulars are not yet known.

BURMA.

RANGOON, AUG. 16.

The Irrawaddy and Chindwin have fallen. The inundations caused considerable damage at the various stations on the Irrawaddy south of Mandalay. The embankment at Sagaing, which was constructed by Mr. Smeaton, commissioner of the central division, gave way. The Mandalay embankment was severely tried, the flood rising higher than in 1886, but it stood the test well. The steamer Patheen, belonging to the Irrawaddy Flotilla Company, was lost in the Chindwin during the flood, being driven on a rock with such force that she was left standing on end half-submerged.

Attention is being called to the abuses resulting in Upper Burma from persons without any qualifications being allowed to practise as lawyers. Mr. Hodgkinson, as Judicial Commissioner, is framing rules to check these abuses.

The Chief Commissioner is at Mandalay.

CALCUTTA, AUG. 17.

Shortly after his arrival at Cabul the Ameer inspected Mr. Tynes's ammunition factory. He expressed much satisfaction with it, and ordered that cartridges should be manufactured as rapidly as possible.

EVENTS IN INDIA.

(FROM "DAILY NEWS" CORRESPONDENT.)

CALCUTTA, SUNDAY.

The report of the Berlin Labour Conference has been referred to the Local Governments, with a draft of the Factory Acts Amendment Bill, for their opinions.

Floods are causing serious damage to the railways and crops in Upper India. Railway connection with Quetta is interrupted.

The Bombay Municipal Corporation at their meeting on the 24th ult. considered letter, dated 16th inst., from Mr. Acting Under-Secretary Atkins, on the subject of establishing a trade museum in Bombay in the Victoria and Albert Museum building. Mr. G. Cotton proposed that the consideration of the subject be postponed until such time as the question of an International Exhibition in Bombay, which would shortly be submitted to them by Dr. Blaney, was considered and disposed of by that body. Mr. Cotton pointed out the great advantages which would result by the holding of an International Exhibition in Bombay, and said that Khan Bahadur Murzban, the President of the Corporation, and Dr. Blaney, both of whom took a great interest in the matter, had prepared statistics, showing that by a careful and economic management of affairs, the exhibition was bound to be a great success in Bombay.

OUR COOLIE EMIGRANTS.

(Pioneer.)

Everyone knows how difficult it is to persuade the Native of India to emigrate, and many devices have been tried to that end, hitherto, it must be confessed, with little success. The disinclination to move is due to a variety of causes, prominent among which are indolence, apathy and prejudice; but sheer ignorance is also one of the causes, and one which it is perhaps easiest to attack. In the long run prejudice will give way to self-interest, and if the coolie knew how much better he would fare, say, in the West Indies, than he is likely to do here, he would be less hard to move. Some interesting information of this point was recently given in the course of a discussion at the Royal Colonial Institute on the supply of capital and labour for the West Indies. Mr. Henry Fowler stated that out of 279,500 Natives of this country who have been imported into the West Indies since the abolition of slavery, only 50,000 have returned. Such a result was not anticipated, but the explanation is not far to seek. The coolies leave a country where they make at the outside about two-pence a day, and find on their arrival in the West Indies that they can make one shilling. "They leave India," said Mr. Neville Lubbock, "in a state of semi-starvation, and anyone who has seen them after they have settled awhile cannot fail to be struck with the improvement in their condition. Those, indeed, who have seen the growing generation must feel that there is a great future in store for the West Indies when that population is ready to carry on the cultivation of the land." Mr. Henry Fowler even went so far as to imagine a time when an East Indian may be telling his countrymen in Calcutta how some of his race were induced to migrate to the West Indies, and how by industry and thrift they were able in course of time to secure possession of them. This, we fancy, will be about the time when Macaulay's New Zealander is publishing the result of his meditations among the ruins of London; but Mr. Fowler's picture, however imaginative, is merely a vivid way of portraying the change both in the condition and the characteristics of the coolie who has emigrated. On the West Indian sugar plantation the social evils which cramped his energies and made thrift an impossibility are mitigated, if not wholly removed: caste prejudices are loosened, superstition to some extent decays, and the man works better because more independently and more hopefully. It is for the Native reformer to enforce the lesson among his countrymen.

THE RAILWAY POLICE.

(Bombay Gazette.)

The Railway Police authorities may be doing themselves an injustice in inadequately reporting upon the causes of the crime that comes within their cognisance. Thus, it appears from a Government Resolution on the Railway Police that there was in 1889 a serious increase of forty-one per cent. in the number of offences reported on the B.B. and C.I. and Rajputana-Malwa lines. This is attributed to the high prices prevailing in Guzerat after the scanty rainfall in 1888. But such an explanation does not go far, seeing that the distress was so far from acute that a comparatively small number of people took advantage of the relief works that were opened. On the G.I.P. line, also, there has been a continuous increase in crime, and no explanation is given of it. If the cause is a larger incursion into the Presidency of the class of professional thieves who find the railways favourable for their operations, allowance would be made for the increased difficulties with which the police had to contend on that account. There is good reason for the suggestion offered by the Commissioner of the Northern Division that the returns should distinguish between robberies from stations and goods-sheds, from trains, and from the person, for, as he says, "a serious rise in the number of cases of pilfering from goods-sheds and waggons would no doubt show that the police had not done their special work well, while an increase of thefts due to the inroad of a gang of pickpockets would not reflect on them so much." It is precisely in regard to such points as these that the reports in their present form are defective. On the G.I.P. line good work was done in the breaking up of the "Golden Gang" last year; and the next report should show a marked improvement in consequence. That railway is fortunate in the quality of its men, for compared with both the city and the district police, the percentage of sixty-seven officers and men able to read and write is very high; and the intimate relation between education and discipline is shown in the fact that with the high percentage of educated men in the force there was a low percentage of punishments. Government suggest that the companies should improve the lighting of the third-class carriages, as a deterrent to thieves and an assistance to the police. This is a provision which should not be the subject merely of a police official suggestion; it should be one of statutory obligation on the companies. They have not treated first-class passengers at all too well in this respect, and it is probable that the third-class have even more reason to complain.

GOVERNMENT v. PRIVATE TRADE.

(Civil and Military Gazette.)

The wisdom of the avowed policy of Government not to interfere with private trade is open to argument; but so long as it is the avowed policy, private traders have a right to ask that it shall be acted up to. Therefore the Upper India Chamber of Commerce at Cawnpore has, we think, some reason for demanding, if not the immediate abolition of the Aligarh so-called "Postal" Workshops, at any rate the interdiction of the future sale by the Workshops of the miscellaneous articles they turn out for supply to private persons. The Workshops, which are as much a Government concern as the manufacturing industries carried on in the State Jails, have, it appears, recently advertised for sale such commodities as travelling bags, tin-piping for watering lawn-tennis grounds, canvas hold-alls, camp furniture and the like; and the Cawnpore Chamber complain that no less than in the case of the State jails, such manufactures infringe the principle, recognised by Government, that State institutions are not unduly to compete with private enterprise. The question what is undue competition is one of varying degrees of difficulty in each particular case, but in that of the Postal Workshops it would seem, from the statement of the Chamber, that there ought to be no difficulty. The Chamber say that the Workshops ought to cease to be maintained, on the ground that not only are the miscellaneous articles made in them already made as well, and as cheaply by private firms, but the plant required by the Postal Department also. It is the duty of the State to encourage private enterprise; and not by the aid of its practically unlimited capital to compete with and crush it. The Postal Workshops at Aligarh were originally intended, we may suppose, to supply at reasonable rates to the North-West Provinces Postal Department certain articles, such as tongas and postal plant, which private enterprise was not then prepared to supply. Now, however, that private firms can supply the plant required, and are endeavouring to gain a livelihood by the manufacture of the kind of miscellaneous articles advertised by the Workshops, it might be proper for the Government to gradually restrict the industry of the Workshops until it has wholly passed into private business hands. We assume, of course, that the private firms will supply articles of as good quality and at as low a cost as the Workshops do now.

THE FACTORY QUESTION.

(Times of India.)

Perhaps one of the most telling, as it is certainly one of the most practical of recent contributions to the Indian factory question, is a lengthy communication addressed by Mr. Isaac Whittaker, mill manager, Tardeo, to the Manchester Guardian and the Textile Mercury. Mr. Whittaker, in speaking out of the experience of thirty years in English cotton mills, avers unhesitatingly that English mill life is "a great deal worse for the workpeople than Indian mill life." The Hindoo weaver, taking the average for the whole year and considering all things, works less hours than the English operative; his work is fifty per cent. easier, and he works in a better atmosphere. As Mr. Whittaker observes, there is a most lamentable amount of ignorance in England about Indian affairs, not only among non-practical people, but "among men who even aspire to be members of Chambers of Commerce." The best evidence of this ignorance is the sensational outcry about the "grievances and sufferings" of the Indian mill hands—sufferings which exist only in the minds of sensation mongers with an axe to grind, and grievances of which the mill hand here is entirely ignorant. No one, indeed, is more surprised than the Indian mill operative to hear what is said about his "hardships" in Lancashire. He is not a rich man, and he is not paid extravagant wages, but as to the "cruel ill-treatment" about which Mr. Holt-Hallett and some others have raised an ephemeral agitation, he simply knows nothing of it. The only grievance he has is that he is not allowed to work longer. As to the conditions of his work he is in a much better position than his Lancashire co-worker, and this is a point which Mr. Whittaker insists upon with appropriate emphasis. "I have watched the Blackburn weavers," he says, "leave their work at the close of the day, and noted how ill they have looked, watched their listless gait, noted their sunken eyes and otherwise careworn appearance, their persons covered with China clay, dust, and other ingredients used for heavy sizing. And when you go through some of their weaving sheds, as I have done, with an artificially heated atmosphere of steam and damp and noxious vapours, you will not be surprised at the weavers' appearance. You see nothing of this in the Indian mills. The workpeople seem as lively when they come out of the mill at night as when they entered in the morning; and instead of going home, like the English weaver, and resting their weary limbs and going to bed early to prepare for the heavy day's work of the morrow, you hear them singing their songs and beating their tom-toms until the early hours of the morning."

THE SILVER BILL AND EXCHANGE.

(Times of India.)

The very fact that speculation has raised the price of the metal so far already increases the probability that, when the influence of the bond fide demand is felt, the prices of silver will speedily rise to the limit fixed by the American Bill, viz., 16-1, or about 58d. per ounce (English standard), which is equal to an exchange of fully 1s. 10d. The only thing which, so far as we can see, might prevent the price of silver from rising to this point is an increase in supply. Now the supply of silver for currency purposes may be increased in three ways—by a transference from the Arts; by the substitution of gold for silver in the currency of some other country; and by increased production from the mines. The first-mentioned is very indeterminable, but we do not think it can influence to any very appreciable extent the price of the metal. It is true that as silver rises in price the relation between the two metals is altered—gold falling and silver rising—so that there will be an increase in the demand for gold for use in the Arts on account of its comparative cheapness, and a diminution in the demand for silver for artistic purposes on account of its comparative dearness. But if the price of silver is to be lowered by supplies set free from this source, it will take a long time till their influence is felt; while if the metal is to be kept from rising to the American limit, it is only a speedy increase in supply that can accomplish it. As an illustration of the second method, we have France and the other nations constituting the Latin Union holding very large stocks of silver which they are anxious to dispose of, provided a suitable price can be obtained. But this silver was bought at the time of the old bi-metallic ratio, 15½-1, and it is an open question whether these nations will be willing to let it go at the 16-1 ratio. Probably they would; but, at any rate, they are not likely to sell out at a figure below that ratio, so that the large stocks which the Latin Union holds are not likely to prevent the price of the metal from reaching the American limit. We have to fall back, then, upon the stimulus which the high price of silver may be expected to afford to production from the mines. That this stimulus will be a very considerable one, and that the supply will be largely increased thereby, is an economic result which, as we have shown before, is certain to be brought about. But it cannot take place all at once; the increase in production will at least take a time to make itself felt. Meantime, both the bond fide and speculative demands will go on operating, and under their joint influence the price of silver may rise so rapidly that the American par of 16-1 may be reached before any appreciable increase in supply takes place. And, if this be so, silver at 58d. per ounce is not only possible, but probable. But it is most important to remember that if silver does reach this point, it cannot, under the new American Bill, be maintained there for any length of time. The three forces—and particularly the last one—which we have just enumerated will by operating on supply speedily drag the price of the metal down from that position. And as it is now being partly borne up on the wings of speculation, so, when the turning point is reached, and the fall in price sets in, will there be a strong tendency for the price to go down with an equal, probably a greater, impetus.

THE INDIAN EVIDENCE ACT.

(Indian Daily News.)

One of the principal amendments of the Indian Evidence Act which is at present before the Viceroy's Legislative Council proposes to remove the anomaly of the Indian law, as compared with the English law, which admits of proof of previous convictions against a prisoner being given in the course of his trial for a particular offence. This provision was deliberately inserted with the distinct and avowed object of prejudicing the case of any prisoner who had been guilty of previous offences. But there is no denying that the English law takes a juster view in providing that proof of former convictions shall be used, not as a means of securing a fresh conviction for a later offence by creating an impression in the mind of a jury that a man who has committed a robbery once or twice before is very likely to have done it again, but only as a guide to the judge in apportioning punishment after a man has been convicted upon evidence strictly relating to the particular offence charged against him. That an old offender should be more severely dealt with for a fresh crime than a man convicted for the first time is right and proper. But it is not right that an old offender should be convicted of robbing C, because some years before he was proved to have robbed A. and B. Each case, so far as evidence for securing a conviction is concerned, ought to rest on its merits; and the amendment of the law to secure this result should be generally welcomed in the interests of justice.

MILITARY WORKS.

(Englishman.)

Judging from recent correspondence which has been published the Bombay Government offered a good deal of objection to the scheme by which last year the various departments of Military Works were brought under the control of the Government of India. In these objections, however, the Duke of Connaught, who was at that time Commander-in-Chief of the Presidency, did not concur. In reply to these objections, the Government of India laid down the broad principle that where there was sufficient work at a station in connection with the troops to occupy fully a separate military works establishment there the military works should be taken over, but that it was not desirable to apply the system to places where the condition of there being a sufficiency of work did not hold good, as to do so would involve double establishments, an arrangement which on economical grounds it was essential to avoid. This principle has been strictly adopted in other parts of India. In all the smaller military stations of Bengal proper the work of the Military Works Department, which is comparatively insignificant in character, is carried on by the Provincial Public Works Department. In Assam, where there are no British troops, and where also the military works expenditure, apart from military roads, is small in amount, the whole business is conducted by the provincial establishment. On the other hand, in Baluchistan, where military work preponderates greatly over civil, the civil works have been carried out by the Military Works Department.

BENGAL

(July 30.)

At the football match played on the evening of the 24th ult. at Calcutta between the Sova Bazar Babus and the East Surrey Regiment for the first ties of the Trades' Challenge Cup under the Association rules, the former won their three goals to the East Surrey's two.

On the 21st ult. there was a great gathering of the Congress clan at the Calcutta Town Hall to hear Babu Surendra Nath Banerji give an account of his doings in England and present him with an address in a casket. The address praised, amongst other things, the Babu's judicious tact. The Hall was crowded, but there was a very notable absence of the influential and prominent men of native society usually present on the platform at great Town Hall meetings. Raja Rajendra Narian Deb was the only notable present, being backed by a few of the junior members of the Corporation. The audience consisted chiefly of the student class. Mr. W. C. Bonnerjee presided, and made a speech, largely composed of a tirade against English newspaper editors in India for opposing and libelling the great Congress movement. Four Bengali ladies were present, friends of Mr. A. M. Bose. Mr. Bonnerjee and Babu Surendra Nath Banerji both appealed for funds to carry on the Congress campaign. There was much cheering, but nothing was said about a subscription list.

An unfortunate religious dispute has arisen in Hooghly, which will probably come under the notice of the authorities. In March last, writes the Englishman, a Hindoo gentleman took up his residence in a house in a Mahomedan quarter, close to the Emambara. The house was bought by the Gossein family in 1857, and was sold to the present occupant, who has caused no little excitement locally by causing bells to be rung and a horn to be blown in connection with his religious ceremonies. Friendly remonstrances being disregarded, it became the duty of the Mutawalli of the Emambara, a son of the late Nawab Amir Ali Khan Bahadur of Calcutta, to report the matter, and it remains to be seen how the affair will end. The Mohurram is approaching, and it is, therefore, desirable that the dispute should be settled without delay. Seeing that the Emambara is under the control of the Bengal Government, it might reasonably, through its local officers, see what can be done to aid the Mutawalli in his efforts to arrange the matter amicably.

MADRAS.

(July 30.)

THE Raja of Pittapore, Vencata Nahapulty Gangadhar Rama Row, died at the Pittapore Fort on the 22nd ultimo. His decease was not unexpected as, during the past three years, he has been a great sufferer from a painful kidney complaint. Some time back he came to Madras and placed himself under Dr. Brockman, but when he found the process of cure would be a tedious one he refused to be treated and chose rather to go to Benares and die, as a pious Hindoo should, on the banks of the sacred river. He was accompanied by his adopted son, who, however, was obliged to return to Madras on account of the unsuitability of the climate. The Rajah remained at Benares for six months, and finding he was improved in health he returned to Pittapore, where he again became very ill, and succumbed to his old complaint. The deceased Rajah's family have been in possession of the Pittapore Zemindari for over 200 years, and since the Zemindari was bestowed on Ramchandar Rayaama in 1676 the family have been growing in wealth and importance, and at the present day own about 371 square miles of land, with a population of 184,018, and enjoy an annual revenue of between eight and nine lakhs of rupees. The deceased Rajah was a very pious man, and has made several pilgrimages to Benares and Rameswaram. He was also very charitable, and established a High School and a Girls' School at Coconada on the occasion of Sir Grant Duff's visit there. He sympathised with the sufferers during the Bengal famine, and subscribed Rs. 10,000 towards the Relief Fund. The deceased Rajah had seven wives, five of whom survive him. One of his wives bore him a son, the legitimacy of whose birth is disputed by the Rajah's adopted son; and it is expected that the question will be referred to the High Court.

BOMBAY.

(August 1.)

THE Government Gazette announces that Mr. W. C. Rand, C.S., will compile the General Administration Report for 1889-90.

MR. SORAB COWASJEE HORMUSJEE, the son of Dr. Cowasjee Hormusjee, and Mr. Framroz Daver have passed the M.D. examination in connection with the University of Brussels.

HIS EXCELLENCY the Governor in Council is pleased to appoint Colonel W. H. Wilson, Commissioner of Police, Bombay, to be a member of the Municipal Corporation of Bombay, vice Mr. Harold R. King, deceased.

REFERRING to the discussion which took place at the meeting of the Standing Committee about the renewal of the lease of the Municipal offices, it would seem that Mr. H. A. Hormarjee has offered to renew the lease for a further period of two or three years at the monthly rental of Rs. 2,500. At the Commissioner's desire, a committee has been appointed to consider Mr. Hormarjee's offer.

THE execution of the three men, named Cassum Fuckroodin, Mahomed Hoosein Ally Sahib, and Pandoorung Manakji, who have been sentenced to death for the murder of one Rughoonath Moraba, at Clark-road, which was fixed to take place at the Common Jail on Saturday morning, has been postponed owing to no reply having yet been received from his Excellency the Governor to the petition for a reprieve sent in by the three accused.

THE example which was recently set by the Bombay barbers, in respect to shaving the heads of Hindoo widows, has just been copied by their brethren at Morab. At an extraordinary meeting of barbers held on the 15th ultimo, a resolution was passed that no barbers of the place should shave the heads of the Brahmin widows, and it was also further agreed that "if any man of the barber's community of the place trespasses the resolution passed he will have to remain an outcast, and never allowed into the community, notwithstanding his repentance of the fact."

TWENTY-FOUR applications have been received up to date for the four English scholarships recently founded by the Nizam's Government. The competitive examination to be held shortly will decide between them. In addition to the above the Government have allowed Syed Mahomed Ali Belgrami, Deputy Inam Commissioner, special leave to England on £300 a-year to qualify for the Agricultural Department, and have resolved to grant to any other officers of the local service, desiring to proceed to England to qualify for any special department, equally advantageous terms, provided they do not exceed forty years of age.

THE friends of Kurrachee's long-wished for railway will, says the Civil and Military Gazette, on the whole, be pleased with the present position of the scheme. Although Government is not prepared to support it with a guarantee, it pays the cost of Mr. Croudace's survey and will give the land, thus showing a much more favourable disposition towards the undertaking than was adopted in Sir T. Hope's time. Government will also be willing to work the line: but we are doubtful whether this would be to the interest of Kurrachee or the line, which will be in direct competition with the N.W.R. It would be much better, we think, if instead of joining on to the N.W.R. via Umakot and Hyderabad, the new railway had a direct run into Kurrachee from Umakot, thus saving seven miles or more in distance, and being perfectly independent throughout its length. Otherwise, as railway competition in this part of India became keener, its interests might be sacrificed to those of other State Railways. We still think also, as we have before insisted, that Delhi is too far north for the ideal terminus of the line, although the narrow gauge of the Rajputana-Malwa would be a difficulty, if it was proposed to join on to that system in the direction of Agra or Cawnpore.

NORTH-WEST PROVINCES AND PUNJAB.

(July 30.)

SENTENCE of death was passed upon Sirdar Sher Khan on the 23rd ult., by the Sessions Judge for the murder of Sher Mahomed. The affair has created an immense sensation in Quetta among the Pathans, who are doing their utmost to obtain a reprieve.

AN informal gathering of officers who had formerly been at Addiscombe took place at the Chalet in Simla on the 19th ult. Fifteen guests sat down to dinner, comprising Sir Frederick Roberts, Sir George Chesney, Sir J. Browne, Brigadier-General Nairne, Colonels Pemberton, Forbes, Walker, Tanner, Lance, Le Messurier and Sawerd, and Lieut. Colonels Conway-Gordon, Home, Anderson, and Holdich.

THE Deputy Commissioner and District Superintendent of Police held an inquiry at Malikpur, on the 25th ult., into the circumstances connected with the recent shooting case. The result has not transpired; but respectable landholders of the neighbourhood say the soldiers shot a dog, that a pellet accidentally wounded a woman, and that the villagers thereupon attacked one of the artillerymen and seized his gun. A general quarrel then followed, the villagers using clubs, and one of the soldiers fired a shot which wounded a man who afterwards died.

THE Imperial Forest School at Dehra reopened on the 1st ultimo with a very large increase to both European and Native students. This, says the Civil and Military Gazette, augurs well for the future efficiency of the Indian Forest Department. Some large and important additions have been made this year to the school buildings; and the curriculum of studies is attaining a very high scientific basis. The Professors are picked men from Nancy and Cooper's Hill, and altogether the Imperial Forest School has a great future before it if the present liberal régime is allowed to continue.

THE importance of constructing a railway through the southern districts of Oudh has been once more represented by the Local Government, and the subject is at present under the consideration of the Government of India.

BURMA.

(July 23.)

TEA culture in Burma during the past year showed a considerable improvement, although the industry is of trifling extent. The area under tea had increased from 14 to 164 acres, and the approximate yield of tea from 1,600 lbs. to 12,250 lbs. The cost of cultivation was thirty rupees per acre, and of manufacture five annas per pound. Last year Burma produced no less than 2,764,457 tons of beet sugar.

THE Myingyan correspondent of a Rangoon paper telegraphs that three dacoit leaders who had lately surrendered were sentenced to death on the 22nd ult. by the Deputy Commissioner, and that the people loudly condemn the sentence on Yanyun, one of these men, as unjust, seeing that it is admitted that he surrendered on the offer of a pardon and the promise of his life. The Chief Commissioner is expected to arrive in Myingyan next Wednesday, when he will, no doubt, take a more lenient and politic view of Yanyun's case than the Deputy Commissioner has.

THE INDIAN BUDGET.

The explanatory memorandum on the accounts and estimates for India issued by the Under Secretary of State shows that the gross revenue for the three years was:—1888-9 (Account), Rx. 81,696,678; 1889-90 (revised estimate), Rx. 84,636,300; and 1890-91 (Budget estimate), Rx. 84,931,800. The expenditure was:—1888-9, Rx. 81,695,660; Revised estimate, Rx. 82,826,600; and 1890-91, Rx. 84,661,700. Apart from other considerations, the revenue and expenditure of the country are continually increasing through the opening of additional railways and canals. The sanctioned mileage of railways in India on the 31st March, 1890, was 17,579, of which 16,109 miles were open for traffic. The additional length opened in 1889-90 was 869 miles, of which 209 were on the Bengal-Nagpur Railway, 200 on the Southern Mahratta and Mysore system, 165 on the Indian Midland, 74 on the Assam-Bihar section, 92 on the Rajputana-Bhatinda line, 69 on the Bhavnagar-Parbandar system, and 60 on other lines. The length sanctioned during the year was 545 miles, namely, 63 on the Villupuram-Guntakal system, 190 on the Jodhpore

Extension, 156 on the Mu Valley Railway, 63 on the Tirhoot Extension, and 73 on other lines. While the railways gave in India a return of about 5 per cent. on the capital cost, the expense of paying England the interest at rates fixed in gold was so heavy that the result of the Railway Revenue Account is to impose a considerable charge on the Government. In 1890-91 the Budget estimate provides for the raising of no loan in India, while it is expected that Rx. 36,000 of outstanding debt will be discharged. In England a loan of £5,400,000 Indian 3 per cent. stock has been issued at a average price of £99 11s. 1d. per cent., of which about £1,700,000 is raised for advances to the railway companies, £500,000 is raised in order to discharge Oude and Rohilkund Railway debentures; and about £3,200,000 is created under the Act passed in the present Session for the purchase of the South Indian Railway. The amount payable to the shareholders of that company, on the purchase of the line on the 31st of December, 1890, in accordance with the terms of the company's contract, is £4,197,557, but, as it is desired to employ the agency of the company to work the whole system, including the extensions now under construction, a proposal has been made that payment of £1,000,000 of the amount shall be deferred, that sum being reserved as the stock of a new company, upon which 3 per cent. (or £30,000) will be guaranteed. This sum of £1,000,000 being considered as equal to 140 lakhs of rupees, the first charge upon the net earnings will be 3 per cent. thereon (Rs. 420,000) payable to the Government in return for the sterling guarantee of £30,000. The second charge will be the number of rupees requisite for remittance to England in order to defray interest at 4½ per cent. on £425,000 irredeemable Debenture Stock. The third charge will be 3 per cent. in rupees payable to the Government upon the remainder of the capital spent by it on the undertaking. All surplus profits will be divisible rateably on the capital expenditure, the proportion due to 140 lakhs being payable to the company, and the remainder to the Government; the company are, however, assured that up to the end of 1893 their share of the surplus receipts shall not fall short of the amount requisite to pay ½ per cent. on their sterling capital. On the termination of the contract at the end of 1910, the company are to receive back their capital in sterling exchange.

THE SILVER BILL IN OPERATION.

The erroneous popular notions in the States with regard to the silver question are very likely to exercise an extraordinary influence on our own money market. The wonder is that 'cutesilver kings and their followers, as well as a large majority both of the people and the Press, should hold such mistaken opinions respecting the practical effects of the Silver Bill. The spectators see more than the actors, and we in England are, for this reason, the best judges of the situation. We desire to point out how little the Silver Bill is calculated to raise the gold value of silver. Silver may rise from other causes, and may reach the old proportion of 16 to 1; but if that should happen it would be in spite of the Bill, and not in consequence of it. The rise which has already taken place is merely the consequence of the delusive opinions at present prevailing on the subject with respect to the nature of the Bill and its probable results. It has only just come into operation, and the real results have not yet been determined by actual experience. The Treasury being bound to purchase 4,500,000 oz. of silver per month, and pay for it in certificates which the law has made legal tender throughout the United States, the quantity of the circulating paper will be increased every month by this amount. The more the silver certificates are issued, the more will prices rise, the price of coin become cheaper, and the rate of exchange turn in favour of the export of gold and the import of foreign goods. It is probable that so soon as the new certificates begin to find their way back to the Treasury, and the efflux of gold to foreign countries seriously sets in, speculators will scramble for the gold which remains in the country. When the gold shall become scarce and be quoted at a premium, the price of silver will rapidly decline, and, by the force of reaction, it may even be found below the lowest prices with which we are familiar. We need not dwell on the larger production of silver which will be the effect of the enforced purchases imposed on the Government of Washington. The Bill was expected to stimulate trade, but there is no rational ground for such an expectation. The effect will be simply a currency inflation, which is opposed alike to sound theory and to the teaching of a wide experience. Another effect anticipated from the Bill is a lower rate of interest and a more plentiful supply of capital. The citizens of the great republic must be unable to distinguish between capital and currency, or they could not have adopted this fallacious opinion. The artificial increase of the currency cannot possibly create an increased supply of capital. Even if the currency were doubled, the increased supply of capital would be too small to be perceptible, for only a very small percentage of the country's capital is represented by currency.—The Bullionist.

India in Parliament.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—AUG. 14.

—O—

THE INDIAN BUDGET.

The House went into committee on the East India Revenue accounts.

Sir J. GORST said he had nothing but a dull and prosaic tale of prosperity to unfold. The surplus which was estimated in the Budget in March, 1889, was Rx.106,000. When he addressed the House in August last year he was able to announce that the estimated surplus had increased to Rx.693,000. In the statement made by Sir D. Barbour in March last in India the surplus has grown to Rx.1,809,000; and the surplus which he (Sir J. Gorst) was able to declare to the House was no less than Rx.2,677,000. Great as the surplus was it gave a very inadequate idea of the real improvement in the revenue. In March last the Government of India, seeing how great the surplus was likely to be, took active steps to diminish it, otherwise the surplus would have been Rx.3,600,500. The real cause of that enormous improvement had been partly increased revenue and partly diminished expenditure. The net improvement in the opium revenue was no less than Rx.1,076,000, and from a moral and financial point of view they might rejoice at the high price of opium. —(Laughter.)—There had been a large increase in the railway receipts, the land revenue showed a steady increase, and the total reduction of expenditure was Rx.1,849,800. The total improvement, adding the improvement in receipts and the improvement in expenditure, together, was 4,230,000 tens of rupees; but of this part belonged to the Imperial, not to the Provincial Government. The surplus was 2,677,000 tens of rupees. The improvement was largely due to the rise in exchange. If it had not been for that the finances would have been worse by 500,000 tens of rupees than in March last year. The real gain to India by the rise in the exchange value of the rupee from ls. 4½d. to ls. 6½d., was 2,160,000 tens of rupees. Railways were worse by 320,000 tens of rupees, a good deal of this being due to the rise in the value of the rupee. Bimetallists agreed that a rise in the value of silver would destroy a great deal of the wheat trade and a great deal of the export trade of India. Since 1886-7, when the so called famine grant first ceased, the sums which had been paid out of the revenues of India for famine relief, for the construction of protective railways, protective irrigation works, and reduction were 460,000 tens of rupees in 1886-7, 376,000 in 1887, 508,000 in 1888-9, 1,065,000 in 1889-90, and 1,030,000 in 1890-91, making for the five years a total spent in purposes for which the famine grant was inapplicable of 4,150,000 tens of rupees. For reduction and prevention of debt there had been spent 6,072,000 tens of rupees, or an average of 1,214,000 tens of rupees per annum for five years. The consumption of salt, which had been slightly reduced in 1888-9, after the imposition of the extra duty, had now gone up to more than the figures of 1886-7. Although the salt tax was no doubt one which ought to be removed, and should be removed as soon as it was financially possible to do so, he thought the increased consumption would encourage the Government to give the first place to the restoration of the famine insurance grant. The enhancement of the salt duty ought only to be regarded as a temporary measure. He thought that on the whole the finances of India were in an encouraging condition, and that they might contemplate the future of that country with hope and cheerfulness. (Hear, hear.)

Mr. BRADLAUGH, who had the following motion on the paper, "That the late date of presentation of the accounts and papers relating to the revenues of India renders it impossible to satisfactorily examine and discuss the Indian financial statement," said it seemed to be the desire of the Government to lessen year by year the time at the disposal of the House for the investigation of the affairs of 270 millions of people. He thought it positively disgraceful that the Indian Budget, which in the year 1873 was considered important enough to occupy three days' time of Parliament, should be brought forward at a time like this. The hon. member remarked upon the empty state of the House, and said the explanatory statement had only been placed in the hands of members that morning, and the statement of the "material and moral progress of India" had not been put into their hands at all. The statute required this latter statement to be laid on the table, and somebody was certainly criminally responsible for having disobeyed an exact statutory demand. If this neglect were repeated next year, he should try to get the House to express its disapproval of the disobedience to the law on the part of the Government of India, whose duty it was to enforce it. Something had been heard of pressure having been brought to bear on the Government to give pecuniary assistance to Mr. Crawford, and he had to ask what was the communication that had been made to the Government, and what was the Government's reply. In the "territorial and political pensions," there was a reference to some exceptional payments in England made during the current year, but he could not imagine that these payments were in connection with this matter. (Sir J. Gorst said they were not.) He was glad to hear it, because very strong feeling existed in regard to this subject in India. The hon. member went on to speak of the abolition of the silver plate duty, and said that while the Natives of India were grateful to the Government for what it had done, it must be accompanied by some regulation for doing away with or changing the system of hall-marking, in order to be of real benefit to the silver-working trade of that country. He asked for an explanation of the new policy of the Government in relation to railways. The hon. member in concluding accused the Government of absolute incapacity to carry any measure.

The CHAIRMAN intimated that there was no precedent for an alternative resolution on the Indian financial statement, but he was not prepared to say it would not be in order to move that it was too late in the session to examine the accounts.

Mr. BRADLAUGH said after this intimation he would not move the resolution.

Sir ROPER LETHBRIDGE regarded Sir J. Gorst's statement as interesting in itself and satisfactory to the country at large from every possible point of view.

Discussion was continued by Mr. MACNEIL, Sir R. TEMPLE (who congratulated the Under-Secretary for India on the satisfactory statement he had been able to make), Mr. KEAY, Mr. PROVAND, and Sir W. FLOWDEN.

Sir J. GORST replied, remarking that anyone who represented the results of English rule as disastrous to the Indian people was either very ignorant or very mischievous.

The usual formal resolution was agreed to, and the House resumed.

MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

It has been ruled that receipts for pensions of non-commissioned officers and soldiers of Her Majesty's Army or Indian Army are exempt from stamp duty.

CHOLERA has made its appearance at Ranikhet, and the deaths of two officers of the garrison are reported from that cause. The disease has also broken out at the foot of the Naini Tal Hills.

COLOUR-HAVILDAR JAIMAL SINGH, 17th Bombay Infantry, has been admitted to the 3rd Class of the Order of Merit for conspicuous gallantry on the 30th January, 1890, at the defence of the Husain Zariba, Somaliland, on which occasion he displayed great bravery, and, though severely wounded, remained at his post until obliged to quit it from loss of blood.

SARDAR SIR ATAR SINGH, of Bhadaur, is taking an active interest in the scheme which the Civil and Military Gazette put forward recently for the formation of a Punjab Militia. The scheme has been recommended by him to his Excellency the Viceroy's consideration, through Colonel Ardagh, on the ground of the great advantages that would accrue therefrom both to the Government and the people of the Punjab.

We are glad, says the Pioneer, to find Truth quoting and enlarging upon our description of the monstrous system of triplicate "last pay certificates" which an officer has now to go through before he can leave India. The trouble involved on everyone by the present procedure is simply intolerable, and in cases of sickness the delay may very easily mean the loss of a life. In fact it would have come to this already in one case we have heard of, where the officer detained at Bombay would have surely wanted no more certificates of any kind, but that the Bombay office roused up the Calcutta establishment so urgently that the whole form was sent over by telegraph, and the unfortunate victim of the system was thus able to be put on board ship just in time to save him.

Although Government has apparently as yet taken no action towards settling the question raised by the officers of the 33rd Madras Infantry, when they declined to pass on their mess plate to the new Burma regiment incorporated in their stead, there seems to be no doubt among military lawyers as to how the case must go. The Pioneer says there is nothing whatever in the status of a mess or in the regulations on the subject that would justify the view that its property is anything but strictly private, and belongs to the officers of the regiment for the time being. On the contrary, the care which Government has always taken to disclaim any responsibility or concern for the affairs of messes proves conversely that it can lay no claim to their assets. This view of the case was brought into practical prominence after the Mutiny, when many claims were brought forward by the creditors of messes of regiments which had been broken up and lost their identity in the course of the disturbance, and were rejected on the ground that the Government had nothing to do with these institutions. But there is precedent, moreover, as well as principle; for, when the Company's European troops were converted into Queen's Regiments the Government, it appears, caused a valuation to be made of the property of each mess, and paid to every officer who was not remaining with the corps under its new footing a sum equivalent to his proportionate interest in the assets. Here the regiment was not being broken up, but continued under a different title, merely losing those officers who desired to remain on in the Indian service. If in such a case it was determined so explicitly and liberally to recognise the right of private property, the Government cannot now take away the plate of the 33rd Madras and use it to set up another corps in business without incurring the charge of high-handed confiscation.

BRITISH REGIMENTAL ACCOUNTS.

The following Army Circular lays down the new arrangements for carrying on the regimental pay and accounts business in British regiments consequent on the extinction of the regimental paymaster:—

With the sanction of the Secretary of State for India the Governor-General in Council is pleased to notify that no further appointments of paymasters of the Army Pay Department will be made to British regiments serving in India.

In consequence of this decision the following arrangements will be made:—

On the withdrawal of regimental paymasters the pay duties of the regiment will devolve on a regimental officer, an additional subaltern being added to each regiment of British Cavalry or battalion of British Infantry on the Indian establishment for this purpose, to be absorbed on the return of the regiment or battalion to England.

Additional subalterns will not be appointed to regiments or battalions to which paymasters are now attached until the latter are withdrawn on completion of their tour of Indian service or otherwise.

Although the officer added to the establishment will be a subaltern, the pay duties may be performed by a captain, in which case his company duties would be taken by one of the subalterns, and the captain would not be seconded. On promotion to major a captain will relinquish pay duties.

In regiments in which committees of paymastership now exist the functions of such committee will cease on the arrival of the additional subaltern, when the pay duties will be assumed by a regimental officer.

An allowance of Rs. 150 per mensem will be drawn by the officer actually performing pay duties. No portion of this allowance can be drawn while on leave of absence except privilege leave, nor can it be drawn in addition to troop or company command allowance.

An office allowance of Rs. 60 per mensem will also be drawn by the same officer.

Paymaster-sergeants will be gradually absorbed, an additional corporal being added to the establishment of each regiment to assist in pay duties. No allowances beyond his pay will be allowed to this assistant.

The Home forms of Troop and Company Accounts Army Forms Nos. 1504 and 1505, adapted to the requirements of India, will be brought into use as soon as arrangements can be made to that end, but for the present no change will be made in the form of monthly accounts submitted by regiments and batteries to the Military Accounts Department.

THE CHIN-LUSHAI EXPEDITION DESPATCHES.

The despatches regarding the recent field operations in the Chin and Lushai countries are published in the Gazette of India:—

The Governor-General in Council heartily concurs with the Commander-in-Chief that the objects of the operations have been successfully obtained, and desires to express his great appreciation of the excellent conduct of the British and Native troops, who so well sustained the reputation of Her Majesty's army, under circumstances of difficulty and hardship, and especially on the Burma side, in the face of severe sufferings from sickness. His Excellency in Council shares the deep regret with which the Commander-in-Chief regards the deaths of the officers named and of the soldiers who lost their lives in the service of their Queen and country.

The Governor-General records his high approbation of the services rendered by Brigadier-General Symons, through whose ability, judgment, and perseverance, the Chin expedition was conducted to a successful issue, notwithstanding great difficulties caused by the nature of the country and its unhealthiness. His Excellency in Council also joins the Commander-in-Chief in approving of the manner in which Colonel Tregear commanded the Chittagong Column, and of the valuable results achieved; and he signifies concurrence in the commendation bestowed on Colonel G. J. Skinner, 3rd Bengal Infantry, commanding the Northern Column of the Lushai Field Force; and on Colonel C. Mc D. Skene, D.S.O., commanding the Northern Column of the Burma Field Force.

His Excellency in Council then proceeds to notice the services done by particular members of the different departments engaged in the expedition. The services of Captains A. H. Clark-Kennedy, Bond, Westropp, and Lieutenant Morris, in the Transport and Commissariat Departments are recognised; and the admirable services done by Mr. G. E. Holland, Indian Marine, with the river transport from Kalewa to Kan, are specially brought to notice. In the Medical Department, the services of Brigade-Surgeon E. C. Markey and Surgeon-Major Murphy are commended. The following are also mentioned:—Lieutenants Bythell and Renny-Tailyour, R.E., with their survey parties; Mr. E. O. Walker, Telegraph Department; Mr. G. Barton-Groves, Postal Department; and Mr. E. Good, Port Officer at Chittagong. His Excellency in Council cordially recognises the way in which the civil and military officers worked together to the same end, and thanks specially the following:—Sir Charles Crosthwaite, Mr. R. D. Lyall, Commissioner of Chittagong; Mr. C. S. Murray, Political Officer with the Lushai Column; and Messrs. Ross and Carey, Political Officers with the Burma Column. On the Lushai side, the Cachar Military Police, under Messrs. Daly and Broderick, did good service, as did the Chittagong Frontier Police under Mr. S. O. Taylor.

His Excellency concludes by expressing the acknowledgments of the Government of India to General B. L. Gordon, Brigadier-General Auchinleck, Mr. J. W. Quinton, Chief Commissioner of Assam, and Brigadier-General Collett.

The Adjutant-General, writing on behalf of the Commander-in-Chief, concludes by expressing His Excellency's regret at the loss the Army had suffered by death of such valuable officers as Majors Ind, R.A.; Gordon-Cumming, Cheshire Regiment; Stoney, K.O.S.B.'s; and Barr, 3rd B.I. Among the names of officers brought to notice by General Symons, in addition to those mentioned in the Governor-General's despatch, are Lieutenant Rainey, Chin Levy; Lieutenant Noris, Intelligence; Major Henry, R.E.; Lieutenant Lugard, 42nd Gurkhas (for conspicuous gallantry in leading his men); Drs. Bourke, Rogers and Bean; Colonel Clubley, 2nd Madras Infantry; Captain Pickard Cambridge, Signalling Officer; Captain Hunter, 10th B.I.; Lieutenants Thomas Cheshire (for distinguished leading); Hildebrand, Coolie Transport; and Thomas, Commissariat Department; Veterinary Surgeon Evans; Captain Burton, Junior Staff Officer; and Lieutenant Stewart, 5th Gurkhas, Orderly Officer, who is described as a young officer of great promise, and one whose military career is well worthy of watching and encouraging.

The officers mentioned by General Tregear include Captain Gwatkin, Staff Officer; Captain Shakespeare, Intelligence; Major Leach, R.E.; Captain Mullaly, R.E.; Captains Westropp, Usher, Du Moulin, and Lieutenant Minogue, Transport; Captain Brown, Signalling Officer; Drs. Bigger and Hudson; Veterinary Surgeon Munn; Major Begbie, 2nd Gurkhas; Captain Petrie, Field Engineer; Lieutenants Brownrigg, 28th Bombay Pioneers (severely wounded); Cole, 2nd Gurkhas, and Birkbeck; Captain Chambers, Intelligence, and Captain Allen, Transport. The following regimental officers are mentioned:—Colonel Westmacott, 28th Bombay Pioneers; Lieutenant-Colonel Nicolay, 2nd Gurkhas; Captain Weller, 9th B.I.; Captain Hall, 2nd Gurkhas, and Lieutenant Sherwood, Bengal Sappers.

General Symons gives the following returns of casualties in the Northern and Southern Chin Columns under his command:—Killed in action, 9; died of disease, 207, of whom 72 were fighting men; and invalided 2,122, of whom 1,413 were followers and coolies. But of 69 British officers who served with the Southern Column, only seven escaped malarial fever; one died, and 26 were invalided from this cause alone.

FOLLOWING the example of their elder brother, Syed Mahomed Ibrahim Husein Khan and Syed Mahomed Akbar Ali Khan, second and third sons of the late Nawab Lutif Ali Khan, C.I.E., of Patna, have each of them made the liberal donation of Rs. 1,000 to the building fund of the New Zenana Dufferin Hospital in Calcutta.

A STARTLING foot-note was added to the race cards on a day of an up-country meeting at the close of last season. It ran thus:—"Any person bringing a dog to the race-course will be shot!" Of course the secretary had the destruction of the dog, and not the owner, in his mind.

MATRIMONIAL suits in which an equivalent in money is claimed for lost affections appear to be very common in North Arakan. The husband, on his marriage, pays his wife's family a certain fee, which he seeks to recover at law if his wife leaves him. Last year the number of suits of this kind was twenty-four, or one in seven of all the suits decided.

THE INDIAN BUDGET DEBATE.

FORTUNE and America have favoured India. The fickle goddess who has for so long a time been playing such sorry pranks with the world's silver has at length been wooed and won for India by our Trans-Atlantic cousin, and the rupee is "on the rise." If America has been playing havoc with our English climate since she took in hand to send us our weather, she has made up for many bad "samples" by giving to India the boon she has so long coveted—a better rate of exchange. To this is to be attributed the very satisfactory financial statement which Sir J. Gorst made before the House in Committee on the East India Revenue Accounts on Thursday evening last. When Sir David Barbour brought in his statement in March of the present year he estimated the surplus of the year at Rx.270,400. It had now grown to Rx.1,870,400—a very handsome growth indeed. But this, as Sir J. Gorst explained, was entirely due to the alteration in the rate of exchange.

"In the Budget Estimate of Sir David Barbour the exchange was taken at ls. 4.55d., and as far as the year had now proceeded the rate realised was very nearly ls. 6d. In the statement which he had circulated he had taken the exchange value of the rupee for the year at ls. 6½d., and this amount throughout the year gave a surplus of Rx.1,870,400. The Committee, however, must not be too certain that the estimate of ls. 6½d. would be realised. In order to realise it the Council bills during the remainder of the year would have to be sold at an average of not less than ls. 7d. It was, no doubt, true that the rate of exchange had touched ls. 7½d., and even ls. 8d.; but, when dealing with so uncertain a thing as the exchange value of the rupee, he would be a very hardy and bold financier who would venture to feel quite sure that the advance of the rupee, which had been maintained during the last few months, would continue to be maintained during the rest of the year. Not only was the improvement entirely due to the rise of exchange, but if it had not been for the rise in exchange he should have had to tell the Committee that the financial position of affairs was worse by no less than Rx. 596,000 than it was in March last year."

The gain to the revenue owing to this, had, however, a disadvantageous effect on the Indian wheat and other export trade, and consequently upon the railway traffic, the estimated receipts from which were worse by Rx.320,000. Sir J. Gorst, however, did not share "the gloomy anticipations of the bimetallist," that the rise in the rupee would destroy the wheat trade of India. Certainly not, and although for the moment that trade may be injuriously affected, it would have been a greater misfortune for India had the bimetallists succeeded in carrying their theories into practice.

There will be, no doubt, differences of opinion as to the use which it is proposed to make of the surplus, and advocates will, of course, be found to argue in favour of a reduction of taxation and the lowering of the salt impost rather than using the money for the restoration of the Famine Insurance Grant to its normal dimensions. But few will hesitate to agree with Sir J. Gorst that the finances of India, as disclosed in the papers which he laid on the table, were "encouraging and satisfactory," and that the future might, at all events, be contemplated with "hope and cheerfulness."

This was the view of the hon. members who took part in the debate with a practical knowledge of India and of the complex problems with which statesmen and financiers have to deal in governing that Empire.

Mr. Bradlaugh, of course, found faults. He considered the statement of the Under-Secretary "audacious," and he thought it "disgraceful" that it should have been brought on at so late a period of the Session, and at so late an hour. "It was impossible adequately to discuss the affairs of 270 millions of people with such support as the leaders of the Opposition offered." This hit at his own party—the Opposition front bench being empty—was naturally received with Ministerial cheers. Mr. Bradlaugh would have liked to address a crowded House on the woes of India, and found himself addressing a few old Anglo-

Indian members who understood that subject better than he did, and so he wandered away into some irrelevant remarks about Mr. Crawford and the silver plate duties.

Mr. MacNeill was much more lively and assertive. Like his countryman who "jest stood i' the street and swair'd at lairge," he abused "all round." "The people of India," he said, "suffered from the malady of irresponsible officials. The Indian people numbering 270 millions of persons, were from generation to generation being odiously, mercilessly and villainously robbed." This was "thorough" enough in all conscience, and will no doubt be hailed as a text by Congress orators on which to formulate further diatribes against the iniquity of British rule in India.

But, on the whole, the debate went off well, for it brought forth timely, sensible and instructive remarks from Sir Richard Temple, Sir Roper Lothbridge, and Sir John Gorst himself. All the expressions of discontent and dissatisfaction expressed by Messrs. Bradlaugh, MacNeill, and Seymour Keay sink into contemptible insignificance before the weighty opinion of the Indian experts, who knew what they were talking about, which is more than their opponents did. And, as to the vexed question raised by Mr. Bradlaugh and his supporters as to the late period at which the Budget statement was presented to the House, true friends of India will possibly agree with the remarks which fell from Sir John Gorst on this point. He would not waste any time, he said, on hypocritical regrets at the delay. "The neglect of India by the House of Commons might have its advantages as well as its disadvantages. At all events, it was one of the conditions under which India had to suffer. Those who were responsible for the affairs of India must make up their minds not only to indifference on the part of the House of Commons, but to absolute inability on its part to pass the most ordinary and necessary departmental measures, and that was varied now and then by a sort of fierce, searching Parliamentary light which was cast over every detail of Indian administration, however insignificant." This is exactly the situation to-day. It may be a matter for legitimate regret that the House of Commons will not condescend to instruct itself about any of those Indian affairs in which some of its members now and then take a spasmodic interest. But as long as that ignorance continues it is better, perhaps, that India should be left to those who are responsible for her rule and welfare, rather than be thrown for dispute and discord to a class of agitators such as that which during the past session has been trying to tear Ireland to pieces. As the Saturday Review says, there was much to be thankful for during last Thursday's debate in the absence and "blessed silence" of Mr. Conybeare, Mr. Picton, Professor Stuart, and their like, who might have ventilated their views on India. And to these names we may add in thankfulness, too, for "absence" and "blessed silence," that of Sir George Campbell also.

IN Maulvi Abdool Wahab, Khan Bahadur, District Superintendent of Police of Ballia, who retired from the service on the 19th ultimo—to the general regret of the inhabitants of the district—the Government of the N.W. Provinces loses a unique example of a Native officer who had risen from the ranks to the superintendence of a district. It is needless, says an Allahabad contemporary, to say that if the raw material of the force held a few more men of this character, there would be little need to talk of reforming the police. Maulvi Abdool Wahab, we are told, intends devoting the greater portion of his time—and pension—to the establishment and maintenance of a school in his own village for the tuition of his co-religionists, more especially in English.

A TELEGRAM in the Pioneer from Haka, dated the 26th ult., reports that Haka still maintains its reputation as a wonderfully healthy station. Six per cent. only of the Gurkhas are in hospital, and many of the cases are traceable to exposure incurred on escort duty to Kan. Our relations with the Chins continue to be good. We are now able to run a Chin dāk between this and Kan, and for a small monthly payment the villagers along our road have undertaken to carry out repairs. The Gangaw township, which lies along the foot of the Chin Hills, has been added to the charge of the Political Officer, so that the control of the Chin traffic with the valley is entirely in the hands of one officer.

"There is certainly much promise in Mr. R. H. Domenichetti's 'The Quest of Sir Bertrand, and other Poems,' for which Mrs. Traquair has drawn an effective frontispiece. . . . He has evidently a keen eye for natural beauty, whether in wood, water, or woman."—GRAPHIC.

BROAD ARROW

NAVAL AND MILITARY GAZETTE
ESTABLISHED 1833

EVERY SATURDAY. PRICE SIXPENCE.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" has acquired a reputation for early and exclusive intelligence as to Appointments and other service News, for the high character of its articles, the independent course of its staff of writers, and for its earnest support of all measures for the good of the Services. Articles on specially interesting subjects appear from week to week written for the most part by officers of rank and experience, or by men of note in literature who have made the Naval and Military affairs of the country their special study. A series of Illustrated Articles is appearing weekly on Regimental Badges and History. Illustrations with descriptions are also given of new Service Inventions.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" freely opens its correspondence columns to all grades in the Services. By this means an opportunity for interchange of opinion is afforded, such as is offered by no other Service Journal. Its ordinary weekly issue contains fully one-fourth more matter than the other Service Journals, even with their frequent "supplements."

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" circulates largely throughout India and the Colonies. It is supplied direct to the Army and Marine bureaux of the French, Russian, and other Governments, and it is read extensively by Officers of Foreign Services, especially of the German, French, and American Armies, who desire to acquire a true impression of facts and public opinion in England regarding Military affairs.

THE CALCUTTA REVIEW.

(The only Quarterly Review in India.)

ESTABLISHED 1844.

OPINIONS.

The Calcutta Review for October reached us a day or two ago, and a glance at its contents shows that the number more than sustains the reputation which this old and favourite publication is again achieving. The Review is rapidly regaining the position which it ... there is no fear of the Indian Review, or the Ariatic Quarterly rivalling it in public favour.—Statesman, October 1886.

... The best service which I ever rendered in India, or, indeed, for India, was the establishment, single-handed, of the Calcutta Review, which has done far more for Indian literature than anything I have written under my own name.—J. W. KAYE, Athenaeum Club, June 23, 1872.

The Calcutta Review has given us valuable articles on the army. Some from the pen of Sir Henry Lawrence, who wrote with the spirit of prophesy of the coming storm of which he was one of the noblest victims.—Address of the C-in-C. at the U.S. Inst. of India.

... The Calcutta Review has not only throughout its career reflected the highest honour on its public-spirited promoters and its well-known distinguished contributors, but has done much to help forward the reconstruction of our system of governing India.—Westminster Review.

LIGHT versus DARKNESS.

"SHAKESPEARE, the Greatest Genius who has ever yet lived," taught the Divineness of Forgiveness, of Perpetual Mercy, of Constant Patience, of Endless Peace, of Perpetual Gentleness. If you can show me one who knew things better than this man, show him!! I know him not!! If he had appeared as a Divine, they would have Burned him; as a Politician, they would have Beheaded him; but God made him a Player.

"He taught that kindness is nobler than Revenge!!"—The Rev. GEORGE DAWSON, M.A.

"Earthly power doth then show likest God's
When mercy seasons justice,
And that same prayer doth teach us all to render
The Deeds of Mercy."—Shakespeare.

pair?

JEOPARDY OF LIFE, THE GREAT DANGER OF DELAY.

You can change the Trickling Stream, but not the Raging Torrent.

WHAT EVERYBODY SHOULD READ.—How important it is to have at hand some simple, effective, and palatable remedy, such as ENO'S "FRUIT SALT," to check disease at the onset!!! With little trouble you can change the course of the trickling mountain stream, but not the rolling river. It will defy all your tiny efforts. I feel I cannot sufficiently impress this important information upon everybody. Let ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" be your companion; under any circumstances its use is beneficial, and never can do harm. When out of sorts, Restless, Sleepless, yet unable to say why, then your whole body is out of order, but you do not know where it may end; it is a real necessity to have a simple remedy at hand. The Pilot can so steer and direct as to bring the ship into safety, but he cannot quell the raging storm. The common idea when not feeling well is: "I will wait and see; perhaps I shall be better to-morrow;" whereas, had a supply of ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" been at hand, and use made of it at the onset, all calamitous results might have been avoided. What dashes to the earth so many hopes, breaks so many sweet alliances, blasts so many auspicious enterprises, as untimely Death?

I used my 'FRUIT SALT' freely in my last severe attack of Fever, and I have every reason to say I believe it saved my life."—
J. C. ENO.

CAUTION.—Examine each Bottle, and see that the Capsule is marked ENO'S "FRUIT SALT." Without it you have been imposed on by a worthless imitation.

OLD BY ALL CHEMISTS. PREPARED ONLY AT

ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" WORKS POMEROY STREET, NEW CROSS ROAD, LONDON, S.E. (BY J. ENO'S PATENT.)

NATURE RULES ALL THINGS.

In every form of weakness use Scalded Milk.

ENO'S "VEGETABLE MOTO," occasionally a desirable adjunct to ENO'S "FRUIT SALT," as a simple and Natural Laxative, Stomachic, Blood, Brain, Nerve, Bile, or Liver Tonic; or, in other words, when taken as directed, their action is as simple as a tomato, whole meal bread or porridge (with scalded milk); you cannot overstate their great value in causing a natural, slow, and gentle action of the Liver; by that means you keep the blood pure and prevent disease. In advanced Life they are everything you could wish. Read Practical Hints on Constipation, Indigestion, Liver Diseases, Impure Blood, Sleeplessness, Nervous Headache, Treatment of Gout and Rheumatism, how to Prevent Consumption, Jaundice, and other disastrous diseases by Rules for Health and Longevity, &c., in a pamphlet given with each Bottle of ENO'S "VEGETABLE MOTO." They can be used for any length of time without fear or harm.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

MONDAY, AUGUST 25, 1890.

General Intelligence.

[BY OVERLAND MAIL.]

THE Overland Mail brings us letters and advices from Bombay to the 8th August; from Allahabad and Madras to the 6th August; and from Calcutta to the 6th August.

THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF during his cold weather tour will visit the Camps of Exercise in Bombay and Madras. Subsequently His Excellency will meet the Viceroy at Delhi, after which he will attend the Attock camp and the Meerut rifle meeting, arriving at Calcutta in the early part of the year.

ADMIRAL FREMANTLE was expected to leave Zanzibar on August 15th, so as to arrive in Bombay, via the Mauritius and Seychelles, early in October.

SIR ROBERT SANDEMAN left Simla on August 4th for Quetta.

MR. PATRICK RYAN, second Presidency Magistrate, Bombay, died at Poona August 4th.

THE Chief Justice of the North-West Provinces, Sir John Edge, has left Allahabad for Bombay, and sailed August 8th, to spend the holidays in England. Mr. Justice Brodhurst, whose health has been giving serious anxiety to his friends recently, also spends the vacation in England.

THE AMIR arrived at Kabul some days before the Eed festival. The details of his reception have not yet been received.

SHAHGASSI MAHOMED SARWAR KHAN has been nominated Governor of Afghan Turkistan. It had been expected that the Amir would appoint his eldest son, Habibulla Khan, to the post, but it has been decided that he shall be kept under his father's eye at Kabul.

THE execution of Sirdar Sher Khan has been postponed, and he has been allowed to appeal. The Pathans are greatly appeased for the time being.

THE MAHARAJA OF KASHMIR, with his brothers, the Rajas Ram Singh and Amar Singh, entered Srinagar in state on the morning of August 3rd. The Resident and his staff, who had come down from Gulmarg for the occasion met his Highness about three miles down the river, and a procession of State barges was formed which made its way up to the town under salutes from the troops and plaudits from the populace, who had turned out in great force to welcome the Maharaja.

MAJOR J. J. HARVEY, South Wales Borderers, and Dr. Cronin of the Medical Staff, have both fallen victims to the cholera outbreak at Ranikhet. The death of another private soldier of the garrison has also occurred.

Two Committees assemble at Simla shortly to consider the question of reserves for the Native Army. The officers selected to serve on the Committees are:—For Infantry: Brigadier-General Sir John McQueen (President), Colonel Webster, 30th Punjab Infantry, and Lieutenant-Colonel Stead, 11th Bengal Infantry. For Cavalry: Colonels Lance, Jennings, 6th Bengal Cavalry, and Biscoe, 19th Bengal Lancers.

REPORTS are now being received by the Government of India from the Local Governments regarding the manner in which the Secretary of State's instructions on the Public Service Commission's Report can best be carried out. The subject is a very large one, and is unlikely to be ripe for final disposal this season.

THE Government of India are awaiting the expression of opinions from the Local Administrations regarding the working of the penal settlements, in connection with the report made by Mr. Lyall and Dr. Lothbridge last spring.

THE Madras Government has called for reports from the Presidency Port Officer and other officials on the Madras slave trade with Rangoon.

It is unlikely that any land legislation for the Punjab will be undertaken during the present session, as the Local Government has not yet furnished their report to the Government of India on the indebtedness of the agricultural population in that Province.

THE question of determining the boundaries between the Punjab and British Baluchistan is one likely to come up for settlement soon, consequent on the opening out of the Gomal Pass.

THE Chief Commissioner of Assam has sent in to the Government of India a long report upon coolie emigration, bringing the question up to date; but the nature of his recommendations are to remain confidential for the present.

THE Raigarh-Sambalpur section of the Bengal-Nagpur Railway was opened for passenger traffic on August 1st.

THE Zhoib Valley Railway Survey, which Major Buchanan Scott is to have charge of, will satrt in three divisions, two more being added later on. The staff has been constituted provisionally as follows:—Engineer-in-Chief, Major Buchanan Scott; Personal Assistant, Captain Capper; Divisional Officers, Captain Cowie, Captain Walton, Lieutenants Macdonald, Pringle, and Elliott; Assistant Engineers, Lieutenants Moore, Tomlin, McElhinny, Macaulay, Waghorn, Burn, Twining, and Austin; and possibly in addition Lieutenant Twiss and 2nd Lieutenant Thuillier. All these officers are Royal Engineers, most of them belonging to the Military Works Department.

THE decision in the case in which Mr. Slater, of the Bank of Bengal, was fined Rs. 200 for defaming Hajee Joosub Peerbhoy, has been reversed by the High Court, and the fine refunded.

LORD KERRY will leave Bombay for England in the s.s. Assam early in October next.

DR. WATT goes on furlough when he has finished his "Dictionary of Economic Products."

MR. SPRING, Executive Engineer, arrives in Simla immediately to discuss a project for the Kistna Bridge with the Government of India.

CAPTAIN COLIN MACKENZIE, A.D.C. to the Commander-in-Chief, fractured his leg and severely injured the knee-cap while playing Badminton at Simla.

BETWEEN thirty and forty thousand persons died by accident or violence in Bengal last year.

IN consequence of heavy rains at Simla a house collapsed, and two men were killed.

THE SECRETARY OF STATE has approved of the recommendations of the Government of India with reference to the reorganisation and reduction of the Archaeological Department.

BARODA has been en fête for several days in honour of the birth of a son to H.H. the Gaekwar.

CHOLERA has appeared in Poona, and troops are forbidden to enter the city.

H.H. the Gaekwar opened a leper hospital at Baroda on Aug. 31st.

A PETITION praying for the abolition of the Simla

Municipality is being circulated from house to house. The Municipality deny in toto the charges which have been brought against it.

THE Chinese Amban is not dead, as was reported a week ago. He has been promoted to the post of Chief Resident in Thibet.

A COMMITTEE has been formed in Bombay to collect subscriptions and select a site for the proposed Leper Home in Bombay.

CHOLERA has broken out at Ranikhet. Major J. J. Harvey, South Wales Borderers, and Dr. Cronin, of the Medical Staff, are amongst the victims.

NOTES.

THERE is little news of importance from India to chronicle this week. The Viceroy, whose health has benefited by his trip into the hills beyond Simla, leaves towards the end of October for a cold weather tour in the plains, reaching Calcutta early in December.

THE outbreak of cholera at Dhurmsala appears to have been a very serious one; but the medical report concerning it has not yet reached us. It is stated, however, that one hundred and eight deaths had occurred, nearly all of which were amongst the men of the Goorkha regiment quartered there.

IF there has not been a general "cholera scare" in London it certainly has not been prevented by the tact and prudence of the Press here. The news having got abroad that a sailor belonging to a steamer which had arrived from Calcutta had been admitted into Poplar Hospital with symptoms resembling Asiatic cholera, the opportunity was seized upon to issue sensational paragraphs and editorials, with the pretended object of calming the fears of the British public. Interviewers and reporters gave sensational notes to their respective journals, and these notes were amplified and dwelt upon by graphic editorial pens. There were one or two leaders, the perusal of which were enough to send an army of old women into fits, and possibly had that effect on a good number.

FOR it being taken for granted that the case reported was one of true Asiatic cholera, it was easy to pen "warnings" and "hints and precautions," and to indite homilies on the neglect of sanitary science in this great city, and on the swift and certain punishment which would follow on this neglect, and that the terrible Asiatic cholera has made its appearance. However, the sick sailor is all right again, and his mates say that what ailed him was painter's cholic, not cholera. The newspapers, however, secured their sensation, and the sale of "extra copies."

THE Indian Commander-in-Chief during his cold weather tour will visit the Camps of Exercise in Bombay and Madras, thus carrying out a suggestion made by the Secretary of State in his despatch dealing with the Army reform question. His Excellency will go first to Bombay in October, and then, travelling by way of Mhow and Saugor back to the Punjab, he will meet the Viceroy at Delhi, after which he will attend the Attock camp and the Meerut rifle meeting, arriving at Calcutta in the early part of the year. Sir Frederick Roberts will probably make another tour in the spring over the north-west frontier.

THE Times of India is responsible for the following statement, which, if true, is a serious matter to the shareholders as well as to the railway companies in question:—"The complete failure of steel axles in the rolling-stock of several of the Indian railways is a serious matter between the Bengal and North-Western, and the Bombay, Baroda and the Southern Mahratta lines. There is something like 50,000 of them. These axles, which cost originally about £1 2s. 6d. each, will have to be replaced by axles of wrought iron, costing about £2 5s. each—an expenditure among the companies concerned of something like £100,000. Moreover, the discarded axles will, it is said, be valueless."

THE Calcutta correspondent of the same paper writes:—"The result of Mrs. Hayes' labours on the leper question has resulted in the discovery that there are now some hundred European and over two hundred Eurasian lepers in hiding in their families in Calcutta. The present asylum, apart from the red-tapeism surrounding it, is, in fact, only fit for Natives, and, naturally, people would not care to put suffering members of their families into it. Captain and Mrs. Hayes have opened a subscription list in their paper with very good results, and it is now quite probable that the funds in their hands will form the nucleus of the foundation of a semi-public asylum solely for the use of Europeans and Eurasians. We are promised legislation on the matter, and it is said that Government will take the initiative. If so, it is quite time they did, for at present the dhobies and barbers who attend the lepers in the asylum actually wash the clothes of the public and carry on their business, shaving heads and beards with the greatest unconcern."

DARJEELING must have been a pleasant place of sojourn during the "season" just drawing to its close, according to the reports given by correspondents from that station to the Calcutta Press:—"A correspondent who has just been over the Darjeeling railway says that the landslips are quite phenomenal. He is confident that they surpass anything of the kind that has ever yet been seen in India: 'Repairing is not a matter of days, but of months, although I do not doubt that by early date some arrangements will be made to carry goods over the bad places by coolies.' A lady, writing to a friend in Calcutta, says:—'We are suffering all the horrors of a siege. Provisions and fuel are rising daily in price. We shall soon be in darkness at night, as the rumour is that the supply of kerosene oil won't last much longer. We hear dismal stories every day of fresh slips and breaks, and it seems now to be only a question of days how soon the whole line will be swept away. Meanwhile the rain keeps on as if it were never going to stop. The accumulation of traffic at Siligori is very great, and even when the line is in order again it will take weeks to clear off the accumulations. In such a serious contingency we should think it would be to the interest of the railway company to establish a bullock train from Siligori to Darjeeling. What must it be to the planters, who cannot get their tea to Calcutta! The railway company, of course, enjoy practically a monopoly, but we should imagine at such a time the interest and convenience of the public should not be sacrificed for the benefit of the shareholders. As things at present stand Darjeeling is practically cut off from communication with Calcutta, except through the post and the telegraph."

THE situation in the exchange market, owing to the "silver sensation," is described by a Bombay contemporary on August 8th, the day the Overland Mail left, as follows:—

"A week ago the exchange market in India was excited by the large amount of six months' sight credits offering in Calcutta. On Thursday, the last day of July, the amount of business done in Calcutta was enormous, estimates varying from three-quarters of a million to a million sterling. For several days after the effect lasted, and, of course, reacted on this market also, banks being perfectly willing to sell here as long as cover was obtainable in Calcutta. As far as Bombay itself is concerned the business offering has had very little effect on exchange either way. The highest point touched here this week for Bank Demand was 1s. 7 21-32d., ready, and a little higher forward. The market for October onwards has seldom been weak, Banks being willing sellers on most days. Bar Silver closed at 51½d. on Saturday, and re-opened on Wednesday at the same price after the holiday in London. But the tendency was weak, and yesterday the fall to 50½d. was not unexpected. The allotment of Council Bills on Wednesday was about as poor a one as we can remember. Up to Tuesday evening thirty-three lakhs had found buyers at from 1s. 7½d. to 1s. 7 21-32d. But on Wednesday Bombay asked for three lakhs of Bills at 1s. 7½d. and secured them. There were no other applications from India at this price. Government have, therefore, seventeen lakhs of Councils unsold this week."

LATEST INTELLIGENCE.

(Times Correspondents.)
INDIA.

CALCUTTA, AUG. 24.

The Viceregal party had some hard marches and heavy rain during their Himalayan trip, but on getting beyond the influence of the monsoon found the weather perfect. It is stated that Lord Lansdowne's health is much improved by the change. The Viceroy leaves Simla towards the end of October. The programme of his tour is not yet complete, but he will visit Delhi, Agra, Bhurtpore, and Benares, and will arrive in Calcutta early in December.

The Bengal Chamber of Commerce has called a meeting of import merchants for next Wednesday to consider the disorganisation of trade caused by the rise in silver.

The Black Mountain expedition next winter will not enter the country, but only march along the border. It will consist of about 1,000 men of the Punjab Frontier Force, with the same number in reserve.

The column accompanying General White through the Zhob and Shirani country will be 2,000 strong.

A bold raid by Mahsud Waziris near Bannu is reported. The raiders, who carried off 1,000 cattle, were pursued, but were not overtaken.

AFGHANISTAN.

CALCUTTA, AUG. 24.

Rumours are current among the frontier tribes that the Ameer intends to begin a religious war, but it is not stated with whom. The report probably arises from the order for cartridges recently given to the factory at Cabul.

BURMA.

RANGOON, AUG. 23.

The Judicial Commissioner of Upper Burma has commuted the sentence of death passed on the dacoit chief Yanyun to transportation for life. The Mandalay Herald states that the Government of India telegraphed to the local government to suspend the execution of the capital sentence.

The decision of the Judicial Commissioner does not affect the question of the breach of faith with Yanyun, who surrendered on the promise of an amnesty. The Chief Commissioner is now considering the petitions for clemency presented to him in connection with the case.

The Chief Commissioner is about to make a tour in the Chindwin district.

The health of the troops at Fort White continues very bad. The continual rise in exchange has quite disorganised many branches of trade. Owing to the cessation of the demand for Japan and the high exchange the local rice market is much depressed.

EVENTS IN INDIA.

(FROM "DAILY NEWS" CORRESPONDENT.)

CALCUTTA, SUNDAY.

The Government of India has declined to sanction the proposal of the establishment of a Military College at Poona as a memorial of the Duke of Connaught's connection with the Bombay Army. The project, which originated among some Native gentlemen, had received the approval of his Royal Highness.

The Waziris have made a raid on British territory near Bannu, and have looted a thousand cattle.

Much sympathy is expressed for Sir Edward Bradford, whose son died here of malarial fever on Friday.

A REUTER'S telegram, dated Bombay, Aug. 22, says:—Piece goods quiet; 7 lbs. shirtings, 3r. 5a.; 8½ lbs., 3r. 12a.; cotton, dull; new good dhollerah, 167r.; shipments of the week, 7,000 bales. Exchange on London, 4 months' Bank bills, 1s. 9 1-16d.

THE INDIAN COUNCILS BILL.

(Indian Spectator.)

So, between two stools the Indian Councils Bill has come to the ground. The latest telegram on the subject from London announces that, on account of the opposition to the Bill, Lord Cross has abandoned the idea of bringing it forward. The extremists of the Congress party are, of course, rejoiced at this, for the view they have all along taken of the measure is that the Bill is worse than the present law, and rather than have it they would go on with things as they now are. It is a pity, however, that the Bill is dropped altogether, for its provisions did not deserve the absolute condemnation it has in certain quarters received. They meant an instalment of reform, which, in the absence of anything better, many in this country would have been glad to accept. It is doubtful whether the question about the reconstitution of our Legislative Councils, now that it is shelved, will at an early date be again taken up by the Government in England. The Congress delegates, who recently addressed meetings in England, are no doubt sanguine that the Congress measure will carry the day. They seem to think that the Conservative party now in power is getting weaker, that the chances of a fresh general election are day by day increasing, and that in the next election the Gladstonians will most probably come into office. But judging from the present political situation in England, it is difficult to say what the next general election may bring forth, for everything will depend on whether the majority of the electors have changed their minds on the Irish question.

CONSULTING ENGINEERS.

(Anglo-India.)

There is not much to be gained in bandying an argument to and fro when axioms have not first been admitted on both sides. We do not, therefore, purpose taxing our readers with an exhaustive reply to the Indian Engineer's article on Consulting Engineers which appeared in its issue of June 28th; but we may point out briefly that, so far as the powers of Consulting Engineers are concerned, the question is, not so much what, under the Railway Act, the Governor-General in Council may depute them to do, as what in practice they are deputed to do. And in the light of actual practice we repeat that the powers of the Inspecting Officer are confined strictly within the limits of reporting to Government anything connected with the working of a railway which he thinks approaches an infringement of the Act, and that, his authority over the executive of the line being nil, the contention of our contemporary that the said executive is very much hampered by the Consulting Engineer's branch is an exaggeration. It is rather difficult to determine from his two articles what our contemporary is driving at. In one breath, he says, the duties of the inspecting officers are of such paramount importance that only civil engineers of the highest professional ability should be called upon to carry them out; in the next he implies that the appointments are such mere sinecures that the State should not be put to the expense of their upkeep, for he tells us that the manager, or chief engineer, of each railway should be held personally and finally responsible. The allusion to the "saloon carriage fitted up with every luxury" will, we think, cause a smile in those who have experienced being boxed up in a space twelve feet by eight for days together, with the thermometer on the wrong side of 100 degrees Fahrenheit, the seats an inch deep in dust, the lungs choked, eyes blinded and hair matted with the same, the cook reporting that all the edibles have gone bad with the heat, the sleep at night disturbed by the demoniacal shrieks of shunting engines and the howls of the railway station pie dogs, the millions of flies that come to breakfast, the mosquitoes that come to bed, and the hot wind that bloweth when and where it listeth. These and many other discomforts fall to the lot of the fortunate man who has to spend weeks on end in a luxurious saloon carriage.

GOLD IN CHOTA NAGPUR.

(Pioneer.)

Nine years ago Dr. Ball, of the Indian Geological Survey, wrote in his Geology of India that the indications, afforded by the alluvial deposits, of sources of gold existing in the rocks over large areas in several of the Chota Nagpur districts were as striking in their way as those which led to the starting of the gold-mining industry in Southern India; and about the same time the Bengal Gold Mining Company was floated. The company, however, does not appear to have done anything, and it was not until the partial opening of the Bengal Nagpur Railway that the attention of the mining engineers and projectors began to be turned seriously towards the exploitation of the Singbhum and Manbhum districts. Since then, however, the fever has grown and waxed strong, as only a gold fever can. In addition to the company already mentioned the Sonapet Syndicate has started operations at the place of that name near the station of Andah on the new railway, and three other companies—the Chota Nagpur Gold Mining Company, the Manbhum Gold Mining Company, and the Singbhum Gold Reefs Company—have been floated for the purpose of exploiting the minerals in the neighbourhood. The characteristic symptoms of the disease, we are told, are becoming apparent to the traveller who passes through the country. Every second man you meet is pre-occupied with the one thought, and no sooner catches sight of you than he pulls a bit of quartz from his pocket; while not only professional engineers and bond fide specialists, but men with no other qualification than the desire to make their pile, are eagerly ferreting for something sufficiently specious to allure the investing public, and afford the material for a taking prospectus. Remembering the reckless speculation which took place in Southern India, it may be of use to utter a word of caution. About the existence of auriferous quartz in Chota Nagpur, and especially in the districts of Manbhum, Singbhum, Gungpur, Jashpur, Udaipur, there can be no question; and, as we have seen, so high an authority as Dr. Ball has expressed the opinion that the prospects are just as favourable as they were at the outset in the fields of Southern India. If, however, there has been much money made in Southern India, there has probably been more lost; and if anyone expects the Chota Nagpur fields to turn out El Dorados, he will almost certainly be disappointed. Not that investment is a mistake, but that investors should be careful to know in what they are investing, which, in the case of a gold mania, they very seldom are. What ought to be made sure of is, in the first place, that the promoters have secured the services of a competent professional man, and that they are not merely trusting to the evidence of stray bits of gold-veined quartz picked up at a venture; and, secondly, that the title to the land on which the quartz has been found has been secured beyond the possibility of dispute. For the rest we are glad to find that perfectly competent engineers have already pronounced favourably on several of the districts, and can only express the hope that the ventures, which are tolerably certain to bring wealth to some, will not bring disappointment to many. Whatever happens to individual investors, Chota Nagpur, at all events, will enjoy a degree of prosperity it has never known before.

THE CALCUTTA POLICE.

(Statesman.)

Judging from the Resolution of the Bengal Government on the Calcutta Police Administration Report for the past year, the Force certainly cannot be said to have improved at all in efficiency. Although the number of cognisable and non-cognisable offences both in the town and suburbs shows a small decrease—from 63,663 in 1888 to 60,383 in 1889—the improvement is more apparent than real. The increase of burglaries and thefts justifies the numerous complaints that have reached us for months past that the constables do not maintain an active watch within their beats, and show clearly that their movements are not properly supervised by the superior officers of the Department. Nor does the very small proportion of property recovered, as compared with that stolen, speak well for the intelligence or the usefulness of the Force. It is, we believe, not alone the leniency of the magistrates that is responsible for the presence of so many gaming-houses in the city. If the Police Commissioner were to institute a searching inquiry—not through his own staff—in the slums almost within a stone's throw of the Central Police Station, it is probable he would find many of these dens of vice doing a thriving business, under conditions that are a reproach to the police administration of the city. The reported increase in the unlicensed importation of firearms is another proof of the lack of police vigilance. The Lieutenant-Governor notices the undue leniency with which magistrates have punished cases of phooka and of flaying goats alive; and the increasing usefulness of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals calls forth the recognition of the Government. It seems that magisterial work is not popular with the educated classes of the city. Out of 105 honorary magistrates only thirteen attended court twenty times and upwards, while forty-six attended duty less than ten times during the year.

LOCAL SELF-GOVERNMENT.

(Times of India.)

The attention of the public was called some time ago to a series of notifications establishing municipalities at various towns and villages, the Commissioners to be nominated, and not elected "on account of the want of interest taken in the administration by the people." No one is likely to dispute the validity of the reason given, although the people have as yet had no opportunity of evincing their interest in municipal institutions beyond, we believe, protesting and petitioning vigorously against their introduction. As no list of Commissioners for these embryo Corporations has yet been gazetted, we may assume they have not yet come into existence, and that we are not too late in asking Government to think once, twice, and thrice before thrusting so many nurslings at once into the world—feeble offerings to the idol of local self-government which Lord Ripon set up, and he and Lord Reay and other administrators after the same flaccid model worshipped. It needs no spirit of prophecy to foretell that their constitutions will be rickety from their birth, and nothing but a source of trouble and anxiety to all concerned with them. So much the teachings of experience may assure us, and we should, if words mean anything, have at least one member of the present Government on our side. The Hon. Mr. Moore, when (as Commissioner) reviewing the reports of the Municipalities of the Central Division, wrote:—"On the whole, the Municipalities of the Division have worked satisfactorily; and there are obvious promises of further improvement and progress. Some non-official members do not, however, appear to realise the importance of the duties they are called on to perform; and it is necessary that these men should be roused, by the district and local officials, to a just and proper sense of their position. It is too soon to expect local self-government, which has to a certain extent succeeded in a few important cities and towns to be equally successful in the nooks and corners of the presidency without the guidance and advice of Government officers." (The italics are ours). This is very limited praise of existing municipal institutions, which is the highest an official optimist can find expression for. And in spite of his warning, the Government, of which he is a member, proposes an extension of them to the very places, "the nooks and corners" (to use his own graphic language) out of the reach of official guidance and advice, where he predicts they cannot be "equally successful"—that is, they will not "succeed to a certain (limited) extent." The extension is to be wholesale. At present there are in the Presidency proper 127 municipalities (excluding those in Sind); but a reference to the notification in the Government Gazette shows us that it is proposed to add nearly forty to these numbers in two out of the eighteen districts alone. Except the vakeels and the class from which they are recruited, who derive enjoyment from a position in which they can oppose Government officials at little risk, and be offensive with impunity to the administrators of the country whose influence Lord Ripon first taught them to look on as hostile, there is hardly any class which would not welcome a release from the "blessings of local self-government," whose praise is chanted in the Press which represents only the limited section of the population whose leaders we have designated. But in spite of rant and cant, it is fairly established that official guidance and control are a necessity among a people who, if left to themselves, would defy all sanitary laws, let roads fall into ruin, and incur any risk of disease rather than pay to obviate it. In the majority of the towns and villages, inhabited generally by an agricultural population with a sprinkling more or less insignificant of small traders which are now to have the benefit of municipal institutions, Lord Ripon's idol finds no worshippers. Self-government means nothing to them but extra taxation, and they would not be human if they did not prefer to be let alone. We would not be understood as wishing to undervalue the importance of regulating the habits of a population, whose enormously high death rate shows the necessity for it, when it may be practicable; but with the evidence in our possession that Mr. Moore has rather under than overstated the comparative failure of existing institutions in the smaller municipalities, we can foresee nothing but a multiplication of these failures, in addition to the irritation, the taxation, and the attendant evils of local Bumbledom must cause, as the immediate result of the measures Government have in view. We could enlarge on the subject, but it is scarcely necessary. If Government takes the cynical if business-like view that municipalities are good, milch-cows, and relieve the Provincial Exchequer of various minor burdens it is found convenient to transfer to their shoulders, we will admit that it is a very natural one from the standpoint of a Chief Secretary who has to find funds, which the rapacity or necessities of the Supreme Government have so woefully diminished. But Government as a body might adopt a policy more in keeping with its ordinary professions of which the late Governor was so fluent an exponent, while leaving to his successor the damnosa hereditas of this and other schemes formed by the phrasemongers for whose applause he worked.

EDUCATION IN HYDERABAD.

(Pioneer.)

The great defect of education in India, as every one knows, is that its result is usually mere instruction without discipline. There have been attempts to remedy the evil. Lord Cross has written despatches crammed with solemn platitudes; for a time the Government of India waved their moral pocket-handkerchiefs with admirable zeal and assiduity; elaborate systems of black marks have been devised, whereby a boy was to be made a good boy, whether he liked it or no. Practical men saw that this was in great part fudge, and for the rest dead formalism: that in the end the result lay with the teacher, who could alone guide instruction so that its end should be not a "pass," but a discipline and education of the boy's entire nature, mental, moral, and physical. It is curious to find in a Native State the true needs and ends of education in the country better realised and expressed than perhaps they have ever been before. In a way Hyderabad cannot show such good results as the British provinces: the number in British India who receive any education at all are a mere fraction of the population of school-going age; in Hyderabad they form a fraction of a fraction. But the proper spirit is there, or at all events the Nawab Imad-ud-Daolah, who looks after the educational interests of the State, makes an excellent show of it. His account of the Madrasa-i-Aliya, or Nobles' School, will appeal to every Englishman who knows—and who of them does not?—how much the method and spirit of the public school have done for his countrymen. Much book learning, the Hyderabad authorities have recognised, is not what is wanted; the element need is a discipline that will brace up the faculties and inculcate healthy lessons of obedience and duty. So far the result of proceeding on these lines is full of hope. "There can be no doubt that much of the taste and culture and love of manly sports observable among the rising generation of Hyderabad nobles is due to the influence of the Madrasa-i-Aliya. One has not to go far back to recall the time when a telegram addressed to folks in the city had to be sent out to Chadarghat to be translated for them; when a young Hyderabad noble would have considered it infra dig. to hold a bat, and when a well-furnished and tastefully decorated dwelling in this city was a rarity. It is otherwise now. English is freely used as a medium of conversation and correspondence, and English books and newspapers have found their way to many Native houses. Our youth excel in cricket and football and hockey. Tennis and polo are extensively played. In matters of taste Hyderabad compares favourably with other parts of India. . . . As a rule they dress neatly and well. If, in some quarters, there is an unfortunate predilection for European coats and collars, the coats, at any rate, are well cut out of decent material, and the collars are properly starched and clean. It is also important to observe with regard to our youth that their sense of reverence, and à fortiori their hold of religion, survive their schooling." This may or may not be an exaggerated picture; we have no means of testing whether it is so or not; but the important point is that the Nawab Imad-ud-Daolah knows what to aim at and how to aim. This is a great part of the battle. The results noted as already observable in Hyderabad are precisely those which are conspicuously absent in most parts of India—yet they are worth many B.A.'s.

YOUNG CRIMINALS.

(Advocate of India.)

No branch of the subject of criminal sociology is deserving of greater attention than that which deals with the care and treatment of youthful offenders. The Governments of Madras and Bombay have both had the subject in hand recently, and, with a view to secure young offenders from mischievous contact with hardened criminals in jail, they have asked magistrates to carefully keep in mind the principal requirement of the Indian Reformatories Act, which provides that the period of confinement shall in each case not be less than two years. This provision of the law has, it seems, been frequently overlooked of late years, so much so that boys are for petty offences sentenced to three, four, five, or six months' imprisonment. The results of this disregard of the law on the part of magistrates is that these juvenile convicts, though in every way fit subjects for a Reformatory, are sent to a common jail, where they are easily corrupted by men who have grown up in vice and crime. The scandal has become so great that it recently formed the subject of some indignant remarks by the Chief Justice of Madras. Great as is the need for reformatories, the whole of the Bombay Presidency was, until a few months ago, content with only one such institution, situated in this city, and established mainly by a private citizen. A year ago, however, the Government opened a separate Reformatory at Yarrowda, where previously some attempt had been made to keep youthful convicts together in the Central Gaol. The institution began work with forty-six boys; and during the course of the year it received twenty-six new inmates, and discharged twelve old ones. The boys are to be kept in the Reformatory until they are eighteen years of age, and meanwhile they are instructed in carpentry, blacksmithing, bookbinding, painting, tin-smithing, gardening, and agriculture. They are also taught to read and write a vernacular language. The boys are usually illiterate when they are first received into the Reformatory. How far the education and training imparted to them have proved beneficial cannot be stated with any degree of exactness; but an indication of the results is obtained from some figures published in the Report. Of the twelve lads who obtained their discharge during the year, one—who had been over eight years in confinement—is earning his living as a carpenter. Another boy is working steadily as a cultivator; and four boys have secured service of various kinds. Six lads are thus satisfactorily accounted for. One of the others is said to have no employment; but the remaining five have disappeared. It is possible that they have relapsed into crime; but even in that case the result attained is not discouraging. That fifty per cent. of the offenders should have been put in the way of earning an honest living is worth noting.

[TALKS v. ACTION.

(Bombay Gazette.)

The recent private and confidential appeal to the politicians of Madras to remember their pecuniary obligations to the Congress brought into view one of the weak points of the public life of India. For the incident does not stand alone. In Calcutta attention is being called to the copious tribute of homage which was paid many months ago to the memory of Mr. Robert Knight, and to the failure of the many admirers of that eminent journalist to pay to his memory any more enduring service. Whether anything more is necessary is a question that we do not care to enter into. Mr. Knight did his work, and did it well, and in the consciousness of that, we doubt not, he found his adequate reward. The question only arises because some very distinct professions and promises have emanated from Mr. Knight's admirers on the other side of India which, we are told, have been entirely forgotten. We refer to the incident only because it by no means stands alone. A Calcutta Native paper wants to know, for example, why no memorial of Lord Ripon has ever been raised in Bengal. The answer doubtless is because Bengal so vociferously applauded Lord Ripon that it had no homage left for him after he had gone. The Technical Institute in Bombay shows that political and public sympathy in Bombay does occasionally take an enduring and tangible form. But the reputation of Bombay is not quite faultless in this respect. Nearly six years have passed since an enthusiastic meeting in the Town Hall did justice—rhetorically—to the memory of Mr. Fawcett, and commemorated—rhetorically again—the immense services he had rendered to India. Can any of our readers inform us of the precise state in 1890 of a subscription list that was started early in 1885 for establishing a Fawcett memorial in this city? Apart from the claims of the illustrious dead to the commemoration that is promised them, and from the propriety of keeping as good faith with them as with the living, it is well that the people of India should learn on the threshold of political life that a subscription list—especially when they themselves have initiated it—is a rather more serious thing than a speech, and that political opinions and preferences are worth just as much as the money with which they are backed. Yet how much would some of the movements of our time be worth if they were backed by that standard?

BENGAL

(August 7.)

BENGAL has certainly, says a Calcutta paper, set Simla an example in connection with the fund for the relief of the destitute survivors of the Balaclava charge. To-day (July 29) we are able to send home a cheque for £400, which has been subscribed almost entirely by the non-official classes in Bengal and Assam.

BETWEEN thirty and forty thousand persons died by accident or violence in Bengal last year. In this respect Bengal has a bad pre-eminence, which is due to the fact that she has more than her share of snakes and tigers and other deadly animals, accounting as they do for nearly two-fifths of the violent deaths. It is a sad fact that more than ten per cent. of these deaths were from suicide, the greater number of suicides being women.

A CORRESPONDENT who has just been over the Darjeeling Railway informs the Englishman that the landslips are quite phenomenal. He is confident that they surpass anything of the kind that has ever yet been seen in India. "Repairing is not a matter of days but of months, although I do not doubt that by an early date some arrangement will be made to carry goods over the bad places by coolies." The General Manager and his staff are exerting themselves to the utmost to restore the line, but meanwhile Darjeeling is said to be running short of supplies, while the tea gardens are suffering owing to the stoppage of traffic. Such a season would put a severe strain upon the resources of any company, but fortunately some portion of this heavy loss is borne by Government.

MADRAS.

(August 7.)

TELEPHONIC communication between the shipping in the Madras Harbour and the subscribers to the Telephone Exchange has been talked of for a long time past, and is now an accomplished fact, a Madras paper says. "Mr. Lawless, electrician to the Oriental Telephone Company, spoke to us in our office to-day from the s.s. Clan McArthur, and could be heard with perfect distinctness." This "bridging of the deep" should prove a great convenience to the mercantile community.

THE Nizam's Government have, the Deccan Times states, extended for a further period of four years the sole right granted three years back to Signor Canzio, an Italian gentleman, grandson of Garibaldi, to erect a ginning factory in the Aurangabad district. The Government have further advanced him a sum of fifteen thousand Government rupees to extend his factory, which amount is to be repaid in four yearly instalments.

BOMBAY.

(August 8.)

PUNITIVE police forces have been appointed to the villages of Phondsiras, Umbre, and Eksai, in the Malsiras Taluka, Sholapore District.

THE recent break on the Indian Midland Railway has been repaired, and through carriages can now run as usual between Bombay and Lahore and Bombay and Lucknow.

H. M. SURVEYING vessel Stork, 465 tons, Lieutenant and Commander Andrew F. Balfour, has arrived at Zanzibar from the Cape of Good Hope, and shortly proceeds to survey the mouth of the river Zambesi. She will afterwards go to Bombay, arriving about the end of September, to be docked, overhauled, cleaned, &c.

WE (Civil and Military Gazette) hear that it is not at present intended to extend to the Bombay Presidency the system now prevailing in Bengal of purchasing remounts for the Native cavalry through the agency of a Remount agent attached to the Remount Department. Some time ago the Secretary of State for India drew attention to the high price paid by the majority of the Bombay Native cavalry regiments for their remounts, and that Government has now issued orders to limit the average price given by any one of these regiments to Rs. 350, which amount is considered sufficient for the class of horse required. The Sind cavalry regiments have always managed to purchase their remounts at reasonable rates—probably at lower rates than a Remount agent could, who had to provide for all the regiments in the Presidency—so the Bengal system could hardly be introduced in the Bombay Presidency, except for some of the regiments, which latter condition would make the system unworkable. We further hear that the Government of India has some hopes of obtaining suitable remounts from Persia at moderate prices, and has appointed an officer to inquire into the question.

NORTH-WEST PROVINCES AND PUNJAB.

(August 7.)

THE petition praying for the abolition of the Simla Municipality is now being circulated to householders and residents for signature. The Municipal Committee deny in toto the charges brought against them.

NAINI TAL during the past fortnight has been visited by some fifty inches of rain. The drainage scheme there has worked admirably throughout, but the line of communications with the plains has suffered severely.

THE deaths are reported at Ranikhet of Major J. J. Harvey, South Wales Borderers, and Dr. Cronin, of the Medical Staff, both victims to the cholera outbreak there.

LORD WILLIAM BERESFORD, who has been ordered to a German watering place by his medical advisers, will most probably not return to duty on the Viceroy's staff until after the conclusion of his Excellency's autumn tour.

THE Annual Football Tournament at Simla, for the Durand prize, will begin on September 29th, the conditions being the same as last year. The Highland Light Infantry are the present holders, and if they succeed in beating all comers the prize will become their property.

According to an up-country paper there is some excitement in social circles in Cawnpore at the rumour that next year the greater part of the European regiment quartered in Cawnpore will be sent to Chakrata, a couple of companies being left only to overawe the turbulent populace of a city in which there must be a very strong element of blackguardism, if not of disaffection. Society, too, sees that the removal of the headquarters of the regiment means the loss of the band, and as it plays alternate weeks in the Queen's Park, Native society, which appreciates "band night" very remarkably, will suffer too. That Cawnpore, situated as it is, strategically, between Lucknow, Allahabad, and Jhansi, may not require a whole British regiment for its safety may be true, a battery of artillery being, perhaps, sufficient for the protection of the Fort and Bridge Block Houses; but the chronicler of social events may be permitted to shed a tear over the fast disappearing glories of Cawnpore as a military station.

NATIVE PRESS.

A BENGALI SIDDONS.

It may cause some surprise to find the theatre in Bengal regarded as a temple of high art. Reis and Rayyet thus regards an actress who died recently in Calcutta:—

"Death has plucked away another 'star' from the Native stage. The heroine of the Star Theatre—Srimati Kiran Kumari—is dead, having fallen a victim to the fell epidemic of small-pox of late raging in the city. The dead actress was a rare flower of her profession—another young genius who promised to burst before long into full bloom and splendour. In so young an age, she betrayed extraordinary talents. To natural versatility and a clear fancy she joined a good fund of vivacity and a nervous pluck that removed every obstacle before her. On the retirement of the former heroine from the stage—an actress of unrivalled ability, she was chosen out, while yet very young and in the initial stage of her apprenticeship, to fill the vacancy, to the mortification of the veteran lady artistes who had all hoped for the prize promotion. It was a nervous step, in all conscience, for both the veteran manager and the young novice. But the trepidation was all over with the first night of the experiment. The sudden and irrevocable resignation of the lady 'star' had plunged the manager into a sea of despair, and the wreck of his barque on the rocks ahead of incompetency seemed imminent. Indeed, the success of the rather bold experiment averted what may be called a financial disaster. The young novice proved to be the real pole-star of the manager's hope to save his theatre from the impending peril. That very night she reassured all hopes and belied all fears. The test she was put to was trying for the nerves of any actor or actress in the world. She had to interpret Chaitanya, perhaps the most difficult of Bengali dramatic characters, and in her delineation of it she proved herself thoroughly deserving of the exalted lift, if not equal to her glorious predecessor. Ever since she was fixed to fill all the title rôles, and she filled them with equal credit. Her great drawback in the acting of these old parts was the brilliant triumphs of her predecessor, the glowing tints of which could never vanish or fade from the memories of her audiences. She knew this, and, wisely contented herself by imitating the great actress even at the risk of being considered affected and artificial—the inevitable result of all imitations. But soon the day of her true appreciation came. The new drama of the realistic school was placed upon the boards, the title rôle being allotted to her. As Sarala she might be said to have made her real débüt, and as Sarala, it is enough to say, she can never be forgotten, for, even now, at the mention of the picture, many a playgoers' eyes must glisten with a tear. In short, if her imitations were wonderful, her own work was simply marvellous; and Sarala proved the greatest of financial successes to her employers. The Star Theatre has sustained in her death, occurring so soon after that of the inimitable "Bel Baboo," a loss which is beyond repair, unless indeed the old heroine reappears on its boards; while the lovers of the Native drama have lost one who, perhaps born to be society's curse, wonderfully converted herself into a boon which afforded them very high and hearty intellectual treats.

A DENOUNCER OF THE CONGRESS.

The Mahratta says:—The foretaste which the Bombay Gazette has given us of Mr. Beaman's article in the Calcutta Review is quite enough to show in what light that gentleman regards the present political movement. He seems to see in it nothing but something like a deliberate attempt to subvert the British rule. He believes that the logical outcome of the aspirations of the National Congress, if admitted to be legitimate, would be the departure of the British from India bag and baggage at no distant date. This is very strange, indeed, coming as it does from an experienced Civil Servant who has every opportunity of observing even the undercurrents of Native opinion. That even the wildest champion of the National Congress has never dreamt of ever calling in question the British supremacy is a fact well known to all sober people. The struggle is not between India for the Indians and India for England, but, as Mr. Bannerjee happily put it, the object of all our agitation is to promote the enlightenment and prosperity of the people for India and England allied. In other words, as the Bombay Gazette justly points out, we have a common platform in the ideal of India for the Empire. Mr. Beaman appears to base all his arguments on the hypothesis that India was won solely by the sword. The truth of the matter would be better stated if we say that British supremacy in India was brought about both by conquest and by conciliation. But what purpose is served by going to the very foundations of the question at this late hour? The more pertinent question is whether all the principles hitherto recognised in practice and all the pledges solemnly given are to be now repudiated. Mr. Beaman, we imagine, with all his uncompromising attitude would not venture to go to that length. Meanwhile it is a relief to know that in the Bombay Gazette we have at least one Anglo-Indian critic who can hold an even balance between the exaggeration in which both parties sometimes indulge, and thus furnish an excellent ideal of what an exponent of public opinion ought essentially to be.

THE ARMIES OF THE NATIVE STATES.

The Baroda Watsal says:—Major Mellis, formerly in the Baroda Service, still continues to be the life and soul of the Military aid offered by the Indian Princes for the supposed defence of the frontier. This offer, though no doubt voluntary at first, appears to us to be altogether whimsical and not a well considered step. We do not know if the Marquis of Dufferin, our former Viceroy, a statesman of a very high order, has erred, in accepting this form of manifestation of allegiance to the British throne. Were the Presidency Governors consulted in this important matter? For our part we view this measure as a grave political blunder. We are unwilling to believe that a handful army of the Indian potentates, though well-clothed, well-drilled and well-disciplined, will stand shoulder to shoulder with British soldiers against any European powers. It may even not be quite useful in many cases for patrol, garrison and police duties. We are all agreed, that when necessary, every Native Prince, in his own interest, will fight side by side with British bayonets against an invader with all his might and the resources at his command. Where is then the use of limiting the required strength to a single battalion or at most to a regiment or two? Why not extend to them every facility, by placing at their disposal every reasonable assistance the Princes ask from the Paramount Power to enable them to make their small armies thoroughly efficient, to cope with every assailant, be they even dacoits or neighbouring nations.

THE CONTINGENT UNIFORM.—The Hyderabad Contingent Cavalry have been much exercised lately by the prospect of a change in their uniform, which threatened their most cherished traditions. For ninety-eight years they have worn a tunic of dark green, which has thus come to be looked upon as an essential attribute to the Force, all the more so because the Mahomedans, of whom the Contingent is chiefly composed, associate it with their national colour. The other day, however, it appears that some new dress regulations were issued which, while making some minor alterations in the tunic with a view to converting it to the lancer pattern, also decreed that the colour should be changed from green to dark blue with light blue facings. Accustomed as our army is to suffer from the zeal of military tailors in high places, one has seldom come across so glaring an instance of the fidgety activity of the instinct as this, which would have violated the traditions and the sentiment of the Force and put the officers to an expense of about £100 a-piece for no purpose whatever. However, we are glad to know that the matter having been brought to the notice of the military authorities at headquarters, the change has been disallowed, and the Hyderabad Cavalry will be able to celebrate their centenary, which comes due a couple of years hence, in the time-honoured green.—Pioneer.

THE finding and order of the Commissioner of Allahabad in the Cawnpore assault case, in which serious charges were made against the magistrate, Mr. F. N. Wright, and the local police, have, writes the Pioneer, been communicated to counsel representing the complainants in the affair. Mr. Harington, after examining in detail the allegations made and the evidence given at the executive inquiry held by him recently, arrives at the conclusion that there is no foundation in truth or fact for the aspersions cast on the conduct of the magistrate for his alleged inaction when the so-called "complaint" was made to him on the 3rd June. Mr. Wright is declared to have acted neither improbably nor illegally. The statement that the name of the offender was communicated to the District Superintendent of Police is rejected absolutely, that officer having stated that no such information was given to him, and that he never heard the name until it was mentioned during the formal inquiry. The Commissioner gives his reasons for not entering upon the second branch of the inquiry—as to the allegation that the police instigated the assault—and has extended the time within which the complainants may decide as to what course they shall adopt before magisterial action is taken independently of them.

THE BABU AND THE RADICAL.

The Babu met the Radical
On India's coral strand;
They felt 'twas wrong one Viceroy
Should govern all the land;
And in the cause of liberty
A great reform they planned.
"The land," remarked the Radical,
"Is in a sorry plight.
Great aspirations are repressed
By autocratic might;
And, in this nineteenth century,
You know that isn't right!"
"Exactly so," the Babu said,
"You rightly state the case;
The great elective principle
In India has no place.
Our rulers are an alien and Unsympathetic race."
"I've been here but a month," replied
The Radical, "but still
I've seen enough to let me know
What is the people's will,
And when I get back home again
I'll introduce a Bill."
The Bill was introduced and passed
By seventeen to three,
What it proposed was no concern
Of any sage M.P.
'Twas not an Irish Bill, and so
They didn't care a "d."
The Radical returned again
To India's tropic shores.
"How fares the land of Ind," he asked,
"Now Indians make its laws?
Come, let me learn the progress of The Democratic cause!"
"Magnificent," the Babu said,
"As you yourself shall see.
The people's good is coupled with Untrammelled liberty.
But come to our Committee-room
And have an S. and B."
"Dear me!" observed the Radical,
"I certainly did think
Your temperance law had stopped the sale
Of alcoholic drink.
(A little drop more brandy—thanks!)"
The Babu winked a wink.
"From drunkenness," he said, "we wish
To keep the people free.
No more the ryot is allowed,
To tap his toddy-tree.
But as for checking foreign trade—
That's different, you see!"
"H'm, yes!" replied the Radical,
"Perhaps you're right; but stay!
I thought there used to be a mosque
That stood across the way.
Yes—now I recollect it well—
What happened to it, pray?"
"You're quite correct," the Babu said,
"It was there, as you say;
But Islam's superstitious creed
You know has had its day.
We passed a Bill a month ago,
And cleared the mosques away."
"Ah, yes!" replied the Radical,
"I think I understand,
But still the Hindu temples are,
I see, allowed to stand.
Does Hinduism yet prevail
In this enlightened land!"
"That is the people's will," replied
The Babu readily—
"It was our Parliament's almost Unanimous decree.
A few Mahomedans alone
Formed the minority."
"The nation's customs are revived,
The people govern now.
The widow is forbad to take Again the marriage vow;
And transportation is his lot
Who immolates the cow."

A while the Radical remained
In meditative mood.
At last he spoke: "My Babu friend,
I don't want to be rude;
But your ideas, it seems to me,
Are just a trifle crude.

"The right of government appears
To mean to you the right
To disregard minorities,
And vent the racial spite
And all the selfish bigotry
In which you take delight.

"As you define it, liberty
Means doing as you choose,
In calm oblivion of the claims
Of other men—such views
Well suit the self-complacency
Of Bengali Babus.

"Tis time to put the drag upon
This sort of thing I feel;
And though Progressionists should yelp
And Young Bengal should squeal,
When next I get to Westminster
I'll go in for repeal."

The Bill was introduced and passed
By twenty-one to four.
M.P.'s displayed as much concern
As they had done before.
"Only an India Bill" they said,
And didn't care a straw.

Z. Q. A.

BRIBERY.

(SPECIALLY TRANSLATED).

It is well known that in this country bribe-giving and bribe-taking are classed as ordinary affairs of life, and treated as time-honoured customs; and it is interesting to note what a Native paper has to say on the subject, and how it proposes that Government should put down the long-established habit. The remarks are taken from the Swadeshamitran:—

Ahem! Among the people of India bribe-giving and bribe-taking are amongst the common occurrences of life. To many of them the office which does not furnish opportunities of bribe-taking is no office at all. By them the schoolmaster is held in mean estimation; the same regard is paid to the physician; the general of armies is also held in no respect. In fact, every employé to whom no opportunity offers to stretch out his hand to receive a bribe is so regarded, however large his lawful emoluments may be. If somebody gets an employment, his kith and kin who assemble to congratulate him on it are sure to ask him: "What is the emolument of your office? What are the extras?" If he replies that there are no "extras" to be obtained in his particular office, his congratulators advise him to seek as soon as possible employment in the Revenue Department, assuring him, at the same time, that his particular office, which does not bring one the "extras," can be no good office at all. "Behold," they say, "the despised office of cook. Even he finds himself in possession of the 'extras.' But what are you, and what is your office which does not give one the 'extras'?" Now, however, is the light of knowledge beginning to dawn among the people; and there are many among them who know better than that the bribes which a man can get are to be considered the principal sources of his revenue. The people now begin to understand that bribe-giving and bribe-taking are both illegal. The Government also seems to show a desire to put down bribery. In the present times, among the Munsiffs and Sub-Judges, the persons whose hands are open to bribes are very few. Though few, the few who take bribes are old and practised hands at it. Through the Vakils and through the Amins they drive a roaring trade. If corruption should prevail in the Judicial Department itself, which is under the very eye of the High Court, why ask whether corruption exists, and exists largely in the Revenue Department? In this Department, most of the employés are well-trained old bandicoots. They fear no storm, and dread no fire. Patriotism is a mere word to them. As for the sentiment of pity, they know it not. The ryots of this country, it is known, writhle under their tender mercies. And the Government knows well that many of the employés in the Revenue Department are mighty bribe-takers; and yet the Government does nothing to suppress the evil. Now and then a bribe-taker is made an example of; but it is powerless to lay the axe at the root of the whole matter. If the Government takes it into its head to devote its time to the investigation of all cases of bribery complained of, it can hardly do anything else. The business of certain people in this country is to bring false charges against men in office. The post offers a convenient medium for men of this class to fulminate impossible charges and abominable lies against persons in authority. If these complaints are all to be inquired into, the Government will find it necessary to increase its establishments. But yet the Government knows that bribery is common in the land. It knows how the people are ground down by this long-rooted practice. It knows also that dissatisfaction is prevalent among the people because corruption is not put down by the high hand of authority. It is time, therefore, that the Government should come forward to put down corruption and save the people from the clutches of merciless officials. If the bribery clauses in the Indian Penal Code be modified, it will afford some relief. The Code at present enacts that both the bribe-giver and the bribe-taker are subject to punishment. This clause deters the bribe-giver from making himself known. By some necessity or other, people give away bribes to the public officials. When the time comes for making a clean breast of the whole affair, the above clause in the Penal Code acts as a deterrent. The bribe-giver shrinks from the public gaze, and bribery cases are not brought to light. The Government fears that the repeal of the clause which makes bribe-giving penal will increase the number of petitions and complaints accusing officers of accepting illegal gratification. The fear is natural; but the agricultural classes, nowadays, will not think of bringing false charges against the revenue officials, for they know that to do so will be to raise an hornet's nest about their ears. They know full well that all the officers of that department will combine to crush them. Knowing this, will anyone choose to bring a false charge against an officer? The line that legislation should take in the matter should be to enact that persons who prefer charges of bribery against an officer and do not prove the same, shall not be prosecuted before a Magistrate unless the sanction of Government is first obtained. Some such alteration of the Code will lift a dead weight from the hearts of the people. The people are confident that the Government will not step out of its way to inflict useless harm upon them. It is necessary that this subject should be taken up by the Press, and then by Government.

THE CHIN TRIBES.

The following extracts from the notes by Lieutenant R. M. Rainey, Commandant, Chin Frontier Levy, regarding the Chin tribes bordering on the Yaw country in the Pakokku district, are of more than ordinary interest, as they throw a new light on the manners and customs of these raiders.

The religion of the Chins consists of propitiating and consulting nats or spirits. The Chinbôks appear to be the greatest slaves to their nats. To propitiate nats an animal must be slaughtered. All are afterwards eaten if the offering was sacrificed near home; but when raiding on a journey, passing through notoriously unhealthy jungles, &c., sacrifices are frequently made, animals being carried on purpose. For this purpose dogs are preferred, as they follow and require no carriage. Nats are consulted in a similar manner, the direction of the blood flowing, &c., being the signs. Raids are frequently abandoned at the last moment, and after travelling long distances, if the omens are unfavourable. When nats are consulted or propitiated near home every one gets drunk off their rice-beer. Tom-toms, music and dancing accompany the ceremonies.

The dress of the Chinbôks, from the Maw down to the Ché, is very similar, though there are slight differences. The dress proper of a Chinbök man consists of a very small langoti, as worn by Natives of India when wrestling, and a piece of cloth, about 3 feet in length and 1 in breadth, which is folded and hung behind, suspended by bits of string across the shoulders. The Chin women weave these garments, which are generally, when new, red and blue in stripes. The dress of a woman consists of a garment very similar in shape to a short jersey without sleeves and open V-shaped throat; also a small lungyi, which shows about 6 inches below the jacket. These jackets are also home-made, and of similar patterns to the men's garments.

In the presence of strangers the women either stand or kneel. Any other position they could not with modesty or decency assume, on account of their scanty skirts. The men tie up their hair with bits of rag, red for choice. The hair is grown long. In the cold weather men and women wrap blankets of Burman or European manufacture round their shoulders.

The less civilised Chinbôks, who live on the Arakan side of the Yomas, wear hardly what can be called even an apology for clothing. It is stated that some even use the bark of trees to hid their nakedness. The historical fig-leaf would be more covering than was worn by some of the villagers whom we met.

Among the Chinbôks and Yindus every male carries a bow from the time he begins to toddle. It is made of bamboo, well-seasoned by being smoked for several years over the fireplace in his hut. It takes five years' seasoning to thoroughly mature a bow. The length of the bow of an adult is usually about four feet. The string is made of cotton sometimes, with plaited bamboo and other fibres.

The arrows are carried in quiver or basket on the left side. They are about 1½ feet in length, the shaft being made of bamboo about the thickness of a pencil, and are neatly tipped with feathers or bamboo shavings. The heads are of several kinds. For war purposes and for killing big game iron-heads are used.

The only other weapon which every man carries is a dagger a little over a foot in length, worn when in war kit in a bone scabbard on the right side attached to the shield, or, rather, leather breastplate. When engaged in peaceful pursuits, it is struck into a basket worn on the right side, in which there is a sheath to receive it. These daggers are used both for fighting and for cutting up food, &c. They make great use of them when fighting among themselves, which they frequently do when drunk. It costs nothing to stick a knife into a man, while if he were shot, with an arrow and afterwards escaped, the arrowhead, which is valuable, would be lost. Many men carry spears which resemble Burman spears; in fact, many are obtained from Burmans. Every man wears a kind of armour of leather attached. The pipes smoked by Chinbôks and Yindus are of three kinds—firstly, a plain bamboo pipe, with a bamboo stem a foot long; secondly, a pipe with a baked bamboo bowl and a bamboo stem; thirdly, a pipe on the principle of a hubble-bubble. This consists of a gourd, in which some water is kept; a bamboo tube projects about an inch from the upper side of the gourd, and on to this stem a neat earthen bowl fits, the smoke being drawn into the mouth through the end of the gourd where it tapers off at the stem. The tobacco they smoke is grown by themselves, and is very rank and offensive in smell. They are always smoking. Women smoke as well as men.

The objects of raids are to obtain possession of slaves, cattle, money and property of all kinds. Raids are never committed with the sole object of head-hunting. Raids are not only directed against British Burman subjects, but also across the Yomas and amongst themselves. The captives taken in raids into Burma are usually held to ransom. Raids are accompanied with much bloodshed and cruelty, but the prisoners are well treated once they reach the village of their captors. Women are not outraged. As captives women, children and pongyis are preferred, the two former as there is less chance of their effecting their escape than men, the latter because they can obtain such enormous ransoms for their release. Captives are at first placed in stocks, but are afterwards allowed out with a log attached to their legs with a string to carry it by. To secure the leg to the log a hole is cut through the centre of the log; through this hole the foot and ankle are inserted, a pin is then driven through, which makes the hole too small to allow the foot being withdrawn. String is attached to either end of the log, which the prisoner holds in his hands when walking, thus taking the weight off the ankle. If the prisoner is not thought likely to attempt an escape the log is removed. Prisoners are obliged to work in the fields, fetch water, husk grain, &c. Captives, if not quickly redeemed by their own people, are sold from village to village, thus rendering it very difficult to trace and recover them. They fetch from Rs. 80 to Rs. 300, sometimes paid in cash, but generally in cattle. Cattle are much prized, and are driven off from the plains whenever opportunity offers. Iron is greatly valued for spear and arrow heads, &c. When raiding in Burma they frequently tear this off from the pagodas for the sake of the iron. Certain villages are notorious raiders; they cultivate but little, and live by raiding. They are a terror to the weaker and more industrious Chin villagers, whom they greatly oppress, and who are consequently frequently driven to raid on Burman villages to recoup themselves for the heavy losses they sustain at the hands of their more powerful neighbours. This system of terrorism keeps the Chins savages. They have no incentive to become prosperous, as they are liable to lose their all, including wives and children, at any moment. They can ransom their relations if well enough off, but the price is beyond the means of most Chins. Raids are organised as follows:—The leading man or chief who wishes to organise a raid gets men together from his own and other villages. He gives a feast, and arranges for rations on the road. All these expenses he defrays, but gets the lion's share of the captives and loot.

The villages are kept cleaner than Burman villages, otherwise their sanitary arrangements are similar.

Musical instruments consist of gongs, cymbals, drums, and bells. There is no tune, but time is kept on the drums. Dancing, in which both men and women take part, is generally commenced when they are all primed with liquor. The men brandish spears and das, and shout, or rather yell. By fire-light the sight is a curious and pretty one.

The most remarkable custom of these people is their habit of getting drunk on every possible occasion. Every and any incident is an excuse to bring out the beer jars—the arrival of a stranger or visitor, the birth of a child, a marriage, a death, a case of sickness, an offering to or consultation of nats, all are sufficient excuses for every one present, men, women, and even tiny children, to get drunk. They frequently keep up these debauches for days. The liquor is made of grain boiled and fermented, and varies much in quality, depending on the grain used (rice is the best) and the length of time the liquor has been kept.

THE BARBERS AND HINDOO WIDOWS.

The following letter has been sent to the Times of India for publication:—

Bombay, July 9, 1890.

To the Lady Readers of the Woman's Penny Paper.

Dear and much-respected Madams,—We, the undersigned representatives of the different sections of the barber community in Bombay, have read with unfeigned pleasure your letter of sympathy addressed to the Bombay Gazette, in which you approve of our endeavours to abstain from participation in the degrading, sinful, and inhuman custom of shaving young widows' heads. We, Madams, have only done what the promptings of our hearts—aroused by the wholesome advice of our well-wishers, and by the sympathies felt for the wrongs inflicted on helpless, bereaved widows—have dictated to be the right course to extricate us from the sin in which we and our ancestors were tempted by false hopes for years past. But, Madams, it is a matter for wonder to us that our legislators in abolishing suttee allowed this inhuman custom, involving life-long misery, degradation, and sin to remain in full force; and our only prayer now is that we are not thwarted in our attempt by the opponents of this movement—the Brahmin priest and the Brahmin laity, holding everywhere the highest posts under the Government of our Gracious Queen Victoria. The latter, being well educated and among whom, we must say, are a few of our best supporters, dare not oppose us directly; but, nevertheless, we beseech that the support of Government may be given us in case we are persecuted in such a good cause, whether directly or indirectly. You say that no better example than this could be set to the Indian people. But, Madams, permit us, though a very humble and uneducated portion of the Hindoo population, to say that the Hindoos are a divided people. Caste system, which is altogether different from the class system prevalent among you, has separated us from one another more than the beasts of the country, and has degraded some of us lower than them; and this utter want of combination has prevented our well-wishers from introducing any healthy reform in the social structure of the Hindoo community. But, Madams, in repeating our prayers that we in our poor endeavours to elevate the degraded and helpless widows are in no way obstructed by our opponents, we offer our heartfelt thanks for the kind support and encouragement you have given to the movement from the Far West by your timely sympathy, as conveyed in your letter under reply.—We beg to remain, dear and much-respected Madams, your most obedient servants.

(Here follow the signatures of twenty-four Poonekars, fifteen Gungathudees, twenty-one Junnarkars, thirty Wayeekars, twenty Gujratis, and eight Konkanees).

THE forecast of the Bengal jute crop up to the end of June, 1890, is as follows:—"The weather has so far been very favourable to the jute crop, except in one or two districts, in which heavy rainfall, immediately after the sowing operations, is reported to have caused some injury. In most of the important jute-growing districts an average, or more than an average, crop, is expected, while in no district is the outturn estimated to be less than twelve annas, or three-fourths of an average crop. On the whole, it may be said that if the season continues to be as favourable as it has hitherto been, a full average, or more than a full average crop, may be expected. In the Twenty-four Pergunnahs, Khulna, Dinagepore, Rajshahye, Rungpore, Bogra, Pubna, Julpaigori Mymensing and Maldah, the area sown is reported to be in excess of that of last year, while in Nuddea, parts of Jessore, Tipperah and Fureedpore the area sown is said, owing to lowness of prices, to be less than that of the previous year, but the figures which have been furnished by collectors and mofussil reporters of actual areas sown are so manifestly incorrect and contradictory that it is not thought worth while to reproduce them. The area sown in the whole province would appear to be in excess of that of last year. The outturn per acre will be much better than that of last year."

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

MONDAY, AUGUST 25, 1890.

THE REPENTANCE OF DHULEEP SINGH.

WE are sure that the satisfaction will be general amongst all Englishmen interested in India to learn that the Maharaja Dhuleep Singh has at length repented of his foolish (to use the mildest term) conduct, and has received the clemency of Her Gracious Majesty for which he supplicated. An official communication was made to the Press last week, and has no doubt been telegraphed to India, and received there with equal satisfaction as here.

That official communication announced that "The Maharaja Dhuleep Singh, having recently expressed deep regret for the course of hostility which he has pursued towards this country since 1886, Her Majesty, by the advice of her Ministers, has been graciously pleased to accord her pardon to him." On this text the Daily Telegraph of Friday last has given to its readers a moral and political homily in the usual Telegraphese style. "The spectacle," says the writer, "of Dhuleep Singh's submission and its acceptance will impress the Asiatic world more deeply than would the perpetuation of his disgrace and exile." This may be granted, for it will show to the world not of Asia only, but to the world at large, that British rule in India is so firmly established that no Indian prince or potentate, however powerful in himself, or however powerful in his friends, can disturb it, or raise even the shadow of discontent against it. And it will show to the world, also, that that rule does not depend for its fixity on the force of arms only, but rather on that moral force which comes from the goodwill and confidence of peoples who find peace, prosperity, and progress under Britain's beneficent sway. When Dhuleep Singh announced himself as the implacable foe of England, and appealed to his countrymen to raise the standard of revolt, and demand him to return as their Sovereign, the only person who really did not know his countrymen was Dhuleep Singh himself. He found that he was mistaken in his estimate of their loyalty to him, and that the Sikhs of to-day are truer to the salt of the British Lion than ever they were to the salt of the Lion of the Punjab. He found that the Khalsa banner would never be unfurled again for him unless his sword was drawn for England. Baffled in the direction to which he had fondly but foolishly turned his heart he did a more foolish thing still. He offered his sword to Russia, and proffered his services to stir up hostility against us in Afghanistan, and join in an invasion of India. But Russia failed to recognise the worth of such services; and, although he was treated with some private hospitality there, he obtained nothing in the way of aid to or encouragement of his designs against England in India. His threats and fulminations were taken for what they really were—the foolish utterances of an angry man who for the moment "had lost his head." He lost it for about four years; but now, stricken down by paralysis, and it may be by remorse, his better nature has asserted itself, and he has asked pardon from the country he vowed to injure. That pardon has been granted, and all will agree with the Daily Telegraph that "Her Majesty's clemency is no less politic than magnanimous." But why take away from the graciousness of that act by stating that the repentant sinner will "of course" be received by the people of England "courteously but coldly" as "a foiled and humbled adventurer broken in health and advanced in years," and why doubt the sincerity of the repentance? "It would, we fear," says the editorial pen, "be straining charity and generosity to assume that his motives are self-suggested. The course of hostility, which, as the official announcement puts it, he has pursued towards this country since 1886 has been no so much repented of as abandoned in disappointment. We cannot but suspect that it is merely the failure of his open demonstrations and private intrigues alike which has brought him again to our side. Dhuleep Singh, in short, desires forgiveness and renewal of amity with us because he has found himself powerless to do us injury. It is well that his prayer should have been granted, however lightly we may esteem the motives that prompted it. The first clause of the great Roman motto is as binding upon us as the second; and the nation that broke the warlike pride of the bravest fighting men in India can afford to deal leniently with their submissive countrymen." The Daily Telegraph may imagine that these big words display a lofty tone of generous criticism, but to ordinary readers who do not understand high falutin the sentiments expressed will not appear to be tinged with either the Roman or English virtue of magnanimity towards a fallen foe—if Dhuleep Singh can now be called such. The writer fails to take note of the many years of loyalty to the Queen of England, of reverence to the Christian faith of England, and of friendship and good will to those he lived amongst in England shown by the erring Maharaja. Some of these memories might have been placed in the other scale against the four years' follies which he now asks pardon for. England graciously forgives these to Dhuleep Singh, but has Dhuleep Singh nothing to forgive England for?

THE Government Departments are very wisely giving increased attention to the arrangements for the protection of the various important and extensive buildings in their charge, and, during the past fortnight, the India Office has instructed Messrs. Merryweather and Sons, of London, to build two of their powerful "Greenwich" steam fire-engines, one to be placed in the gun-cotton factory at Fategarh, and the other for the Viceregal Lodge at Simla. The first of this well-known type of engine was exhibited at the Inventions Exhibition in 1885, and was purchased by the Sultan of Johore, while Hyderabad and Calcutta have also engines of the same pattern.

MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

A NUMBER of men of the Madras Pioneers are to be instructed on the South Indian Railway in platelaying, engine driving, and stoking, without expense to the Government.

MAJOR-GENERAL SIR GEORGE WHITE returned to Quetta from inspection duty in the district on the evening of the 30th July. The defences in connection with the Louise Marguerite Bridge over the Chupar Rift on the Hurnai Railway were inspected.

It is notified in an Army Circular that all men enlisted in the Bengal Army on or after October 1st will be furnished with free transport for baggage when marching, in lieu of marching batta. No change is to be made in the conditions under which batta is granted on foreign or field service.

SURGEON A. E. ROBERTS, who has been appointed to act as medical officer to the Gilgit Agency, should by this time have reached his post. Lieutenant Harris, attached to the Kashmir Defence Troops, will proceed to Gilgit with the annual relief which starts from Srinagar in September.

It is in contemplation to re-establish an embarkation depôt at Karachi in the ensuing trooping season for troops going and coming by the Lahore-Karachi route, with rest-camps at Landi, Dadu and Reti. The wisdom of this measure is apparent; it will save much in railway transport, and give relief to the staff at Deolali.

COLONEL HOGG has presented the Poona Horse with a magnificent silver cup to commemorate his twenty-seven years' connection with the regiment. The cup, which is in the form of a classic vase, has two panels, on one of which is represented a hog hunt, and on the other a steeplechase.

THE Civil and Military Gazette says:—"With reference to ex-Sergeant Palmer's description of the battle of Tel-el-Kebir, and the cry 'Retire,' which came from the ranks, 'an incident precisely similar,' writes a correspondent, 'X,' occurred at Gough's action at Futehabad during Sir Sam Browne's advance on Gundamuk. On that occasion our little force ran the risk of a reverse in consequence of the cry 'Retire' which was passed along the ranks of the British infantry advancing on the left to turn the enemy's position. Some of the officers who formed the subsequent court of inquiry must still, I think, be in India. The coincidence is certainly remarkable."

THE Pioneer says:—"There must be something in the complaint that medals are overdone when the feeling begins to extend to the rank and file, from a member of which we have received the following utterance on the subject:—"Would you kindly allow space in your valuable paper for the following long ago, medals were given for hard-won victories, and the possessors of them were proud and I suppose deservedly so of them, but now things are changed I myself am in possession of two medals and one clasp and I never fired an angry shot in my life am I proud of them a thousand times no somehow when I have them on I don't feel as if I deserved them any man, now-a-days may have two clasps on their medal and never smell gunpowder and I know of several instances will not medals soon lose their value some one has written. What is a Ribbon; everything glory is priceless, yes when one deserves it." We should imagine that some of our Egyptian heroes, resplendent in their three or four decorations apiece, must "somehow when they have them on" feel the same questionings as, it would appear, are troubling Thomas Atkins.

THE NEW INDIAN CENSUS OPERATIONS.—Mr. Baines, the Census Commissioner for India, has issued a circular in which he explains the differences in the operations of the census next year and those of the last census, and the reasons for these differences. The two most important modifications are the separation of caste from religion, and the substitution of the population subsisting by an occupation for that exercising it. As to the first, the scheme will be drawn up so as to adapt itself, as far as possible, to the social system of each province, and will also include the nationality of foreign residents and the races of Burma and the eastern frontier. The table, when complete, will show the whole population, which will be followed by the main castes under each group, given individually, and succeeded by a collective entry of the minor castes coming under the group, of which the number in each item as well as the joint strength will be given. Where a community is divided into two religious denominations—as the Hindoo and Mussulman castes and tribes of Northern India and the Hindoo and Animistic forest tribes everywhere in the continent—the two sections will be separately shown, but under the same main heading, so that the tribal total can be seen at once. In other respects the distinctions of religion will not be maintained unless, as in the case of some native Christians, it forms the only available designation for a class. The second difference is due to the unsatisfactory results of the occupation statistics in the census of 1881. The attempt to obtain a complete return of those who work as distinguished from those supported by others failed in 1881, and the changes now made are intended to remedy the defects then apparent. The form for the 1891 census enumerators, in accordance with these changes, contains two columns under the head religion, and two under caste or race—viz., main religion and sect of religion, main caste and sub-division. The occupation column is headed "occupation or means of subsistence," while in 1881 it was "occupation of men, also of boys and females who may do work," with an explanatory note that "boys at schools, girls, small children, and women who perform no regular work should not be shown at all." As a rule, the Indian census will be taken at night. The exceptions are those districts which are wild, difficult, or unsafe at night.

THE INDIAN COTTON CROP OF 1889-90.—From the statistics of the cotton crops of India during the past ten years, published by the Times of India, it appears that the crop of the past season was the largest ever grown. The total amount received in Bombay was 2,238,000 bales of 3½ cwt. each, against 1,851,000 in 1888-9. The increase was chiefly in Dhollerias (142,000 bales), Bengal (101,000), Broach 98,000, and Omra descriptions (23,000 bales). The quality of the crop also is said to have been a good deal better this season, but complaints of adulteration are still prevalent. In Calcutta, too, the figures show an increase, the shipments being 146,856 bales, against 100,920 last year; the Berar crop was 425,000 bales, against 409,000, the latter being regarded last year as an enormous crop. The shipments from all India to Europe, China, and other foreign ports amounted to 1,939,610 bales, against 1,632,000 last season. Bombay shows an increase of 233,000 bales; Madras, 10,000; Cocanada, 18,000; Tuticorin, 17,000 bales; while Kurrachee shows a decline of 14,000 bales. Bombay sent to Europe 1,488,000 bales, against 1,312,834 last year. The exports to China and Japan also show a considerable increase, owing to the cotton crop in these countries being an exceptionally poor one. Of the export from Bombay to European ports the largest was to Liverpool, which took 344,286 bales, or 48,256 more than the previous year; next came Antwerp with 254,113 bales; Trieste, 211,425; Hamburg, 144,516; Genoa, 132,092; Havre, 130,367; Venice, 87,654; Dunkirk, 50,866; Odessa, 25,130; and many others with smaller quantities. The largest increase has been to Hamburg, due doubtless to the establishment of a line of monthly steamers direct to and from Bombay. In 1885-6 only 1,000 bales of Indian cotton went to Hamburg, the next year 3,000, the next 12,000, then 55,000, and now over 144,000. This season 18,000 bales went to Bremen, Antwerp, Dunkirk, Venice, Havre, Genoa, Trieste, and other ports increased their imports. London showed a decline from 88,745 bales in 1888-9 to 25,398 in 1889-90, which is attributed to Hamburg now supplying the Continent with cotton formerly transhipped at London.

THE Pioneer in the course of an article on the manning of the Indian Marine incidentally alludes to "the utter inadequacy of the East Indian Squadron." Speaking of the deficiencies in our own coast defences, the Allahabad paper thinks that the Indian Marine would create a better impression if they were to look after the few fighting vessels they possess. The body is not certainly strong enough for its work, but it can do something, and at all events every care should be taken to make even the smallest torpedo-boat thoroughly efficient at a moment's notice. Instead of that what do we see? The only boats on which Bombay Harbour depends for its defence lying up perfectly useless, all their delicate machinery practically uncared for, and allowed to stand over till they are wanted for the next manoeuvres, when officers and men will be appointed to them at twenty-four hours' notice (crippling some other Indian Marine ship thereby) and ordered to work boats they have never seen before. It is impossible to develop their torpedo capabilities to the full in this way, or to do justice to the very slender means of defence Bombay happens to possess. Nothing short of a proper staff of officers appointed directly to the torpedo-boats for defence duties will meet the necessities of the case, and it is to be hoped that some steps will be taken in this direction in the course of the year without waiting for the new torpedo gun-boats to arrive. The point to be decided at once is whether these vessels should be in the hands of the Royal Navy or of the Indian Marine; for some reasons the former would be more suitable, but the red tape of the Admiralty is a thing to be avoided as far as possible, and, therefore, it would be better for India that the coast defence vessels at least should be in the hands of the Indian Marine, providing they have sufficient officers capable of manning them and available for that duty.

BROAD ARROW
AND

NAVAL AND MILITARY GAZETTE

ESTABLISHED 1833

EVERY SATURDAY. PRICE SIXPENCE.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" has acquired a reputation for early and exclusive intelligence as to Appointments and other service News, for the high character of its articles, the independent course of its staff of writers, and for its earnest support of all measures for the good of the Services. Articles on specially interesting subjects appear from week to week written for the most part by officers of rank and experience, or by men of note in literature who have made the Naval and Military affairs of the country their special study. A series of Illustrated Articles is appearing weekly on Regimental Badges and History. Illustrations with descriptions are also given of new Service Inventions.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" freely opens its correspondence columns to all grades in the Services. By this means an opportunity for interchange of opinion is afforded, such as is offered by no other Service Journal. Its ordinary weekly issue contains fully one-fourth more matter than the other Service Journals, even with their frequent "supplements."

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" circulates largely throughout India and the Colonies. It is supplied direct to the Army and Marine bureaux of the French, Russian, and other Governments, and it is read extensively by Officers of Foreign Services, especially of the German, French, and American Armies, who desire to acquire a true impression of facts and public opinion in England regarding Military affairs.

THE CALCUTTA REVIEW.

(The only Quarterly Review in India.)

ESTABLISHED 1844.

OPINIONS.

The Calcutta Review for October reached us a day or two ago, and a glance at its contents shows that the number more than sustains the reputation which this old and favourite publication is again achieving. The Review is rapidly regaining the position which it has long held, there is no fear of the Indian Review, or the Asiatic Quarterly rivalling it in public favour.—Statesman, October 1886.

... The best service which I ever rendered in India, or, indeed, for India, was the establishment, single-handed, of the Calcutta Review, which has done far more for Indian literature than anything I have written under my own name.—J. W. KAYE, Athenaeum Club, June 23, 1872.

The Calcutta Review has given us valuable articles on the army. Some from the pen of Sir Henry Lawrence, who wrote with the spirit of prophecy of the coming storm of which he was one of the noblest victims.—Address of the C.-in-C. at the U.S. Inst. of India.

... The Calcutta Review has not only throughout its career reflected the highest honour on its public-spirited promoters and its well-known distinguished contributors, but has done much to help forward the reconstruction of our system of governing India.—Westminster Review.

LIGHT versus DARKNESS.

"SHAKESPEARE, the Greatest Genius who has ever yet lived," taught the Divineness of Forgiveness, of Perpetual Mercy, of Constant Patience, of Endless Peace, of Perpetual Gentleness. If you can show me one who knew things better than this man, show him!! I know him not!! If he had appeared as a Divine, they would have Burned him; as a Politician, they would have Beheaded him; but God made him a Player.

"He taught that kindness is nobler than Revenge!!"—The Rev. GEORGE DAWSON, M.A.

"Earthly power doth then show likest God's
When mercy seasons justice,
And that same prayer doth teach us all to render
The Deeds of Mercy."—Shakespeare.

What higher aim can man attain, than conquest over human pain?

JEOPARDY OF LIFE, THE GREAT DANGER OF DELAY.

You can change the Trickling Stream, but not the Raging Torrent.

WHAT EVERYBODY SHOULD READ.—How important it is to have at hand some simple, effective, and palatable remedy, such as ENO'S "FRUIT SALT," to check disease at the onset!! With little trouble you can change the course of the trickling mountain stream, but not the rolling river. It will defy all your tiny efforts. I feel I cannot sufficiently impress this important information upon everybody. Let ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" be your companion; under any circumstances its use is beneficial, and never can do harm. When out of sorts, Restless, Sleepless, yet unable to say why, then your whole body is out of order, but you do not know where it may end; it is a real necessity to have a simple remedy at hand. The Pilot can so steer and direct as to bring the ship into safety, but he cannot quell the raging storm. The common idea when not feeling well is: "I will wait and see; perhaps I shall be better to-morrow;" whereas, had a supply of ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" been at hand, and use made of it at the onset, all calamitous results might have been avoided. What dashes to the earth so many hopes, breaks so many sweet alliances, blasts so many auspicious enterprises, as untimely Death?

"I used my 'FRUIT SALT' freely in my last severe attack of Fever, and I have every reason to say I believe it saved my life."—J. C. ENO.

CAUTION.—Examine each Bottle, and see that the Capsule is marked ENO'S "FRUIT SALT." Without it you have been imposed on by a worthless imitation.

OLD BY ALL CHEMISTS. PREPARED ONLY AT

ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" WORKS, POMEROY STREET, NEW CROSS ROAD, LONDON, S.E. (BY J. ENO'S PATENT.)

NATURE RULES ALL THINGS.

In every form of weakness use Scalded Milk.

ENO'S "VEGETABLE MOTO," occasionally a desirable adjunct to ENO'S "FRUIT SALT," as a simple and Natural Laxative, Stomachic, Blood, Brain, Nerve, Bile, or Liver Tonic; or, in other words, when taken as directed, their action is as simple as a tomato, whole meal bread or porridge (with scalded milk); you cannot overstate their great value in causing a natural, slow, and gentle action of the Liver; by that means you keep the blood pure and prevent disease. In advanced Life they are everything you could wish. Read Practical Hints on Constipation, Indigestion, Liver Diseases, Impure Blood, Sleeplessness, Nervous Headache, Treatment of Gout and Rheumatism, how to Prevent Consumption, Jaundice, and other disastrous diseases by Rules for Health and Longevity, &c., in a pamphlet given with each Bottle of ENO'S "VEGETABLE MOTO." They can be used for any length of time without fear or harm.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 1, 1890.

General Intelligence.

[BY OVERLAND MAIL.]

THE Overland Mail brings us letters and advices from Bombay to the 15th August; from Allahabad and Madras to the 13th August; and from Calcutta to the 12th August.

THE VICEROY and party, on their way to Panji, accomplished the journey to Rampur in safety, and experienced little difficulty from landslips.

It is expected that the first train to run over the Delhi-Kalka Railway will be that conveying the Viceroy to the plains on October 22nd.

THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR OF THE PUNJAB will probably leave Simla on October 7th or 8th for Lahore. He will be at Putiala when the Viceroy is there, and will also meet his Excellency at Delhi.

LADY LANSDOWNE will return to India on November 18th, according to latest plans, and join the Viceroy on tour at Agra.

THE opinion of the Government of India on the leprosy question, it is expected, will be issued in the next two or three days.

THE Bombay Municipal Corporation has sanctioned a monthly expenditure of Rs. 1,000 for the maintenance of the proposed Lepers' Home in Bombay. The Bombay Government have also consented to pay Rs. 1,000 a month for its maintenance.

NEARLY Rs. 35,000 have been subscribed towards the Homeless Leper Fund within a fortnight in Bombay.

At the Poona Criminal Sessions Panalel Hukumchund and Mulchund Ramnarayan, uncle and nephew, were sentenced to death for the wilful murders of Sundri, a girl of nine years, and Luximon, an infant of nine months, for the sake of the children's ornaments.

THE question of a railway from Rawul Pindee to Cashmere is likely to stand over for the present, pending further surveys of the route.

ABDUR RAHMAN was well pleased with his reception at Cabul on July 25th on his return from Mazar-i-Sharif.

SUFI GHULAM RASUL has been appointed by the Ameer as his purchasing agent in India of stores, machinery, ammunition, &c., in place of Mulla Abu Bakar Khan.

It has been definitely decided not to use Kurrachee as a port for the reception or embarkation of troops during the coming season's reliefs.

THE survey through the Gomal Pass and up the Zhob Valley has been placed under the control of the Director-General of Railways.

SIR FREDERICK AND MISS ROBERTS left Simla on August 13th on a ten days' trip to Narkanda.

ANY further operations required for opening out the Chin-Lushai country during the ensuing cold weather are likely to be on a small scale, and will not necessitate the formation of a separate command.

THERE is a likelihood of an action being taken at Army Headquarters to place all officers on the same footing regarding privilege leave out of India by granting subsidiary leave sufficient for reaching the port of embarkation.

MR. F. B. WALKER, Engineer-in-Chief, East Coast Railway, arrives shortly at Simla to arrange for starting work on this new State line early in the cold weather.

A SURVEY for a broad-gauge line from Lucknow through Rai Bareilly to Jaunpore is likely to be sanctioned during the ensuing cold weather.

THE North-West Provinces Administration Bill will be passed early in October.

It is probable that a medal and certain honours will be bestowed at an early date for the Chin-Lushai Expedition.

LORD CONNEMARA, while following the hounds at Ootacamund on August 7th, was thrown off his horse, and received a few bruises.

THE Indian Factories' Act Amendment Bill is now under the consideration of the Local Governments in connection with the recommendations of the Berlin Labour Conference, and will come up for disposal during the Calcutta Session.

MR. L. A. KERSHAW has shot a tigress and two cubs at Sidhpur.

MR. W. K. HAMILTON, Third Presidency Magistrate, now on leave to Europe, has been appointed Second Magistrate, vice Mr. P. Ryan, deceased.

THE Bengal and North-Western Railway line between Chupra and Khoja Somhota has been breached. Chupra itself is reported under water.

HEAVY rain has fallen in the Bolan. The railway line has been seriously damaged. The military cart road between Mach and the adjacent stations is completely blocked. Nine girder-bridges between Hirok and the Kotal have been washed away, and the water at Hirok was thirty feet high on Tuesday.

DURING the coming cold weather General Sir G. White will probably take a small force through the Zhob country.

MAJOR BUCHANAN SCOTT'S parties for the Zhob Valley Railway survey will rendezvous at Quetta about the middle of September, with a view to making the beginning of work early in October.

THE question of meeting Commissariat grain supply of Quetta directly from cultivators, who pay their rents in kind, is now receiving the attention of Captain Wingate of that Department, who goes shortly to Peshin to see what arrangements are possible.

THE following is the composition of the Agricultural Conference which meets at Simla in October:—To represent the Government of India there will be Sir Edward Buck, with Mr. Muir-Mackenzie and Dr. Noelcker. Bombay will send Mr. Ozanne; Madras, Mr. H. F. Clogstoun; Bengal, Mr. Finucane; the North-West, Mr. Benett and Mr. Holderness; the Punjab, Mr. R. G. Thomson and Mr. E. B. Steedman, and Mr. F. A. Robertson, of the Agricultural Department. The Central Provinces Government deputed Mr. Fuller, and Berar some officer yet to be named. Burma and Assam will not join the Conference, the conditions of agriculture in these provinces being too different from those of the rest of India to make necessary to include them in the consultation.

THE Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab, after a careful inquiry, has found the allegations made by the Bengali paper at Lahore regarding Mr. Warburton's indebtedness to be greatly exaggerated, and has expressed the belief that that officer has never allowed his monetary difficulties to affect his official work. At the same time, as Mr. Warburton has borrowed sums of Rs. 2,000 and Rs. 1,700 in Amritsar during the last five years, in contravention of standing departmental orders, the Lieutenant-Governor has felt it necessary to order his transfer to Sialkot to mark his disapproval of the breach of rule.

MR. DILLON, Postmaster-General of the Punjab, is about to proceed to England on privilege leave, Mr. Hutton, Postmaster of Calcutta, officiating for him.

THE DOWAGER MAHARANI OF BETTIAH died at Benares on the morning of August 12th. She was an aunt of the present Maharaja of Benares.

MR. J. E. BUDD, late District Registrar of Fyzabad, has been committed to take his trial before the High Court of these Provinces on the charge of accepting illegal gratifications. He has been admitted to bail on Rs. 6,000.

NOTES.

THE latest telegrams from the Indian correspondents of the Times and Daily News will be found in the usual column. The news is not much nor eventful. But Reuter sends from Simla, under date of August 30th, a brief notice to the effect that the members of the Uncovenanted Civil Service at that Station propose to remove the headquarters of the Association from England to India, as they are dissatisfied with the recent action of the Home Committee. This, if true, does not display a very nice feeling towards Mr. King, Sir Roper Lethbridge, or others who have been working so hard in the interests of that Service; but then it may not be true, or it may be capable of explanation, which Reuter does not condescend to go to the trouble or expense of doing.

It is satisfactory to learn that the outbreak of cholera at Ranikhet is at an end, no fresh case having occurred since August 3rd. There have been eleven cases in all, every one terminating fatally, four of them being those of officers. At Dharmasala there has been no cholera since July 28th, with the exception of one case in the bazaar; and Dehra has been entirely free since the disappearance of the first outbreak on the 24th of that month.

THE 4th Goorkas must, however, have had a rough time of it at Fort White, judging from the enclosed extract from the letter of a correspondent to a contemporary:—"The Major (officiating in command) has been sent down, very ill with fever, in charge of Dr. Hall; he will certainly be sent home invalided. Rundall, Carnegy, and Battye remain. Battye gets fever every other day, but struggles on manfully. Rundall has had a severe attack, and Carnegy has been so bad that the doctor threatens to invalid him if he gets another attack. The men are fearfully bad—about 50 per cent. in hospital, the remainder debilitated, and many of them suffering from fever in the lines. Twenty men have already been invalided to Bukloh, and the doctor is going to invalid another batch next week; seven regimental followers dead, and the rest pretty sick. Altogether they are in a bad plight, the men wasting away with fever, and there is no chance of drill or musketry." The 4th Goorkhas went to Burma from the Punjab in November, and served through the Chin-Lushai Campaign, during which they lost their commanding officer, doctor, adjutant, and quartermaster, all of whom were invalided.

A STORM in a teapot has been raised in Bombay official circles by our contemporaries here, the Broad Arrow, and Truth. The story as it comes to us from India is this:—"A month or two ago there appeared in the Broad Arrow, under the elegant heading of "Bombay Gup," a semi-mysterious allusion to a battle royal at Poona between a military officer and a syce, which might have escaped notice in the columns of that eminent Service journal, but was brought to notoriety by being quoted in Truth, which gave the story a point, and made it tolerably clear at whom it was aimed. The Native papers on the spot improved on the occasion, said that the high military officer had caused the syce's death, and stated that the details were well known to the élite in Poona, but that the Government had 'hoodwinked the affair.' Under these circumstances a reference was made to the Commissioner of Police, and elicited the fact that a syce in the service of the Commander-in-Chief had been found dead one morning. He had been ill all the way from Meerut, and had been treated the day before by the senior apothecary of the hospital, who left him sinking from pneumonia, and, from the medical report, it was plainly superfluous even to hold a post-mortem."

THIS, it appeared, was the sole occurrence on which the story might have been, one cannot say founded, but devised. The Native papers who had asserted that the circumstances were notorious locally were then asked for information by the Government, and their replies, elicited after much pressure, have just been published. The reader who is conversant with the ways of the vernacular Press will have already guessed what they are. Neither editor knew anything whatever about the matter except what he had seen in the Broad Arrow, or rather in Truth, but both thought it for the public good that there should be an inquiry. Had they been a little more specific in their innuendoes there would have been a chance of their learning that inquiry is an obligation for the journalist as well as the Government, and that the public good does not demand that the character of high officials should be taken away without a cause. It is to be regretted that this lesson has not been brought home to these Native gentlemen in the only way they would feel it—in their purse or persons.

AN Industrial Association for Western India has been formed, and is about to be registered. In a circular just issued under the signatures of Messrs. Nulkar and Ranade, Captain Beauclerk, R.E., and nineteen other gentlemen of position, its necessity, object and scope are clearly shown, and the rules under which the Association will work indicated. Its chief work will be to encourage and promote Native art industries by means of exhibitions, trades museums and art galleries, by helping the formation of trades and technical schools and libraries, by arranging public lectures on subjects of economic and industrial importance, and by taking such other steps and using such other means generally as would be calculated to promote the utility of the Association. The Association is to have power to affiliate with other bodies established for similar purposes, and confer fellowships and degrees of associate. Immediately the Association is registered the Reay Industrial Museum at Poona will be handed over to it.

A WELL-KNOWN English writer penned some years ago an essay on "The inconvenience of being hanged." Happily it is an inconvenience which affects only a limited portion of any country, but two Governments have been trying to lessen it to individuals. The American Government has not been successful in the attempt to substitute electricity for the older process, so the rope will possibly be retained for some time longer in the State. The Nizam's Government is anxious to introduce the guillotine as the death instrument for the Hyderabad State. This Government, we learn, is undecided whether its criminals shall henceforth be decapitated by the French instrument or by an imitation of it made in England—possibly in Birmingham.

THE decision turns upon a question of expense. The French article costs Rs. 2,500 cash; the Brummagem one Rs. 1,700. There are in all seventeen districts in the Hyderabad State, and the proposal is that each district shall be equipped with a guillotine. Thus the estimated expenditure is Rs. 42,500 for the French, and Rs. 28,900 for the English implement. The latter, therefore, is likely to win on the score of economy; but a local editor protests against both as being too extravagant luxuries for criminals, and hopes that the British Resident will interfere, and insist upon the good old British plan being retained in spite of the "inconvenience" of it to those requiring it.

CALCUTTA, AUG. 31.

The embankment on the Ganges, in the Moorshedabad district, has been breached by floods, and a large extent of country is under water. No loss of life or cattle is reported yet. Probably the early rice will suffer to some extent, but it is hoped that the damage to it and to the railways will not equal that of 1885, when a similar accident occurred.

Sir F. Roberts has issued a general order on the subject of the game of Polo, with especial reference to its danger and expense. He calls the attention of all clubs to three chief sources of danger—namely, the increased height of the ponies and their higher speed, the use of imperfectly broken ponies, and the neglect to wear a proper headress. He expects commanding officers to see that officers do not keep expensive ponies until they are provided with proper chargers, and that the price of ponies shall be kept within the means of officers. He does not wish to discourage the amusement on account of the danger, but considers it a duty to reduce it to a minimum by proper precaution, and leaves the arrangement and the rules of competition to the good sense of the officers.

BURMA.

RANGOON, AUG. 30.

The Chief Commissioner's official telegram, quoted by Sir J. Gorst in the House of Commons when replying to a question about the circumstances of Boh Yanyun's surrender, affects to doubt the promise of pardon given to induce his surrender. The Deputy-Commissioner at Myingyan, when sentencing him to death, admitted that he had surrendered on a promise of pardon. This fact was mentioned in the report of the trial published in the Rangoon Times of the 22nd of July. There has been an extraordinary manifestation of popular feeling in favour of Boh Yanyun, and discredit is given to the statement that he was certain to have surrendered, owing to the constant fear of being murdered. The Phoongyees have displayed great anxiety about the result of the case, owing to the surrender having been negotiated by one of them. It is understood they gravely resent the breach of faith in sentencing him to death. Had the promise to Yanyun been observed, other dacoit chiefs would have surrendered.

The French in Tonquin have at length established a fair trade route to Yunnan through French territory. A Tonquin journal announces that the steamer Yunnan, specially constructed for the navigation of the Red River, ascended the Songka, or Red River, to Taokag, close to the frontier of China, and not far distant from the town of Mongtze, an important trade centre. By this route goods reach Yunnan from the French port of Haiphong in 26 days instead of 40 by the old route.

The new route bids fair to divert a portion of the trade of South-Western China through French territory.

Increased anxiety is now felt in Burma that a railway should be constructed to Koulon Ferry, on the Salwen, to secure the Yunnan trade.

SIAM.

RANGOON, AUGUST 30.

The Siamese Government having abandoned all schemes for constructing large public works, Mr. Gordon, chief engineer of the Siamese Government, has resigned his post.

The French are restless on the north-east boundary of Siam. Trouble may possibly arise in that quarter.

The Siamese Prince governing at Zunnie has been removed in disgrace.

AFGHANISTAN.

ST. PETERSBURG, AUG. 31.

According to the Novoe Vremya, a rumour is current in Afghan Turkestan that Ishak Khan, the Afghan pretender, who is living in Samarkand, intends to apply for permission to become a naturalised Russian subject and to enter the Russian Army.

BOKHARA.

ST. PETERSBURG, AUG. 31.

The Novoe Vremya to-day publishes intelligence stating the Ameer of Bokhara intends to reorganise his army on the Russian system and to adopt Russian uniforms. He has also sent a request to St. Petersburg that some Russian officers may be sent to Bokhara as instructors for the army.

EVENTS IN INDIA.

(FROM "DAILY NEWS" CORRESPONDENT.)

CALCUTTA, WEDNESDAY NIGHT.

A meeting of European and Native merchants was held here to-day to consider the critical position of the import trade in consequence of the rise in the exchange. A suggested combination for stopping sales till the Poojah holidays in October was negatived. A committee was appointed to examine the position thoroughly and report.

The mill hands of Bombay, on the invitation of the Government, have nominated a member for the proposed committee to consider the hours of labour and other matters.

Mr. Norton, one of the Congress delegates lately in England, speaking at a meeting at Madras in favour of the Congress scheme on Monday, declared that the delegates were agreed that nothing could be hoped from the Conservative party, and that they must ally themselves to the Liberals.

ANGLO-INDIAN PRESS.

ANGLO-INDIAN CELEBRITIES AT HOME.

SIR W. W. HUNTER, K.C.S.I., C.I.E., AT CHERWELL EDGE, OXFORD.

(Times of India.)

"Are you the gentleman who invented that dreadful system of spelling?" said a lady once at a dinner-party at Ootacamund to the subject of the present sketch, in an inconvenient outburst of candour. She could not imagine that the pleasant-spoken companion by her side, with his fascinating manners and graceful courtesy, could be the author of the etymological eccentricity which transformed almost beyond recognition some of the most historic names in India, and, generally, played havoc with the happy-go-lucky method of spelling Indian names. What reply Sir William Hunter vouchsafed to his fair inquirer history telleth not, nor is it necessary to know, for we may safely assume that he was as well able to justify himself at the social board as he has been in the wider sphere of public controversy. We merely recall the incident because the surprise that the Ootacamund lady evinced at finding that Sir William Hunter in the flesh was a very different individual to what she had pictured to herself is by no means peculiar to herself. No one on first meeting the late Director-General of Statistics would suppose that he has devoted more time to the dry-as-dust literature of India, and turned out, in his day, a vaster aggregation of official records than any man living. One expects to meet a staid, elderly gentleman with brow "sidelied o'er with the pale cast of thought," and one finds instead a bright, almost youthful-looking man, whose bearing, so far from suggesting the literary recluse rather indicates the man of the world, who takes life easily, and makes the most of the pleasant side of existence. Seen as he may be, almost any day, walking gaily along through the picturesque streets of classic Oxford, you might easily mistake him for a youthful Don given more to the pursuits of the field than habits of study. Yet Sir William Hunter is no youngster or idler. During the half century of his existence he has crowded into his career a marvellous amount of downright hard work, and in a service celebrated for its busy men he can show a record second to none for industry and achievement. Even as a youth he was distinguished for his energy and perseverance. When other lads of his acquaintance were frittering away their time in frivolous pursuits he was studying Sanskrit under John Muir, the scholarly civilian, who, after a distinguished career in India, devoted his fortune and later life to founding the Sanskrit Professorship at Edinburgh. It was to this natural inclination for learning that Sir William Hunter owed his subsequent success. Its first fruit was to place him at the head of the list of Civilians of his year—1862—but its more important result was to give his mind that bent for historical research which brought him fame, and enriched our literature with some unique works.

Sir William Hunter's rapid rise in the service is an old and familiar story, but it will bear repetition. Proceeding to India with the laurels of his early scholastic successes fresh upon him, he speedily justified the promise of his youth. In his first important charge in the Kushtia sub-division of Bengal he attracted the attention of the Government by drawing up an able report on the subject of the reform of the labour transport system in the tea districts, part of which was embodied in subsequent legislation. A brief tenure of the office of inspector of schools in the south-western division of Bengal followed, and the Orissa famine of 1866 found him in the occupancy of that post. The hard work which the famine entailed broke down the young Civilian's health, and 1867 found him in England on sick leave. While at home on this occasion he wrote "The Annals of Rural Bengal" from manuscript materials he had collected in the Birbhum and other district record offices. He also compiled a glossary of the Non-Aryan languages of India from materials supplied to him by Mr. Brian Houghton Hodgson, formerly British Resident in Nepal. Both these works attracted much attention at the time, and though the Non-Aryan Dictionary has since been superseded by subsequent more exact researches in the localities concerned, "The Annals of Rural Bengal" still holds its own as a standard Indian work of great interest and value. It was described by the English critics of the time as having "applied the philosophic method of writing history to a new field," and this is substantially the position to which Mr. Hunter owed his first literary fame. Returning to India in 1868, Mr. Hunter received the gazetted thanks of the Government of India for his services, and a more substantial acknowledgment in the shape of an honorarium of Rs. 20,000. Employment in the Secretariat, first on special duty, and subsequently as Under-Secretary in the Home Department, carried the young Civilian on to 1871, when to the surprise of many, and amid much criticism, Lord Mayo created a New Statistical Department, and created Mr. Hunter its Director-General. The appointment was, however, fully justified by results. Even Mr. Hunter's most prejudiced rivals of that day cannot deny that he discharged the duties of the office in a manner which redounded alike to his own credit and to the lasting advantage of the Government.

It was a truly gigantic task that was set before the young officer who less than ten years previously was learning Sanskrit roots at Edinburgh; but he speedily showed that he was quite equal to it. His first work was to draw up a "plan for a statistical survey of India," postulating as the basis of any such survey the necessity of a complete census of the Indian Empire. This elaborate project he worked out in concert with the various Provincial Governments of India, whom he had been deputed to visit for that purpose by the Viceroy. The first census of India was taken in 1872, and then Mr. Hunter got to work in real earnest. For the next ten years he was engaged in supervising on a uniform system the operations of the statistical survey district by district for all India. Each province was assigned to a carefully selected editor, Mr. Hunter himself being editor for the survey in the Lieutenant-Governorship of Bengal and Assam. The result was the accumulation of an enormous mass of material in 130 printed volumes of District Memoirs and Provincial Gazetteers, the compilation of twenty-two volumes of which fell to Mr. Hunter's own share. Out of this vast body of information eventually emerged, under Mr. Hunter's skilful supervision, the "Imperial Gazetteer of India," the first edition of which was completed in nine volumes in 1881. This great work will remain to all time a monument of accurate research. It may be superseded in generations to come by more wide-spreading investigations—though this is doubtful—but it is certain that any future historian who attempts to write the economic and social history of India under British rule will be compelled to rely mainly for his materials upon Mr. Hunter's volumes.

Work on the Gazetteer kept Mr. Hunter engaged chiefly in England, where the principal work of compilation had been carried on, until 1881, and on his return to India at the end of that year he was at once appointed a member of the Viceregal Legislative Council, to which appointment was added the Presidentship of the Education Commission which had just been set on foot by the Government of India. It is well known how, as President of that Commission, Mr. Hunter travelled with certain of his colleagues through the various presidencies and provinces of the country, inquiring into the state of education in each locality, but a few facts may be recorded in this connection which are not without interest at the present time. Before the end of 1882 193 witnesses had been examined by the Commission, and no fewer than 323 memorials, containing upwards of a quarter of a million of signatures, received from public bodies and individuals interested in school work. From this great mass of materials and the reports of the Provincial Committees a most elaborate report was subsequently drawn up. It forms a folio of over 700 pages, and, with the valuable statistical tables, supplied chiefly by Mr. Jacob, one of the Bombay members of the Commission, is a complete vide mecum of India's educational needs, and it will probably long remain the basis of public instruction in India. A C.S.I. fell to Mr. Hunter's lot for his part in this useful work, and this was supplemented a few years later, on his retirement from the Bengal Civil Service, after twenty-five years' service, with a knighthood of the same order.

Most Anglo-Indian officials who settle down in their Native country after many years of arduous duty in the East feel very much like fish out of water. They are too old to adapt themselves to new ways, too active in temperament to take kindly to the life of cultured idleness which awaits them in England. A small proportion are fortunate enough to find a congenial sphere for their energy, but the great majority, if they consulted their own feelings, would probably gladly return to their old mode of life. Sir William Hunter chances to be one of the few favoured ones in this respect. He was always more of the litterateur than the bureaucrat, and when he severed his official connection with India the change necessitated in his habits was not very extensive. From a bird of passage in the great centres of literary activity at home he became a settled denizen of those quarters. Oxford, with its venerable traditions and its cherished associations, always had a great fascination for him, and thither he directed his steps when freed from the trammels of official employment. Cherwell Edge, a delightful place on the outskirts of the old town, furnished him with an almost ideal residence for his purposes. Its seclusion admirably adapted it for literary work, while its comparative proximity to London freed it from any objections on the score of isolation. There Sir William Hunter has now settled down, and with his literary work, agreeably broken as it is by occasional visits to the capital or to places further afield, he finds life worth living. Political friends have endeavoured to tempt him from his allegiance to literature, and the party leaders in as many as three constituencies have made advances with a view to securing him as their candidate at the next general election. But he has steadfastly set his face against all blandishments of this kind. It is true an occasional trenchant contribution to the Times or to the Quarterlies on the subject of the Congress demands, in which he has always taken a lively interest, shows that Indian politics have still a charm for him. But even in this direction he is likely to be less conspicuous in the future than he has been in the past. His view is that the introduction of Lord Cross's Bill for the reform of the Indian Councils has practically conceded all that Natives of India are entitled under existing conditions to demand, and he has dissociated himself from the Extremists who are for remodelling the Government of India upon the lines of Western representative institutions. Truth to tell, however, he finds his literary work quite sufficient to keep him busily engaged without taking upon himself a political rôle. In the early days of his retirement the biography of Sir Bartle Frere occupied most of his time. Unfortunate differences with the family upon points which both parties considered of vital importance brought that work to a standstill when substantial progress had been made with it, and it still remains, and appears likely to remain, in a state of suspended animation. Sir William Hunter subsequently turned his attention to a project he had long had in his mind of producing a series of biographies of the most notable men who have been concerned in the Government of India. Under his impulse the University of Oxford took up the work, and the "Rulers of India" are now appearing in popular form, the most eminent Indian scholars and writers of the day contributing volumes. Sir William Hunter himself was responsible for "The Life of the Marquess of Dalhousie," and that book which contains, perhaps, the completest record of the career of that great pro-Consul which has yet appeared, has had a large success both in England and America. Side by side with the editorial supervision of this biographical series Sir William Hunter is occupying himself with a History of India on a large scale, based upon the materials which he collected in the various presidencies and provinces of the country between the years 1879 and 1887. In this way he is putting the topstone upon the edifice of literary fame, the foundations of which he laid when he charmed the world with his "Annals of Rural Bengal" and the "Old Missionary."

AN "UNSUBSTANTIAL CORPORATION."

(Pioneer.)

It only required somebody to call the raison d'être of the Simla Municipality in question for its absurdity to become apparent, and this has now been done. As will be seen from our telegraphic columns, a representation has been drawn up asking the Government to abolish what everyone has long felt to be an extravagant fiction. Whatever may be the case in other towns and cities of India, the conditions existing at Simla render the methods of municipal government entirely inapplicable. The Government, as the petitioners point out, owns all the land and one-third of the house property in the station, has the largest aggregate vote, and is responsible for the presence of two-thirds of the population. The Government is thus not only the supreme arbiter of the issue of any election, but its interests are, to all intents and purposes, the interests of the town, and there is no sense in its delegating the care of these interests to a body which, if it is representative, represents only the Government; and if it is not representative, loses the only attribute by which it has any right to exist. In the early days of self-government in India, consule Lord Ripon, great interest was taken in the elections for the Simla Municipality, because it was the "proper thing to do;" but the fashion has for some years back been as dead as the dodo, and, the thing itself having no vitality, few candidates now come forward, and those certainly not the most representative of the Simla population. The efforts of an unsubstantial corporation have naturally been unsatisfactory both in extent and in result. What has been done on the initiative of the municipality has been done extravagantly and inefficiently; but in truth very little has been done at all, the most important and costly improvements having been originated and carried out by the Government. The farce having lost its power to excite even a languid interest, it is time it was ended, and we can hardly suppose that the Government will refuse to listen to the prayer of the petitioners. If, as they propose, the municipality be abolished, and the town constituted a specially conditioned cantonment, with a special officer and adequate executive staff to look after its affairs, it will be both more cheaply and more capably administered.

THE INDEBTEDNESS OF THE RYOT.

(Civil and Military Gazette.)

A point of interest in the Central Provinces administration report is the reference to the indebtedness of the cultivating classes. The Chief Commissioner says that those of them who inhabit the open part of the Provinces are as a rule in very comfortable circumstances, but adds that they are heavily in debt—for the most part merely in consequence of their ability to give security. Elsewhere he writes:—"Regarding the condition of the cultivating classes in open and fertile tracts, district report repeat the old tale of indebtedness. In particular the Deputy Commissioner of Chindwara, after referring to the Sansar tahsil as the richest cotton-producing portion of the district, remarks that it is said to be almost entirely in the hands of Marwaris and other money-lenders." It seems a little inconsistent, not to say paradoxical, to speak of a man being in very comfortable circumstances and at the same time heavily in debt. Perhaps the most important part of a man's circumstances are his pecuniary standing and relations, and if heavily in debt he can hardly be said to be in very comfortable circumstances. In the Punjab also we have given the ryot a negotiable security, and the indebtedness that he is thus enabled to bring upon himself is gradually ruining him. We imagine the same thing is likely to result in the Central Provinces; and if it does, the cultivator's circumstances will be anything but very comfortable.

INDIAN TELEGRAPH RATES.

(Englishman.)

It is only a few years since the telegraph rates in India were altered, and to some extent cheapened, by the introduction of the urgent, ordinary, and deferred system, an arrangement which was generally regarded as a wise innovation, advantageous both to the public and to the Telegraph Department. The spirit of thankfulness on the part of the public has not, however, lasted very long, and recently a letter was addressed by the Bengal Chamber of Commerce to the Director-General of Telegraphs suggesting that a further concession should be made, namely, that addresses should be charged for, and that sixteen words should be allowed for the minimum charge at each rate. This proposal was also backed up by the other Chambers of Commerce in India. It was urged that the system of telegraphing addresses was wasteful, and that so long as they were sent free the public were not likely to appreciate any recommendation in favour of brevity. Besides this it was fairer that those who had long addresses should pay for them, and that those who had short addresses should reap some advantage, and with a minimum of sixteen words there would probably be a marked resort to the facilities offered for the registration of addresses. The Committee of the Calcutta Chamber was also of opinion that the change would not be to the disadvantage of the revenue of the Department, but would encourage the public to make a much larger use of the wires. It will be seen that this proposal involved two considerations: first, whether charging for addresses was a desirable change in itself; and secondly, whether the rates proposed would lead to any loss of revenue, or whether, as the Chambers of Commerce believed, there would be a large increase of business. These are two important points, the consideration of which we must postpone for another time. For the present it is sufficient to state that the immense area of India and Burma makes a comparison with English rates impossible, while revenue questions must be considered on their own basis. Neither is a comparison with the cheap postal rates in India possible, such as has been attempted by the Madras Chamber of Commerce. Mr. Norman Green, President of the Union Telegraph Company in America, has pointed this out with great clearness. He states that it costs half a cent. per word for every operator who handles a message, and an additional operator is required for every five hundred miles distance, so that distance is a most important factor in the cost of transmitting a telegram. Besides additional operators there is the multiple of cost in maintaining the lines, the battery, and, in short, everything except stationery and delivery service.

THE HEALTH OF THE INDIAN ARMY.

(Pioneer.)

The supporters of the measures euphemistically described as "C. D. Acts," have of late years fought a losing battle. They have been beaten disastrously all along the line. In England the system of supervision and control has, thanks to the exertions of a band of zealous propagandists, been discredited and abandoned. Parliament has solemnly pronounced its condemnation, and India and the Colonies have been directed to enforce a corresponding policy upon their own administrations. Those, however, who have studied the subject scientifically, and those who have practical familiarity with the facts of the case, have not been shaken in their faith by this strong current of popular opinion, or the parliamentary resolution in which it found expression. The responsible authorities have, in almost every instance, protested, pointing out the calamitous results likely to result from the abandonment of all supervision. The Government of India has, as we know, done its best to mitigate the inevitable consequences of the new policy. Those who believe in the ultimate triumph of good sense over ignorance, gush, morbid sentiment, and spurious morality, have always retained the conviction that a reaction will sooner or later set in, and a return be made to a system which it has been proved in India can be worked without opposition, which, far from involving additional degradation on the members of an unhappy class, operated to save them from the most potent cause of degradation, and which unquestionably would, if properly worked, put an end to the more serious forms of the maladies concerned.

JOINT-STOCK COMPANIES.

(Bombay Gazette.)

The report of the Registrar of Joint-stock Companies is a document of sufficient public importance to be printed by Government, and it is scarcely a compliance with the Resolution of Government that "copies should be placed on the Editor's Tables" to send a notification to the newspaper offices that the report, which is in manuscript, can be seen at the Secretariat. The past year was not a favourable one for the company promoter in this Presidency. The mill industry, which takes the lead in joint-stock enterprise, was depressed; several mills were still in the hands of the contractor, and enterprise was for the time being checked. It is not surprising, therefore, to find that the receipts in fees on the formation of new companies were less than half those in the preceding year. Nevertheless, seven mill and press companies were registered in Bombay, Poona, Khandeish, and elsewhere, and six other companies were registered. The total number, nevertheless, at the end of the year 1889-90 was five short of the 224 on the register in the previous year. Of these 132 were mill and press companies, twenty-four trading companies, thirteen banking and loan companies, twenty-three trading companies, and six ice companies. The winding up of a co-operative stores company reminds us that the co-operative principle is not so successfully applied out of England as it is at home. In the Australian Colonies, despite the energy and the saving habits of the people, it has never taken root, and the same may be said of Canada and the United States. To one table in the report—that which records increases of capital by special resolution—attention may be directed as affording proof that something was done during the year to put Bombay mill enterprises upon a sounder basis. Four first-class mills increased their capital last year, and to the extent to which they have been able to issue additional shares they have relieved themselves of the necessity of working upon borrowed money—a relief, the advantage of which they will experience when money is again at twelve per cent. The return, however, does not show how much of the additional capital has been paid up, an omission which might with advantage be supplied in future reports.

POLICE SALARIES AND THE LABOUR MARKET.

(Pioneer.)

Police reform, it would seem, is in the opinion of most persons a question of money. The police are alleged to be underpaid, from the august head of the force down to the latest joined constable. Considering the smallness of their pay and the narrowness of the career open to them they do, it is said, quite as good work as can be looked for. If it falls short of modern requirements the administration itself is to blame. Let full wages be paid all round, let the policeman's lot be made a happy one, and we shall behold an intelligent, honest, and contented force which will henceforth ask for nothing save to do its duty well. The bill drawn on the public purse by the advocates of "market rates" and "first-class articles" must be admitted to be somewhat large. From £50,000 to £100,000 a-year for these Provinces alone appears to be about the smallest douceur that will put the police right, give them the intelligence, the honesty and contentment that are reported at present to be conspicuously absent, and infuse into the force the quickening leaven of a few model civilians beguiled from dreams of empire by the solid advantages of thief-catching. And even this sum, large as it is for a province in which the propertied classes contribute barely £100,000 sterling as annual income-tax, is by the more eager advocates for reform spurned as wholly inadequate. The champions of this spirited policy are careful not to shackle their plans by pecuniary limits fixed beforehand, but they take refuge in the specious generality that the Government has plenty of money, and can easily afford the expense if it likes.

THE MADRAS SEPOY.

(Madras Mail.)

"The sepoy, whether in Bengal, Madras, or Bombay, is just what his British officers make of him," wrote Sir Neville Chamberlain; and the British officers of one Presidency are in no way superior to those of another. All that is required is that they should be kept as long as possible amongst men whom they know; and that these men should get their fair proportion of active service. The Madras Army is peculiarly adapted for the practical realisation of these principles, most of them already sanctioned by the approval of Government; and it has other very considerable advantages which strengthen its appeal for fair treatment in the eyes of all impartial men. The loyalty of the Madras Army has ever been conspicuous; throughout its long and glorious history it has never been dishonoured by a thought of other than the most striking fidelity, often through starvation and peril, to the British Government. It has emulated that bright example, the celebrated Commandant Syed Ebrahim, who, refusing all the brilliant offers of the Sultans of Mysore, into whose clutches he had unhappily fallen, died in prison after years of suffering and ill-treatment rather than be unfaithful to the masters whom he had chosen. These sentiments of devotion have been handed down from father to son, until it may almost be said that the Madras sepoy imbibes unquestioning fidelity to the British Government with his mother's milk. There is not throughout Her Majesty's Dominions a more loyal and single-hearted man than he; his forefathers have bled under British colours, and remained true to them under every degree of want and temptation, and he himself is prepared unhesitatingly to do the same should necessity unfortunately demand it. The harshly-treated Army to which he belongs is exactly what it pretends to be; it is the Madras Army, recruited exclusively from within the limits of the Presidency, and composed entirely of the races of Southern India. Those races are themselves hardy, thrifty, and temperate; intensely loyal to the British Power, and without sympathy for, if antagonistic to, the peoples of the rest of the Peninsula. In the wars of the latter years of the last century the same characteristics distinguished them, and the plan, which had been attempted, of brigading Bengal and Coast Sepoys together had to be abandoned. So it still is in the present day. Cantoned alongside the sepoy of another Presidency, the Madrassi rarely cultivates his friendship; he is glad to remain on terms of distant acquaintance with him during peace, or to fight alongside of him under British colours in war. But in his heart of hearts, dearer far to him than either would be the call to fight again his erstwhile comrades, those comrades who have been petted and made much of while his great services have been forgotten, and contumely and neglect have been his share. The feeling may be shocking from a sentimental point of view, but it is natural from an ordinary one; and it is the direct outcome of the disgraceful manner in which the Madras sepoy has been treated by the Supreme Government. At any rate, there it is, far stronger now than when it was last called into play in 1857. It separates in feeling the Army of Madras from all other portions of Her Majesty's Native troops. That Army would scorn, even under any circumstances, to be other than loyal; it has accepted ill-treatment and seen favouritism extended to others without a murmur; but it would not be human if it did not remember its humiliations and their cause.

Again, the Madras sepoy is unhampered by caste; he will go anywhere and do anything without dread of the social considerations which render some Indian races unfitted for campaigning. He has over and over again crossed the seas to serve his British masters, and is ready to do so once more at any moment. Indeed, he is constantly going over the water in the course of ordinary reliefs to the Andaman Islands or Burma. His powers of endurance are at least not inferior to those of other Native soldiers; he has been seen at Yitakri, and along the Khyber line during the last Afghan War, supporting the extremities of heat and cold better than the comrades who, bred and born in the vicinity of those latitudes, might have been expected to have been less affected by their climatic conditions. And the same thing happened a few years later in Burma. Toiling incessantly through fever-laden jungles his constitution became in time saturated with malaria, but he certainly suffered not a whit more if he did not actually cumber the hospitals less than his comrades from Bengal or Bombay. Whilst yielding to many amongst them in the matter of inches, he is at least their equal in constitutional strength and power. As the grandfather of the present Governor of Bombay reported of the Madras sepoy in 1798 so it may still be said of them, that "although the men obtained in the more southern countries are much inferior to northern recruits in caste, size, and appearance, they are nevertheless hardy and thrifty, and being less subject to local attachments, and little encumbered with religious habits or prejudices to interfere with the performance of their duty, are found to stand the pressure of military hardships with much fortitude, and to manifest at all times a firm adherence to the service." The only matter in which change has been since perceptible is that many sepoy who now join the ranks in the Infantry and Sappers are Christians. The proportion of them in 1885 was nearly 7 and 18 per cent. respectively in those services, and during the past five years their numbers have probably increased. The Government of India is, of course, bound to observe strict religious impartiality amongst the numerous peoples over whom it rules, and it can take no official notice of the creeds of its sepoy so long as they do their duty to the best of their lights. But it cannot be displeasing to a professedly Christian Power to number amongst its soldiers many of the same faith as itself; and circumstances are easily conceivable under which the fact might be of extreme value. Wherever the Queen's Own Sappers and Miners of Madras have gone they have, by universal concurrence, distinguished themselves, and the Native Christians who fill a fifth of their ranks have taken their share in maintaining the high name deservedly gained by their famous corps.

It has often been thought the fashionable thing in certain circles to pooch-pooch the Madras Army, and that much ill-used force has practically exemplified the proverb of "Give a dog a bad name and hang him." Madras troops have been liberally befouled with epithets which they have done nothing to deserve; the difficulties against which they have had to contend, and which have been made for them by Government have been studiously ignored, and the conviction is expressed that nothing good, in a military sense, can come out of the Southern Presidency. It has been conveniently forgotten that for thirty years the army of that Presidency has been exposed to treatment which would have knocked all spirit out of any other service less enthusiastic, less loyal, than itself. For over half-a-century it has struggled with constant reductions, hopelessly blocked promotions, and an incessant shifting of officers from corps to corps; has been denied its fair share of service, and kept rigidly in the background. Is it possible that under such circumstances, when all emergency arises, and its services are suddenly called for, it can be expected to be in such an efficient condition as it should and would have been had it received the fair treatment at the hands of Government of India which was its due? Any portion of the human frame becomes impaired with disuse; and it is exactly the same with the military machine. The man who is out of practice at cricket or at football cannot all at once regain his proficiency at those games any more than can an army which has been studiously prevented from seeing fighting evince its old sang froid until it has got its hand in again, and been under fire a few times. But practice will restore to both their full efficiency. To debar the Madras sepoy from his fair share of active service and then to criticise him adversely is grossly unfair. Let him have the same opportunities as are thrown in the way of the favoured frontier recruits, be treated impartially by Government, and be paid with reasonable liberality, and then by all means judge him upon his merits. It is because any process of the kind appears increasingly improbable that a vigorous protest has been deemed necessary. Government has practically shut Afghanistan as a training ground to the Madras sepoy; it is now closing Burma as well. Where, then, is he to get that fair share of active service without which he must ever remain handicapped? The truth is, that in disbanding three more regiments of Madras Infantry and replacing them by Punjabi policemen, for service on the Burmese Frontier, the Government committed a grave injustice to the Madras Army. If that army is not as efficient as the Government would like to see it, it has nobody to thank but itself; nor can the service improve materially so long as it is excluded from receiving the style of lesson which, until recently, it could have learnt upon the confines of the newest province added so largely by its own exertions to the Empire.

BENGAL

(August 12.)

MR. GASPER, who was for some years one of the most prominent figures of the Calcutta High Court Bar, and also of the Calcutta Race Course, as owner of some of the best horses that ran in the chief races, has just died on boardship near Aden.

ATTENTION is likely to be directed in earnest ere long to the question of river pollution. The Calcutta Health Society is addressing the Government on the subject, and it is probable that there will be a stir in Native circles when it is realised to what a sad end Gunga-Mai is tending. According to an old saw, the Ganges is to lose sanctity about the year 1895, when the Nerbudda is to be elevated into the first place in the estimation of the Hindus. As matters are going, writes the Englishman, this prophecy stands in a fair way of fulfilment, although in a fashion that could hardly have been foreseen.

DR. E. W. CHAMBERS, coroner of Calcutta, has held an inquiry, at the instance of Dr. Joubert, of the Eden Hospital, touching the death of a Hindoo widow, named Chamatkari, a resident of Connaghur, which was occasioned under most revolting circumstances. Dr. Joubert stated in his evidence that the woman was admitted into the Eden Hospital on the 27th ultimo, perfectly unconscious, and expired on the 31st inst., never regaining consciousness. The woman was suffering from fever and kidney affections, in addition to certain abdominal complaints of a serious character. She was throughout in a moribund condition, and made a "marvellous fight over her maladies." The report made at the hospital by the individual who brought the woman was to the effect that nine days previous to her confinement she was taken to the burning ghat, where she was detained for nine days after her confinement in the expectation of her death, and it was only after a neighbour had threatened Womesh Ghose, her paramour, with violence, that the unfortunate woman was sent back to Calcutta. Dr. Joubert added that he reported the matter to the Commissioner of Police, it being a horrible case of neglect, which demanded inquiry. He also said that a woman who was suffering with kidney affections, on exposure, would have the malady very much aggravated. To the jury Dr. Joubert said that in this case the deceased died from blood poisoning caused by absolute neglect after her confinement. Mrs. Mary Farley, a midwife, said she admitted the deceased into the Eden Hospital in a very critical condition, and discovered that large maggots, about half an inch long, were crawling out of her. The inquiry at this stage was adjourned.

A GOVERNMENT resolution on the working of the medical institutions in Calcutta during last year states that whatever form of treatment was adopted in cholera cases about half the patients died, and the Lieutenant-Governor regrets to learn that the experiments made with the new remedy, salol, which has been tried with success by Dr. Nicholson in Patna, were not followed by encouraging results. Cases of enteric fever, it is noted, continue rare in Calcutta, and remittent fever appears to be on the decrease. Dr. Hilson, Inspector-General, gives high praise to the ladies of the Clewer Sisterhood in speaking of the indefatigable services rendered by them in the supervision of nurses and in tending the sick. Twelve European and Eurasian nurses passed their examination, two of them with great credit.

THERE is a rumour in Calcutta that the leper asylum is to be removed to the Chinsura military barracks, which are now lying vacant; but the residents of Chinsura are drawing up memorials, protesting that the barracks are in the midst of the European quarter, in proximity to the schools and the college, and in the heart of a populous town, and that it is not safe for the residents to have a leper asylum there.

MADRAS. (August 13.)

THE GOVERNOR is recovering satisfactorily from the effects of his accident in the hunting field.

A SCHEME for the reorganisation of the Agricultural Department in Madras has, it is stated, recently been set up by the Provincial Government, and is now under consideration by the Government of India.

FUEL is said to be becoming scarce on the Kolar Gold Fields, and supplies have now to be brought all the way from North Arcot and Vellore. Casuarina billets now fetch Rs. 12 per ton. This is a serious look-out for the industry.

It is practically settled that the Commissary-General's office is to be moved from Madras to Bangalore. The Madras Government, say the Madras Mail, is not directly responsible for this desertion of the capital by the Commissariat Officer of the Presidency, for the Department is now an Imperial one. Nevertheless, if it had used its influence, as it ought to have done, the Commissary-General in Chief would never have been able to countenance the proposal. We are warm advocates of decentralisation, but not when it means the location of the several Military Offices at three widely separated places.

THE Madras Government entirely concurs in the views of Colonel C. A. Porteous, lately Inspector-General of Jails, as to the necessity of the abolition of the use of fetters on criminals, a practice which that officer has described as a "relic of barbarous times which ought to have been dispensed with long ago," and one which leads to the wardens in charge of criminals being less alert. Criminal prisoners for the future will, therefore, save in very exceptional cases, wear iron ankle rings only, and this is now being effected in the jails throughout this Presidency. A circular making alterations in the sections of the Jail Code referring to this matter has accordingly just been issued by the Inspector-General of Jails.

FURTHER information concerning the murder near Piler discloses that the cashier cashed a large cheque, and was returning from the Treasury in a country cart, when he was set upon and severely beaten, as also his lascar and the driver of the cart. The cashier shortly after died. The Lascar cannot recognise the assailants, and no arrests have yet been made.

THE condition of the funds of the Victoria Gosha Hospital as reported on by the honorary secretary is very unsatisfactory. The Government have not guaranteed any annual grant, though they have given Rs. 4,000 yearly since the foundation of the institution. An earnest appeal for subscriptions is now being made.

THE Nizam's Government seems to favour the appointment of Englishmen to the highest posts in its services. Mr. C. Harold, the present Auditor of the Nizam's State Railway, is spoken of as the next Deputy Accountant-General; and it is said that the Nizam's Government has asked for the services of a British officer as Postmaster-General, a position that is about to be vacant by the retirement of the present incumbent in view to the amalgamation of the local Postal Department with the British Post-office.

BOMBAY. (August 15.)

THE GOVERNOR IN COUNCIL has invested the court of the First Class Subordinate Judge of Ahmedabad with the function of a District Court.

THE VENERABLE ARCHDEACON C. F. H. JOHNSTONE, M.A., has been permitted by the Secretary of State for India to retire from the service, with effect from Oct. 4th, 1890.

TUNNEL No. 4, one of the three lengthy tunnels on the Tansa Water Works, is completed. The length of the tunnel is half-a-mile, and it was worked by a Root's patent tubular machine, producing condensed air.

MR. CROUDAC's report on the Rajputana Desert Railway is likely to be shortly available. His alignment is through Jey-sulmir, passing Bikanir. The line is calculated at 550 miles in length. The probable cost is over one lakh of rupees per mile.

THE Nassick Municipality has sanctioned Rs. 50,000 for the construction of the bridge over the Godavari to join Pan-chavati with Nassick. Rao Bahadur Kashinath Mahadeo Thatte, Deputy Collector, has undertaken to collect the remaining sum of Rs. 80,000 required for the project by appealing to Hindoo Princes, Chiefs, Jahagirdars, merchants, and others throughout India.

It is quite settled, says the Civil and Military Gazette, that troopships will go to Kurrachee this season, and that there will be a large rest camp at Landi, about twelve miles out of Kurrachee. Everyone in Kurrachee is delighted at the prospect, and are looking forward to the arrival of the camp staff as a sign that Government have not changed their minds. There is no doubt that 1,200 men and numbers of officers passing through will wake up the station very much; and the shopkeepers ought to have a good time of it, supplying the wants of the new arrivals.

THE following is a summary of the Bombay Presidency Season reports for the past week:—Rain throughout the Presidency proper and in parts of Kurrachee and Hyderabad. More wanted for rice in parts of Gujarat, and for crops generally in parts of Khandesh, Nasik, Poona, Ahmednugger, Sholapur, Satara, Bijapur, Dharwar, and Kattywar. Prospects are generally favourable, though young crops are withering for want of rain in parts of Nasik, Poona, Ahmednugger, Sholapur, Bijapur, and damaged by rats in two talukas of Kurrachee, and by locusts or other insects in parts of Hyderabad and Upper Sind Frontier.

THE following notification is published in the Bombay Government Gazette:—It has been decided to take the forthcoming Census on Feb. 26th, 1891. His Excellency the Right Honourable the Governor in Council is accordingly pleased to direct that all public offices be closed on the 25th, 26th and 27th Feb., 1891, in order that the services of the persons employed in them may be available for Census operations, heads of offices making such arrangements as may be required for the disposal of emergent public business. It should be distinctly understood that all the clerks allowed to be absent from their offices are to be for those three days exclusively employed in aiding the Census operations.

A TELEGRAM was received in Bombay on Wednesday stating that Mr. George Watson, who was for some time connected with the Advocate of India, the Poona Observer and the Bombay Gazette in the capacity of a reporter, and who recently went to Madras to assume the chief reportership of the Madras Mail, shot himself at Madras on Tuesday night. Mr. Watson was well known and liked amongst Bombay journalists, who naturally deplore his untimely death. The cause of the sad occurrence is attributed to "temporary insanity." The deceased, it may be added, was a married man, and leaves a widow and one child.

"If," said an ancient conqueror of the world, "if I were not Alexander I would be Diogenes." In a similar spirit we opine that if a man cannot nowadays be a crack criminal lawyer it would be well to be an expert drawer of teeth. For two or three visits paid to his Highness the Nizam during the past month, Mr. Bromley, of the firm of Walton and Bromley, dentists, Bombay, has received the handsome douceur of 8,000 Government rupees. Truly his Highness pays en prince!

NORTH-WEST PROVINCES AND PUNJAB.

(August 13.)

THE floods at Aligurh have assumed a serious aspect. The water has risen higher than the highest flood level of 1884, when terrible floods had occurred.

A PROPOSAL recently made by the purchasers of the Eger-ton Woollen Mills, in the Punjab, to re-form them into a company with a capital of five lakhs, has, it is said, fallen through for want of sufficient support. The purchasing syndicate gained possession of the mills for four lakhs, and the property was supposed to be worth over fifteen.

FURTHER details received by the Allahabad paper show that the damage done to the permanent way by the floods between Cawnpore and Lucknow has been even more serious than was at first supposed. There are six breaches in about three-quarters of a mile of line, and it will be fully twelve days before communication will be sufficiently restored to allow trains to pass over. On the other hand, every possible effort has been made by the officials of the railway mail service to prevent delay in the transmission of mails. It seems that the Calcutta mails for Lucknow were from the first sent via Moghal Serai, and a similar course would have been adopted in the case of those from Bombay and Allahabad, had it not been found possible to establish a boat service. All mails which arrived at Cawnpore up to Tuesday last were sent on to their destination. On the following day the flood was at its highest, but by Thursday morning communication by boat was established, and this has since been maintained, two trips being made daily to Cawnpore. It will thus be seen that, thanks to the energy of the railway and mail staff, little inconvenience has been caused, though the difficulties to be overcome were exceptionally great. The same officials deserve the greatest credit for their exertions in saving many of the unfortunate villagers who had been caught by the flood, and who, but for the timely succour afforded, must either have starved or been drowned. Over 100 people have been rescued from trees, many of them having been in this predicament for three or four days. As it is, we are glad to say that, so far as present reports go, no lives have been lost, though the suffering brought about by the floods has been very great.

AFGHANISTAN.

(August 10.)

DISTURBANCES in the Firuzkoti country, east of Herat, have been completely suppressed, with heavy loss to the malcontents. At Charsaddan the tribesmen resisted the Afghan troops unsuccessfully, and a smart little fight occurred at Chakcharan near Daulat Yar, in which the Firuzkohis retired to the hills, leaving their women and old men to fall into the hands of their enemies.

THE headmen whose capture was reported some days ago are still prisoners at Herat.

MAHOMED SARWAR KHAN, whom the Ameer of Cabul has appointed to the important post of Governor of Afghan-Turkistan, has been Abdur Rahman's Shahgassi, or Master of the Ceremonies, for the past eight years. He is said to have made no enemies during that period, which at any rate speaks well for his tact. He is a Barakzai, and his father, Ataulla Khan, and his uncle filled the post of Shahgassi under Dost Mahomed and Sher Ali. Sarwar Khan's brother, Akbar Khan, is one of the refugees with Sardar Ayub Khan, so that the appointment is in a manner a remarkable one, considering the Ameer's known antipathy to the families of men who have followed Ayub's fortunes.

ON his arrival at Cabul, the Ameer seems to have been received with much rejoicing on the part of the inhabitants. Immediately he entered the city, a deputation from the military forces presented his Highness with a sum of Rs. 18,000; a second deputation from the leading citizens with Rs. 30,000; and a third body, representing the Khans of the Sowars or levied forces, with Rs. 18,000. These sums were all given with the ostensible purpose of being devoted to charitable objects. One of his Highness's first acts on returning was to dismiss the Revenue Officer in charge of the Southern Kandahar district from his post. On his way back, the Ameer had brought before him several of the Sheik Ali Hazaras, who lately rebelled. But after presenting their chief man with a dress of honour, his Highness bade the prisoners depart and in future to persuade their fellow-tribesmen to respect their allegiance. The journey from Mazar-i-Sheriff appears to have been accomplished without a hitch.

MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

THE following are supplementary details for the forthcoming trooping season:—The Malabar, leaving Bombay on the 6th November, takes the Connaught Rangers to Aden, and the Leicestershire from Aden to England; the Euphrates, leaving on the 20th November, takes home the Border Regiment; and the Crocodile, leaving on the 2nd January, takes the King's Own Scottish Borderers.

IT is now practically settled that the Madras Commissary-General's office is to be removed from Madras to Bangalore.

PRIVATE NICHOLLS, of the Yorkshire Regiment, who was charged with having shot his wife at Bangalore, in July last, has been executed.

THE transfer of the Southern Mahratta Railway Volunteer Corps from the Bombay to the Madras command has been sanctioned by the Government of India.

DURING the Viceroy's stay in Patiala in October he will see a parade of the war service troops of the Phulkian States, which will be brigaded together at Patiala for the purpose.

THERE is a likelihood of action being taken at Army Headquarters to put all officers on the same footing as regards privilege leave out of India by granting subsidiary leave, in each case sufficient for reaching the port of embarkation.

IN order to assimilate the practice of the Indian Medical Service as regards the dates of Surgeons' commissions to that of the British Service, it has been ruled by the Government of India, with the sanction of Her Majesty's Secretary of State, that officers hereafter entering the Indian Medical Service will reckon service for pension, as well as for promotion, continuously from the date of passing out of the medical school at Netley, the time spent there being no longer allowed to count as service for pension or promotion.

DR. DONNELL's appointment as Surgeon-General by the Madras Government and its cancellation by the Government of India raised the following questions:—Does Clause 90, India Army Circular, refer at all to the appointment of Surgeon-General? is it not applicable alone to first appointment to an administrative grade? and would not the appointment of Deputy Surgeon-General to Surgeon-General be merely advancement and not appointment to an administrative grade? Doubts existing regarding these questions, the Local Government applied to the Government of India for an authoritative ruling, and the latter thereupon ruled that the India Army Circular referred to is applicable to administrative grades in the Indian Medical Service, which include Surgeons-General and Deputy Surgeons-General; and that an officer is not disqualified for promotion to an administrative grade by age unless he is within six months of completing the age limit at which he must retire.

SOME important changes have just been made in respect to the grant of free passages to military officers transferred from one appointment to another. An officer under the new rules will get a free passage for himself and a free conveyance for the regulation number of servants and horses and a fixed quantity of baggage on the following occasions—provided always that the transfer is made in the interests of the public service, and not at an officer's own request or in consequence of misconduct:—When proceeding to join a staff appointment either for the first time or on the expiration of a tour of service in another appointment; on transfer to a more lucrative appointment or with a view to succeeding to one about to be vacant; on proceeding to join a permanent appointment with inferior allowances from an acting appointment with a superior salary; on rejoining his regiment or station from staff employ, whether permanent or temporary; when detained on duty on his way to join an appointment; and, lastly, when moving in consequence of departmental promotion. No changes are made in the rules regarding the grant of free passage to an officer's family.

THE SHOOTING OF THE ARMY.

IN a General Order promulgating the results of the annual course of musketry for the past season executed by the British and Native armies of the three Presidencies, including the

"His Excellency has again to comment favourably upon the improved results obtained by British troops, and is much pleased to observe the high standard of musketry efficiency attained by the majority of regiments. None are classed as 'bad,' and very few are below the standard 'good.' Fire discipline and control have improved in a corresponding ratio, and Sir Frederick Roberts feels sure that the results of the current season will show a still further advance in these important branches of musketry training.

"This being the first year of the new Native musketry course no comparison can be made with the shooting of previous seasons. The results, however, are highly satisfactory. The Commander-in-Chief is very much gratified to observe the spirit with which all ranks of the Native army entered into the details and objects of the new course, as also the care and attention bestowed upon musketry training generally, to which in a primary degree the excellent results are attributable. The radical changes which it introduced have been fully justified. Fire discipline and control have improved in a marked degree, and although much still remains to be done in order to produce really good results in collective firing, his Excellency is pleased to record his great satisfaction with the highly increased proficiency generally evinced.

"Owing to serious irregularities which were discovered in the target practices executed by the 2nd Battalion Devonshire Regiment, 2nd Battalion Yorkshire Light Infantry, and the 16th (the Lucknow Regiment) Bengal Infantry, these corps have been debarred from participating in any musketry rewards, and have been excluded from the figure of merit list."

The following heads the lists:—British Cavalry, the 8th Hussars; British Infantry, 1st Battalion Connaught Rangers; Native Cavalry exercised with the Martini-Henry carbine, the 3rd Bengal Cavalry; with the Snider carbine, the Erinpura Irregular Cavalry; Native Infantry exercised with the Martini-Henry rifle, the 29th Punjab Infantry; with the Snider rifle, the 7th Bengal Infantry; Sappers exercised with the Martini-Henry rifle, the Madras Sappers; with the Snider carbine, the Bombay Sappers.

THE COORG COMMISSIONERSHIP.

The Commissionership of Coorg seems to be rather a coveted appointment, and likely to be eagerly sought for between the present time and the end of the current year, by reason of Colonel Tredway Clarke's retirement from the service, which will take place about December or January next. Colonel Clarke has the privilege of remaining on till the 26th of January, which date will complete the six months' extension period granted him by the Secretary of State for India. We learn there are several applicants already for the appointment, and probably before the end of the year the number will increase, as Madras and Bombay civilians will be up and doing in the matter; and they may stand the best of chances, owing to their superior training and experience in both Judicial and Revenue Work. All this will, of course, meet with the serious consideration of the Supreme Government before appointing a successor to Colonel Tredway Clarke. The duties of the commissioner are varied, and at all times most onerous; his work as District and Sessions Judge demands much time and attention, that alone is sufficiently severe; but when a multiplicity of other heavy duties are heaped upon that, relative to the several departments under his control, then it can perhaps be better imagined than expressed how actually slavish must be the work on the whole. Colonel Clarke possesses much ability; his experience is great, and we think that few indeed, even in the ranks of the Covenanted Civil Service, can cope with him in assiduity. This special qualification his successor in office must possess, otherwise he may make up his mind to be constantly distracted with all sorts of work falling into arrears. Those gentlemen who are so anxious to succeed Colonel Clarke should know what they may have to expect, if they are appointed, and they must understand that the appointment is by no means a sinecure. The Commissioner has splendid quarters in the fort at Mercara, rent free. The rental of such premises might fairly be estimated at not less than Rs. 150 per mensem, and it is a great advantage to enjoy such without paying a pie for same. Then, again, the climate of Mercara is really good, more or less enjoyable all through the year, and during the rainy season is simply delightful and healthy. The salary allowed specially to Colonel Clarke is Rs. 1,500 per mensem, but, to the best of our knowledge, his successor will not be allowed more than Rs. 1,200 per mensem, with quarters free, plus first-class travelling allowance when on circuit duty.

We learn that the present applicants for the appointment are Mr. MacCartie and Mr. Charles Weir, both of the Madras Covenanted Civil Service—the former gentleman is now Collector of the Nilgiris, and the latter out of employment on furlough in England, but will return to India before Colonel Clarke retires. The other gentlemen are Mr. Brooke-Leggatt, the present district magistrate of Coorg, and Mr. Meiklejohn, barrister-at-law, the Deputy Commissioner and District Magistrate of Mysore. We believe there are others, but we do not know their names. We wish to remark, in conclusion, that Colonel Hill and Colonel Magrath are both entitled to the appointment of Coorg Commissioner, and their rights cannot, with any justice, be overlooked or set aside by the Supreme Government.—Bangalore Spectator.

NATIVE MEDICINES.

The following is a translation from the Satyalokaya:—

The medical science is universally acknowledged to be one of the most important of the sciences studied by man. In former times this science wielded great influence in Ceylon, as appears from history. But in proportion as English practice extended, the Sinhalese practice went down. Nevertheless, there are found here and there skilful Native doctors. But owing to the badness of the system according to which the medicines are administered, Sinhalese practice is in ill repute with Englishmen. When a case of sickness is stated before a Native doctor he writes down a prescription and goes away. The greater part of these medicines are bought from medical shops or boutiques. The boutique keepers, who do not know the difference of the various medicines, give anything they like. Often, the buyer himself being ignorant of the nature of the medicine buys relying on the word of the vender. What mischief may not result from decoctions and mixtures prepared in this manner? Some medicines lose their medicinal properties in three, six, or twelve months. It is a wonder if preparations made from these old medicines happen to do any good. In boutiques where medicines are being vended, the same balance being used to weigh all kinds of medicine, often ingredients lose their strength or healing powers by being mixed with each other, and a prescribed medicine instead of doing the good expected becomes dangerous. In boutiques where medicine is being sold by both the Sinhalese and the Moormen, however old the ingredients may be, the vendors do not think of the good of others—only how they can get money. When a medicine is asked for, the vendor being in conversation, or selling something else at the same time, gives whatever his hands lay hold of. Some boutique keepers are so confused as to wrap up and give saltpetre when rock salt is wanted. Further, when medicinal herbs are bought from people from the interior the latter manage to get them sold mixed with other herbs, &c., resembling them. The boutique keepers, being ignorant of this, sell the same to others.

The taking of medicines sold in this fashion is helpful in killing life. Moreover, the manner in which medicines are kept in the boutiques is not at all good. By these being placed in open vessels the dirt from lizards, rats, and such-like, gets mixed with the medicines, and thus spoil them. They also easily lose their properties by exposure. Owing to various causes like these, Sinhalese practice has deteriorated very much. If, owing to the ignorance or carelessness of the man who finds the medicines, or of the boutique-keeper, the decoction is ill prepared and the patient gets bad, the fault of the doctor alone is spoken of. Poisons and poisonous substances being sold in boutiques without any restriction, it may not be impossible for a man who is bent on doing mischief to get the boutique-keeper to his secret aid. English medicine vendors give notice to the Government when they want to sell such substance, and vend it very carefully, holding themselves responsible for the proper conduct of their business. Whereas the Native vendor has no anxiety whatever, knowing, as he does, that whatever medicine he may give, or whatever its result may be, nobody will ask him about it. I hope that giving publicity to these things through your columns will help many to save themselves much harm, and that this will serve as a suggestion to the Government to make it binding on all who want to sell medicine to give notice to itself before they do so.—Ceylon Independent.

SIR JOSEPH HOOKER has under preparation the sixth and last volume of that important work the "Flora of British India." Much valuable assistance has been rendered in connection therewith by Dr. King and Dr. Prain, of the Calcutta Botanical Gardens.

THE Irrawaddy River is at present in high flood, and there seems to be some apprehension in Mandalay of the city being overtaken by an inundation such as it experienced a few years ago. The protecting embankment, however, is reported to be in good order, and shows no signs of giving way.

MILITARY INDEBTEDNESS IN INDIA.

It will, we imagine, be somewhat of a surprise to many retired Anglo-Indians now at home to learn that the old complaint of the indebtedness of the junior officers of the armies in India is again being made. This was a complaint certainly in the olden days, when "John Kumpani Bahadur" ruled in the East, when officers made India their home for many years, and when little thought was given to to-morrow so long as there was plenty for to-day.

In those days borrowing from Natives or from the Agra Bank was a custom throughout the service, whether the debt was contracted with the view of expediting regimental promotion, or merely for the purpose of adding to one's personal pleasures or wants. Debt was then the incubus that lay heavy on the position and prospects of many a good and promising young officer. Some of our readers who are old enough to have any recollection of the Delhi Punch in his early and clever days may remember a striking cartoon, which represented an Indian subaltern's nightmare
 —a monster called "Debt" seated on his chest as he lay in bed in uneasy slumber. And others may remember also the strong but admirable denunciation of military extravagance which led to this debt, which Sir Charles published in his farewell address to the armies of India. Such re-proofs and warnings of pencil and pen were not then out of place; they were urgently required in order, if possible, to stay an evil which was bringing ruin and disgrace to so many young lives. We had thought that this evil had long passed away, with all the shortcomings which the enemies of the old Company attributed to its bad military organisation and imperfect discipline, and that under the new order of things, where the armies of India have been so reformed and refined, a complaint of military indebtedness could not possibly be made. It appears, however, that the possibility exists, and that, even in this unfortunate particular, history repeats itself. The Times of India says that it cannot be denied that, for one reason or the other, a great number of young officers are already more or less in the hands of Native money-lenders. This is not said with special reference to the Bombay Presidency.
 The evil, we are told, extends all over India. The process of getting into debt now seems as simple as it was in the "salad days" of some of us, "when we were green in judgment." It is all, as our contemporary says, "so delightfully simple at first." "A subaltern finds that he has a much heavier mess bill than he expected, and he owes his munshi and his servants a couple of months, and that he particularly wants a pony that is being sold a great bargain. So he sends for the Shroff and borrows a thousand rupees without security, interest from 3 to 5 per cent. per mensem, the whole to be repaid by regular instalments of Rs. 50 monthly. Of course the instalments are never paid; the interest runs on, the Shroff becomes importunate, and a fresh bond for perhaps a couple of thousand, with security this time, has to be made out. We need not go on with the story. It is a far too familiar one, and its end is misery." This is the olden tale of the improvident youngster. But the Bombay paper declares that it is not only the careless and improvident who get into the hands of the Native usurer nowadays in India. The writer states that although formerly it used to be looked upon as a settled thing that when a youngster joined the Indian Army he could from that time manage to live on his pay, but that this is no longer possible unless a youth has sufficient force of character to practise considerable self-denial. This will not be pleasing news to many parents and guardians in England, and it is difficult to understand how, if it be true, there is such an anxiety amongst the junior officers of the British regiments at home to get to India. We know that in this country a subaltern cannot live on his pay, although one of the chief reasons which was advanced in favour of the abolition of purchase was that under the new system the poor man's son could hold a commission without having to seek pecuniary aid from parent or friend. But the result has been that living in the army to-day at home is more expensive than ever, and youngsters of slender private means, or of no private means at all, jump at the chance of getting to India in order to better themselves pecuniarily. Are they jumping, to use a homely but expressive simile, from the frying pan into the fire? It would seem so, according to the Times of India. But what is the cause of this indebtedness amongst the junior officers of the army in India? Our contemporary says that the causes of it are are not so easily diagnosed, but that its increase is real. Of course, it will be easy to lay the blame upon the mess management, but the subject of mess control is one which commanding officers of regiments have to pay the greatest attention to, with a view to establish a system of economy suitable to the purse of the poorest member. Commanding officers are held responsible by the Commander-in-Chief, both in India and at home, in this matter. We greatly doubt whether the blame can be justly laid against the mess bill. The writer from whom we have quoted says, "The custom which has become so general of late years of regarding champagne as de rigueur on ordinary weekly guest nights at the mess, is one that leads to great expense, and is absurd in itself. If the simpler habits of bygone days were restored, when a man asked a friend to dinner and gave him a glass of beer or a bottle of claret, the pleasures of hospitality would be easier for young officers, and could be more generally indulged." Nobody will question the good sense of these remarks; but who makes it necessary that the youngsters must drink, or, at all events, must pay for the drinking by others of champagne on guest nights? If the rule obtains throughout India that champagne is de rigueur on those occasions, it can hardly be with the knowledge or sanction of the present Commander-in-Chief, Sir Frederick Roberts, whose attention we hope has been drawn to the statement made by the Times of India regarding the general and increasing indebtedness of the young officers under his Excellency's command.

THE European and Anglo-Indian Defence Association has submitted a memorial to the Government of India against the Income-tax. It is stated that on a careful examination of the evidence available to the Association regarding the incidence of the Income-tax, it has been forced to the conclusion that this tax is not only causing serious injustice and great irritation, while securing an altogether incommensurate return, but is also undermining the popularity of the Government. Official opinions, including those of the Board of Revenue and the Government of Bengal, are quoted in support of the Association's contention; and it prays that the tax may be abolished, and that in the only instance known in recent years in which non-official sentiment in all classes of the community, European and Indian, has been in perfect harmony with the convictions of all responsible officials who come into actual contact with the people, the voice of the country may not be disregarded in deference to any theoretical prepossessions of a department under special temptation to magnify purely financial, as distinguished from general, administrative considerations.

BROAD ARROW
AND

NAVAL AND MILITARY GAZETTE

ESTABLISHED 1833

EVERY SATURDAY. PRICE SIXPENCE.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" has acquired a reputation for early and exclusive intelligence as to Appointments and other service News, for the high character of its articles, the independent course of its staff of writers, and for its earnest support of all measures for the good of the Services. Articles on specially interesting subjects appear from week to week written for the most part by officers of rank and experience, or by men of note in literature who have made the Naval and Military affairs of the country their special study. A series of Illustrated Articles is appearing weekly on Regimental Badges and History. Illustrations with descriptions are also given of new Service Inventions.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" freely opens its correspondence columns to all grades in the Services. By this means an opportunity for interchange of opinion is afforded, such as is offered by no other Service Journal. Its ordinary weekly issue contains fully one-fourth more matter than the other Service Journals, even with their frequent "supplements."

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" circulates largely throughout India and the Colonies. It is supplied direct to the Army and Marine bureaux of the French, Russian, and other Governments, and it is read extensively by Officers of Foreign Services, especially of the German, French, and American Armies, who desire to acquire a true impression of facts and public opinion in England regarding Military affairs.

THE CALCUTTA REVIEW.

(The only Quarterly Review in India.)

ESTABLISHED 1844.

OPINIONS.

The Calcutta Review for October reached us a day or two ago, and a glance at its contents shows that the number more than sustains the reputation which this old and favourite publication is again achieving. The Review is rapidly regaining the position which it . . . there is no fear of the Indian Review, or the Asiatic Quarterly rivalling it in public favour.—Statesman, October 1886.

. . . The best service which I ever rendered in India, or, indeed, for India, was the establishment, single-handed, of the Calcutta Review, which has done far more for Indian literature than anything I have written under my own name.—J. W. KAYE, Athenaeum Club, June 23, 1872.

The Calcutta Review has given us valuable articles on the army. Some from the pen of Sir Henry Lawrence, who wrote with the spirit of prophecy of the coming storm of which he was one of the noblest victims.—Address of the C-in-C. at the U.S. Inst. of India.

. . . The Calcutta Review has not only throughout its career reflected the highest honour on its public-spirited promoters and its well-known distinguished contributors, but has done much to help forward the reconstruction of our system of governing India.—Westminster Review.

LIGHT versus DARKNESS.

"SHAKESPEARE, the Greatest Genius who has ever yet lived," taught the Divineness of Forgiveness, of Perpetual Mercy, of Constant Patience, of Endless Peace, of Perpetual Gentleness. If you can show me one who knew things better than this man, show him!! I know him not!! If he had appeared as a Divine, they would have Burned him; as a Politician, they would have Beheaded him; but God made him a Player.

"He taught that kindness is nobler than Revenge!!"—The Rev. GEORGE DAWSON, M.A.

"Earthly power doth then show likest God's
When mercy seasons justice,
And that same prayer doth teach us all to render
The Deeds of Mercy."—Shakespeare.

What higher aim can man attain, than conquest over human pain?

JEOPARDY OF LIFE, THE GREAT DANGER OF DELAY.

You can change the Trickling Stream, but not the Raging Torrent.

WHAT EVERYBODY SHOULD READ.—How important it is to have at hand some simple, effective, and palatable remedy, such as ENO'S "FRUIT SALT," to check disease at the onset!! With little trouble you can change the course of the trickling mountain stream, but not the rolling river. It will defy all your tiny efforts. I feel I cannot sufficiently impress this important information upon everybody. Let ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" be your companion; under any circumstances its use is beneficial, and never can do harm. When out of sorts, Restless, Sleepless, yet unable to say why, then your whole body is out of order, but you do not know where it may end; it is a real necessity to have a simple remedy at hand. The Pilot can so steer and direct as to bring the ship into safety, but he cannot quell the raging storm. The common idea when not feeling well is: "I will wait and see; perhaps I shall be better to-morrow;" whereas, had a supply of ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" been at hand, and use made of it at the onset, all calamitous results might have been avoided. What dashes to the earth so many hopes, breaks so many sweet alliances, blasts so many auspicious enterprises, as untimely Death?

"I used my 'FRUIT SALT' freely in my last severe attack of Fever, and I have every reason to say I believe it saved my life."—
J. C. ENO.

CAUTION.—Examine each Bottle, and see that the Capsule is marked ENO'S "FRUIT SALT." Without it you have been imposed on by a worthless imitation.

OLD BY ALL CHEMISTS. PREPARED ONLY AT

ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" WORKS, POMEROY STREET, NEW CROSS ROAD, LONDON, S.E. (BY J. ENO'S PATENT.)

NATURE RULES ALL THINGS.

In every form of weakness use Scalded Milk.

ENO'S "VEGETABLE MOTO," occasionally a desirable adjunct to ENO'S "FRUIT SALT," as a simple and Natural Laxative, Stomachic, Blood, Brain, Nerve, Bile, or Liver Tonic; or, in other words, when taken as directed, their action is as simple as a tomato, whole meal bread or porridge (with scalded milk); you cannot overstate their great value in causing a natural, slow, and gentle action of the Liver; by that means you keep the blood pure and prevent disease. In advanced Life they are everything you could wish. Read Practical Hints on Constipation, Indigestion, Liver Diseases, Impure Blood, Sleeplessness, Nervous Headache, Treatment of Gout and Rheumatism, how to Prevent Consumption, Jaundice, and other disastrous diseases by Rules for Health and Longevity, &c., in a pamphlet given with each Bottle of ENO'S "VEGETABLE MOTO." They can be used for any length of time without fear or harm.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 9, 1890.

General Intelligence.

[BY OVERLAND MAIL.]

THE Overland Mail brings us letters and advices from Bombay to the 22nd August; from Allahabad and Madras to the 20th August; and from Calcutta to the 20th August.

THE next meeting of the Legislative Council was to be on August 28th, when Select Committees were to be appointed on the Bills amending the Salt and Currency Acts.

THE Viceroy made good time on his trip to Chini. The distance from Viceregal Lodge to Narkhanda was covered under six hours, but the party got drenched to the skin between Mattiana and Narkhanda, and had to cross two nasty landslips. From Narkhanda onwards fairly good weather was experienced, and is Excellency arrived at Sangri on Saturday, August 9th, at 9 P.M. Leaving Sangri at nine o'clock on the 10th he walked the whole stage, nineteen miles, into Paklech, the roads and bridges being in good condition. The Viceroy arrived at Sarahun on the 11th, and was within one march of Chini on the 14th, the party being all well. His Excellency was expected to reach Simla on August 27th.

LORD LANSDOWNE'S tour programme is still in an unfinished state, but it is settled that the stay at Delhi will be for five days. From the Agra camp his Excellency will go to Bhurtpore, Deeg and Batesar, and he will halt a day at Benares on the way to Calcutta, where his arrival is timed for Dec. 9th.

LADY LANSDOWNE will return to India in time to join the Viceroy in camp at Delhi about the middle of November.

THE news of Sir Thomas Baker's appointment to the Quartermaster-Generalship at home reached Simla on Aug. 13th. Major-General Lord Frankfort de Montmorency, now commanding at Allahabad, will succeed to the command of the Rawalpindi District. Sir Thomas Baker will rejoin at Rawalpindi before taking over charge of the Quartermaster-Generalship in October. Lord Frankfort consequently will return to Allahabad from Simla for a short time at the expiration of his leave.

MAJOR-GENERAL W. K. ELLES is to fill the vacancy on the Bengal establishment when Sir Thomas Baker goes to the Horse Guards as Quartermaster-General.

DURING the coming cold weather General Sir G. White will probably take a small force through the Zhob country.

MAJOR BUCHANAN SCOTT'S parties for the Zhob Valley Railway Survey will rendezvous at Quetta about the middle of next month, with a view to making a beginning of the work early in October.

ONE of the first things the Amir did on his return to Kabul was to inspect Mr. Pyne's ammunition factory. He expressed himself much pleased, and ordered as rapid a manufacture of cartridges as possible. His purchasing agent in India, Moulvi Abu Bakr, has just been superseded by Sufi Gholam Rasul, who is now in Simla.

THERE has been renewed fighting across the frontier between the two claimants to the sovereignty of Dir—Omra Khan, the man in possession, and Muhammad Sharif, the ex-Khan whom he has ousted. At present the encounters have been confined to skirmishing with no very definite results; but the Pesha-wur-Dir road is now quite closed.

COLONEL J. A. TILLARD, C.B., commanding at Delhi, is transferred to Jullundur, in the place of Colonel Channer, who vacates the command of that station to take leave.

THE inquiry into the case of Mr. Rice, Deputy Commissioner of Minbu, who was recently arrested at Rangoon, was to have commenced on August 12th. The substance of the charge against him is that a considerable sum of money which was realised as a fine by a Burman Deputy Magistrate from some dacoit harbouring villages was not to be found entered in the books of the District Treasury.

THE DOWAGER MAHARANI OF BETTIAH died at Benares on the morning of August 12th. Her Highness has been ailing for some time, and feeling her end approaching came to the holy city a few weeks ago to close her days. The deceased lady was an aunt of the present Maharaja of Benares.

THERE has been a serious flood in the Bolan. The railway has been wrecked and the military road damaged. The water rose to nearly twenty feet high, and swept the valley, causing considerable loss of life.

THE first reports of excessive damage done to the Hurnai railway by the recent floods prove to have been exaggerated. News received at Simla on Monday showed that trains were running regularly with but slight delays.

THE question of a railway from Rawalpindi to Kashmir is likely to stand over for some time to come, pending further surveys of the route.

THE country east of Chittagong will be explored this cold weather with a view to determining whether a railway line to Upper Burma from there is feasible.

SPECIAL attention is about to be paid to the further examination and development of the petroleum deposits in Baluchistan and the neighbourhood. The Shirani country, particularly will, if possible, be exploited, as peculiarly pure oil is found there.

THE Viceroy's prize at the Simla Fine Arts Exhibition has been won by Colonel Tanner for a study in black and white of a river and mountain scene in Kangra. Major Hon. J. Shore wins the Commander-in-Chief's 1st and Sub-Conductor Archbold his Excellency's 2nd prize.

THE subscriptions promised towards the Homeless Loper Relief Fund amount to nearly Rs. 40,000. A sum of Rs. 20,000 at least is still required.

IN the return cricket match between the Parsees and the Poona Gymkhana, at Poona, the Parsees were victorious by two wickets and 130 runs.

SIR CHARLES ARBUTHNOT will complete his five years' tenure of office as Commander-in-Chief of the Madras Army shortly.

SIR CHARLES GOUGH is mentioned as a likely successor to Sir Charles Arbuthnot.

THE Ameer has selected Faiz Mahomed Khan Ghilzai as Shahgarsi or Master of Ceremonies, in lieu of Muhamed Sarwar Khan, appointed Governor of Turkistan.

MR. WARBURTON has filed a case for libel against the proprietor, editor, and printer of the Tribune. Mr. Warburton's aid fund amounts to over Rs. 1,700.

GREAT reductions are being effected among the East Indian Railway Staff.

THE Quetta Water Works are now near completion, so far as the cantonment supply is concerned. The civil and city supply will be ready in a month or two. The water of the Hanna stream has been caught at the head of the Hanna valley, and carried in pipes down to the mouth of the Hanna Pass, and thence to two large reservoirs at the highest point above cantonment limits. From the reservoirs pipes are laid down to most of the barracks, hospitals, and transport lines, and the main for the city has been carried to the confines of the cantonment on the city side.

NOTES.

THE Calcutta correspondent of the Times seems to have been telegraphing the news that Calcutta has been suffering from the "golden" fever, brought about by the reported discovery of gold in Chota Nagpore. Gold, it has been long known, exists in that district, but whether it will be profitable to work it is another question. And, although it is stated that seven or eight prospecting companies have started with the capital they asked for subscribed eight or nine times over, the mania may not last long, as a crash is sooner or later inevitable, according to the latest disinterested advices on the matter.

COMMENTING upon the news a London financial contemporary points out that investors are not likely to be found in any numbers here, remembering, as they do, that out of about forty Indian gold mines, with a nominal capital of over £5,000,000 sterling, only two have ever paid a dividend, and that the five millions of capital have fallen in market value by about four-fifths.

It is to be hoped, says the Bombay Gazette, that the Secretary of State will severely discourage any attempt that may be made by the Ruby Mines Company to be relieved from the obligations of their lease. Sir Lepel Griffin, the Chairman of the Company, has told the shareholders that they have a perfect right to call upon the Government to relieve them from the stipulated payment until satisfactory results can be shown. The Company may have a perfect right to ask this, but the Government would have no right to accede to the request. Messrs. Streeter and Co., the chief promoters of the undertaking, went into it with their eyes open. More than four years ago the Streeter Syndicate offered three lakhs per annum for a lease of the mines. When a local firm made the same offer, Streeter's agent at once offered four lakhs. If the terms were fair then they are fair now, and the concessionaires had ample opportunity for reconsidering the offer if there were any reason to think it excessive.

It cannot be pretended that the bargain was pressed upon the concessionaries and the company who have entered into possession of their rights. Their first offer was made in April, 1886, and though the Government of India were ready, and even anxious, to accept it at once, Lord Cross, with a judgment which does him credit, refused to ratify the provisional agreement which was made with the representative of the syndicate in India until the mines had been examined by an expert deputed by the India Office. As a matter of fact more than two years intervened between the original offer and its final acceptance.

AND the Bombay paper comes to the following conclusion, which, however, rather affects speculators than bonâ fide shareholders:—The claim is the more indefensible as it is known that, however little may have been made at the ruby mines, large gains have been made on ruby mines' shares. This ad misericordiam appeal comes strangely from a company whose ordinary shares in the early days of its career were quoted at just eight times their paid-up value, while the founders' shares of a nominal value of £1 each were sold at £350. The company which has thus revelled in premature prosperity would do better if irretrievable misfortune has come upon it to meet its obligations without repining, close its doors, and say no more about the matter.

THE Simla Municipality intends to die hard. It has replied to the petition of the ratepayers for its abolition by declaring that the statements made in the petition are "misleading, inaccurate, and opposed to fact." This is always the way of India in replying to an adverse statement, whether petition, or other. If the Municipality is not representative, the Committee say it is the fault of the ratepayers themselves, as the Government has only exercised its right of nominating members once since 1883.

The committee refute also the assertion that their members are irresponsible persons who have sought election for reasons of their own; and they express the opinion that, if the present system is abolished, and Simla be made a military cantonment, the whole policy of Municipal Government in India stands condemned. Finally, they state that, if the Lieutenant-Governor consider the indictment of the petitioners a just one, they unanimously desire to resign immediately, as they decline to perform irksome and thankless duties without the support of Government, or to represent electors who have neither had the common decency to inquire into the facts of the case, nor to call upon the Committee for a reply before submitting the petition for their abolition.

WHILE income-tax questions are to the front the Pioneer thinks that the Government might surely be led to consider the hard case of certain of their servants, whose grievances might be adjusted without making much of an inroad upon the nearly two million surplus which Sir John Gorst leads us to expect next spring. We allude to the Government officials in Upper Burma, who are obliged to deduct income-tax from their salary bills, while the population round them is not assessed at all. Looking at the income-tax in a fair and reasonable light it must be admitted that, if there are to be any differences, the Government servant has claims to exemption which the trader or professional man has not; but a state of things in which the official is taxed while the European non-official at his side goes free is so clearly preposterous that it is strange it has escaped notice. Its existence ought to convince the Defence Association, however, at any rate of the impartiality of Government.

THE Overland papers from India publish an important despatch from the Government of India to the Secretary of State on the Leprosy Question in India. This despatch states that many of the highest medical authorities in India consider leprosy only contagious in the sense that is inoculable, and inoculation plays only a subordinate part in determining the spread of the disease. The Bombay Government holds views in close accord to those of Madras, viz., that to stamp out the disease all lepers should be compulsorily removed to asylums and detained till cured or dead. Bombay would further prosecute, under the Penal Code, any leprosy person omitting to take effectual measures to segregate himself. Bengal is prepared to accept the Bill as a tentative measure till further experience has been gained. It would add a provision similar to Madras and Bombay re the exercise of trade by lepers. The despatch continues that as it appears a Commission is being sent out, as much information as possible will be obtained. As the subject is technical a Secretary will be appointed for a year, and the Medical Officers of leper establishments will be instructed to give all information in their power. The Government, while it cannot pledge itself to accept the conclusion of such a Commission as the National Leprosy Fund will send out, if three members be deputed will appoint two others here to co-operate. Finally, the despatch declares that in consequence of doubts existing as to the contagious character of leprosy it is expedient to postpone legislation for the present in the hope that the investigation proposed may provide more definite information on the causes of leprosy and the best means of prevention.

THE Times of India, writing on the day the mails left Bombay for England, August 22nd, says:—"The rise in Sterling Exchange may be represented by a straight line this week, as from Friday to Wednesday it never ceased to move upwards; and even when it did pause, it was only to gather fresh strength. Where a market has gone all one way, there is little to be said about it. Silver has risen from 51½d. to 54d. per ounce, and the utmost confidence exists as to a further rise. A penny in a week in Exchange is very fair. Of course, remitters have had things all their own way. But whatever be the ultimate result of this rise in silver, the present result is a complete stoppage in the ordinary business in Bombay. Speculation has been rampant in everything. Government sold 37 lakhs of Council remittances at from 1s. 7½d. to 1s. 8 15-16d. in the week ending Tuesday. On Wednesday one lakh only was taken at 1s. 7½d., and one lakh at the same price by an extra allotment. The rate of Exchange is, in every one's mouth, producing a restlessness in business that will be a long time before it passes away. The sooner the maximum price of Silver is reached the better; but even then there may be no stability.

LATEST INTELLIGENCE.

(Times Correspondents.)
INDIA.

CALCUTTA, SEPT. 7.

For some weeks past the wildest excitement has been prevailing in Calcutta on the subject of the Chota Nagpore gold-fields. Seven or eight mining and prospecting companies were launched, the shares of which immediately ran up to a high premium. On the day the last company started the offices of the managing agents were besieged by an excited crowd, and the capital was subscribed eight or nine times over. It is stated that such a fever of speculation has never before been known here, and all other stocks are neglected in the rush for gold shares. Signs of the excitement abating are now appearing, and the public seem beginning to recognise the fact that, although gold undoubtedly exists in Chota Nagpore, the question whether it can be worked remuneratively is yet to be answered.

Large tracks of the Nuddea and Jessore districts are still under water, owing to the bursting of the Laltahuri embankment. The divisional commissioner is concerting relief measures with the district officers.

Yesterday the Eastern Bengal Railway was breached near Bagula Station, and passengers and mails had to be ferried across a gap of nearly five miles.

Full details of the recent floods in the Bolan Pass show them to have been the heaviest yet recorded. The military road near Dozan is almost entirely obliterated. Four railway bridges have been swept away, and three others badly injured. A boulder weighing about seventy tons fell on a bridge, damaging it greatly. About seven miles of the permanent way are washed away. A small mosque on high ground was carried away completely, and thirty-five Natives who had taken shelter in it were drowned.

The Zhob expedition will rendezvous at Hindu Bagh early in October, and will probably proceed across the hills bounding the Zhob valley to the north, a quite unknown country, which it is desirable to open out.

BURMA.

RANGOON, SEPT. 6.

The Rangoon Times publishes a summary of the judgment of the Judicial Commissioner of Upper Burma in Yanyun's appeal against the sentence of death. Mr. Hodgkinson has decided that Mr. Macdonald, the subordinate magistrate at Myingyan, not only promised Yanyun's life, but promised more. He has also found that Yanyun was not excepted from the amnesty proclamation, although a large reward was offered for him. The terms of the proclamation were so vague that Yanyun might believe he would receive the amnesty, and he was entitled to the benefit of the ambiguity. As a Judge, he could not further reduce the sentence than to transportation for life, but he would send the proceedings to the Chief Commissioner with a recommendation for a further reduction.

The Rangoon Times, in a leading article, says that this judgment proves that the Viceroy's telegram to the Secretary of State, read in the House of Commons, was inaccurate and misleading in reference to the circumstances of Yanyun's surrender, and urges his release.

General Wolseley and his Staff have arrived safely at Kaleymyo from Fort White, and have proceeded to the Upper Chindwin.

THE Army, Navy and Civil Service Co-operative Society of India (Limited) have rented the seven shops and the whole of the first floor of the Sirdar's Mansions facing the Apollo Bunder Road, which premises will be opened as the Bombay establishment of the company as soon as the necessary alterations have been made. The present tenants of the shops and residences taken over by the company have been given notice to vacate by October 1.

ANGLO-INDIAN PRESS.

THE NATIONAL CONGRESS.

(Indian Spectator.)

The first campaign, in England, of the Indian National Congress has come to a close, and the gentlemen who were deputed by the Congress party to plead its cause before the British electors have returned to India, apparently well satisfied with their work. They think, for that is what they have said at the meetings addressed by them on their return, that they have been able to excite an unusual amount of interest in the Congress programme in the minds of British electors and politicians, and that, judging from the enthusiastic welcome accorded to them by English audiences, the Congress cause is in a fair way to success. This ought to gratify the Congress party, though it may not be amiss to note that every time delegates were sent to England they have returned to tell us the same story that they were able to arouse interest in Indian affairs and create sympathy for India. Mr. Surendra Nath Banerjee wants Rs. 50,000 a year to enable him and coadjutors to talk, as he himself put it, before English electors. It should not be difficult for the Congress to collect this amount and spend it annually on the mission of talk which Mr. Banerjee has in view. But we may be allowed to remark that it seems to us something like putting the cart before the horse to educate the British elector in England and neglect the people in India, who have yet to learn a good deal of politics, and most of whom, we fear, have vague notions, if they have any notions at all, about the Congress. The British elector is a good hand at listening to an eloquent speech from an Indian orator; but when it comes to action he is as cautious as anything. If it is desirable to buy his sympathy for Rs. 50,000 a year, how much more is it necessary to fit the would-be elector in India—the demos of this country—for the political institutions of the West which the Congress party wish to transplant into this land? The delegates just returned have been able to tell us of the sympathy they were shown and the enthusiastic reception they were accorded at the meetings they addressed in England. Of what class of people do these meetings mostly consist? Of workmen and women—the very class whose counterpart in India is steeped in ignorance and superstition, and does not yet know what a public meeting means. What is the Congress going to do for this class of people by way of enlightening their minds and improving their moral and social surroundings, so as to level them up to the political rights which British electors are asked to concede to them? How many Congress delegates have been moving about the country and addressing meetings of Indian ryots and workmen, and telling them in words of burning eloquence to realise their duties to themselves and their country, and to reform their minds, manners, and customs? The main-spring of political life—a full appreciation of one's dignity as man and of one's right as a citizen—is woefully wanting in India, and the ryot and the coolie are about as ignorant of politics as a child. The education, political and social, is the first thing which is necessary; but the Congress is so eager to hasten political reform that in its eagerness it is going to educate the British elector regarding Indian affairs, for Rs. 50,000 a year, and leave the political and social education of the people of India to take care of itself. We are surely learning lessons in the art of practical politics.

STRAITS TRADE WITH INDIA.

(Straits Times.)

Recently-published official Statistical Returns of the Trade of British India with British possessions and foreign countries for the five years from 1884-5 to 1888-9 show at a glance the commercial currents under the attracting power of the neighbouring Empire. The volume of trade indicates steady expansion and bulked in 1888-9 to the amount of 66,500,000 and 97,000,000 in tens of rupees against 53,100,000 and 83,200,000 for 1884-5. The Straits Settlements make a prominent figure among the countries laid under contribution, and the subjoined figures bearing upon 1888-9 give some idea how far India adds to the commercial greatness of the Colony. Thus India drew from the Straits Settlements about ninety thousand tons of sugar, but exported to them only 370 tons. The Straits, China, and the Mauritius practically supply almost all the Indian imports of that article. Calcutta is so badly off for flour, in spite of the mills going there, that she has to import that staple from Singapore. The Straits also exported China tea to Bombay, the quantity being a little over half-a-million of pounds, but imported twenty-one thousand pounds of Indian tea. In India itself the consumption of local tea among the Natives does not amount to much, owing to their persistently viewing the leaf as medicine to be taken only in cases of illness. The Colony received in 1888-9 a little over three millions cwt. of rice from British India, but the quantity showed a decline on previous years owing to the competition of Bangkok and Saigon rice, which have practically thrust Indian grain from the Straits market. The Straits trade with India in 1888-9 totalled an aggregate volume of Rx. 9,769,000. The imports from the Colony into India rose in value from Rx. 1,709,000 in 1884-5 to Rx. 2,278,000 in 1888-9. The corresponding export figures, so far as Indian produce is concerned, stood respectively at Rx. 3,165,000, and Rx. 4,072,000. The articles imported from the Colony included horses (9 in number), coffee, fruits, and vegetables, rice (279 lbs.), grain and pulse, ale and beer, brandy, gin, rum, claret, port, sherry, provisions, spices (thirty-four million lbs.), sugar, tea, brass, copper, iron, quicksilver, tin (32,000 cwt.), hardware, machinery, chemicals, tobacco, cigars, cutch and gambier, indigo, turmeric, oils, coal (160 tons), gums and resins, raw hemp, hides and skins, unmanufactured ivory, jewellery, sticklac, til or jinjilli, raw silk, wood, piece goods, silk goods, wool, shawls, books and printed matter, coral, hides, paints and colours, and stationery. The exports from India to the Colony took in horses (783 in number), living animals, fruits and vegetables, paddy, rice, wheat, grain and pulse, rum, salt, spices (two million lbs.), sugar, tea, brass, copper, iron, tin (480 cwt.), hardware, machinery, chemicals, tobacco, cigars, aniline dyes, cutch and gambier, myrabolams, turmeric, oils, coal (7,300 tons), raw cotton, gums and resins, hides and skins, unmanufactured ivory, jewellery, raw jute, saltpetre, shells, raw silk, wool, twist yarn (1,800,000 lbs.), piece goods, flax, hemp, jute, silk goods, wool, shawls, apparel, books and printed matter, cabinet ware, coir, coral, hides, lac, and stationery. Of opium the Straits Settlements took from India in 1888-9 about 20,500 cwt. The other items do not call for detailed notice, but their enumeration speaks for itself in showing what an important figure India cuts in the Straits trade.

EXODUS ABUSES.

(Statesman.)

A further step in the plan of combining the labours of administration with the amenities of a picnic, which is the latest phase of British Government in India, or, to speak more accurately, a fresh development of the pernicious consequences of that plan, is the threatened removal of the office of the Surgeon-General of the Army Department of Madras to Ootacamund. The responsibility for the move, we are told, rests with the Government of India, though why the Commander-in-Chief, to whom the Surgeon-General is now directly subordinate, should find it more convenient to correspond with that functionary at Ootacamund than at the Presidency town is not apparent. The change has naturally caused much dissatisfaction among the subordinates of the Department, who will find their cost of living doubled, and to whom besides, the order will come as a sentence of permanent exile—but among the people of the Presidency who do not see why they should have to bear the heat and burden of the day without the encouragement derivable from the presence of their masters. We have never yet seen, and probably shall never see, a full and fair statement of the burden imposed upon India by these annual migrations of its various Governments to the Hills. We know pretty well the annual cost in the shape of travelling expenses and extra allowances. These, however, though they are the items most prominently presented to the public view, represent but a small fraction of the actual burden. A contemporary is probably well within the mark when he says that the total cost is equal not only to the income-tax, but to a good slice of the salt-tax as well. It would be instructive to have an accurate statement of the aggregate amount expended from the first on the construction and repair of buildings erected, and for rent of premises occupied, for official purposes at the various hill stations. It would probably be found that the amount would represent a good slice of the Indian National Debt. Of the loss of time in travelling to and fro, and owing to interruption of the work of the different offices; of the delays in legislation and in the consideration of important executive projects; of the wholesale demoralisation, public and private, that ensues; of the injury to the prestige of the Government and to the sympathy which should exist between it and the people; and of the hardship and expense inflicted on individuals, we shall never have any account.

THE BOMBAY EAST INDIAN ASSOCIATION.

(Times of India.)

There are few movements more worthy of sympathy and encouragement than the resolute efforts of small communities to raise themselves against depressing odds above the level of their surroundings. For such as these not only is union strength, but it is practically their sole strength. The first report of the Bombay East Indian Association is a hopeful record of much good work in this direction, which it is a pleasurable duty to note. The East Indian population, which is chiefly distributed over the suburbs of Bombay in Bandora, Mahim, and Dadur, numbers, it appears, some 60,000. Hitherto they do not seem to have possessed any representative organisation on the broad lines of social, educational, and what may inaptly be described as patriotic progress. It was not till the period of Her Majesty's Jubilee, when general enthusiasm was stimulated to co-operation, that on the 26th May, 1887, the Association began. From 54 members at starting, there is now a compact homogeneous body not far short of 800, and the numbers are confidently anticipated to go up. These naturally represent the more enlightened section of the community, whose eyes are open to the calls of progress, and to the value of organisation, so that, for this very reason, they are fairly entitled to be regarded as representative men. It is among the praiseworthy objects of the Association to press the claims of the community to such public recognition as will enable them to be placed on a level of eligibility with Eurasians for employment in certain departments of the State. The designation of East Indian does not seem to be generally understood, for all natives of this country having Portuguese names are habitually but erroneously lumped together as Goanese. As British subjects, the East Indians consider they have a birthright to appeal to Government to throw open to them certain avenues of public employment so that they may at least be admitted to a share. In spite of their slender means, they seem to be alive with beneficent activity. They have their own paper, the Bombay East Indian. They have established several schools under the auspices and help of the Association. They already possess a promising nucleus for educational endowments, mostly derived from in memoriam legacies, and there is also a Death Benefit Fund, which has already proved itself to several a veritable friend in need. Everyone who will take the trouble and read the report will not fail to be struck with the earnest, hopeful note that runs through it, facing many difficulties without flinching, and achieving a good deal with very little means. To the energetic temper of their secretary, Mr. J. L. Britto, these congratulatory results are doubtless most largely due; but the harmonious co-operation of their managing Committee, without which corporate progress anywhere is impossible, constitutes a hopeful omen for the future of the Association.

HINDOO MARRIAGE CUSTOMS AND THE AGE OF CONSENT.

The Indian Mirror is strongly in favour of reform. It writes:—It is very seldom that we are able to agree with the opinions of the Englishman on any given subject. It therefore affords us peculiar pleasure to subscribe largely to the views of our contemporary. If there is to be a representation to the Government, asking to raise the age of consent by legislation from ten to twelve, as suggested by the Englishman, we will gladly join the representation. Such a representation would be quite opportune, and though we must continue to regard Phulmoney's death as the accident of an accident, nothing would give us greater satisfaction than to find the Legislature making such accidents impossible in the future. The Hindoos are a conservative people, very much so in religious and social matters. But true conservatism never meant degradation, and was at no period in the world's history inconsistent with the ideas of real progress. True conservatism assimilates to and into itself all that it finds good, and holds fast to that good to the end of time. But when the bad has crept in with the good true conservatism is pledged to eject the uninvited guest. If, then, evil customs have crept into Hindoo conservative society, crept into it how and when it is impossible to tell, Hindoo society is bound to evict those vile tenants who have defied the fair fabric. Hindoo society is not bound to retain these evil customs, or even to tolerate them for a moment. This consummation of marriage with a child-wife, the evil of which has not (now?) proved to be so glaring, and which has been ruled to be altogether indefensible, is doubtless a vicious and monstrous custom, and it even may be found to be true that we have been, as the Englishman suggests, too long overlooking a sphere of suffering and degradation. If, then, an attempt be made now to root this evil out of our marriage system, conservative Hindoos ought to support the attempt with all their heart and all their strength. . . . We dare say the Government will take cautious action in the matter, and consult all sections of the Hindoo community before it proceeds to legislate, because it is a Hindoo tragedy which will have induced it to take action in the matter. If we are not mistaken, and if the Indian Press faithfully echoes the opinions of the people whom it professes to represent, then the reply will be prompt and unanimous. The various public bodies in the country—we refer to indigenous public bodies, and do not refer to European or Anglo-Indian associations—will, we feel persuaded, welcome the proposal to raise the limit of the age of consent with alacrity. So far as educated Hindoos are concerned, they can have but one opinion on the subject. They are all for progress, whether it is political progress, such as the Indian National Congress advocates so zealously, or social reform, to bring about which the Social Conference has been occupying itself for the last five years. Every adherent of the Congress and of the Social Conference will thus be found naturally to condemn the pernicious custom, and to advocate that the age of consent be raised from ten to twelve. We may go a step further, and venture to think that those of our countrymen whom we cannot strictly include in the "educated" class will be found ready to welcome the change.

SUGAR CULTIVATION IN INDIA.

Mr. Francis M. G. Gill writes to the Madras Mail :—" Your notice of my letter to the Government of India, summarised in your issue of the 31st ult. under the above heading, gives me an opportunity of somewhat amplifying my suggestions as to the identification and valuation of the sugarcanes grown in India, which I hope you will allow me to take advantage of. I would strongly deprecate the raising of experimental crops, in an early stage of the investigation at least. It would be amply sufficient for two or more reasons to collect, through the depots of observation, which we will suppose established to command the whole of the cane-growing districts in India, full information on the following points: (1) description of canes grown; (2) when planted and when ordinarily cut; (3) analyses of the canes from six months' old to thirteen months' old, special arrangements being made with some ryot, where necessary, to keep an acre or so of cane on the ground, with suitable arrangements for the occasional watering required, where the thirteen months exceeds the time allowed by local custom, on the exigencies of water supply, for the crops to ripen; (4) how far there is actual coercion of the ryot, to observe the seasons he does in the planting and reaping of his cane from the exigencies of water supply; (5) general observations on the method of planting, of manuring, of keeping the fields, of growing cane and on soil, &c. With information on the above points, we should be able to select canes with some certainty for a given district, and maybe suggest modifications in seasons observed by the ryot and the irrigation authorities, with the assurance of largely improving the value of the cane crop. By-and-by the Government might proceed to the raising of experimental crops from cuttings (and true seedlings perhaps) not only of canes already found in India, but also of canes not yet introduced. The subject of the improvement of the value of India's cane crop is a most important one, and I am sanguine that very much might be done for it by the Government in the manner suggested. I regard it as quite possible that such improvement would be made as to give India industrial undertakings employing labour largely. It would also ensure the circulation of the value of the white sugar consumed in the country within the country, instead of its going out to beet sugar-producing countries as it otherwise must, wholly and inevitably, in a very few years. This, too, when the white sugar consuming power of the people will have largely increased."

THE BOMBAY COTTON MILLS.

(Indian Daily News.)

The Lancashire millowners will not be the less inclined to boycott Indian mills, when they realise that a new departure is likely to be made in the local industry that will introduce competition at Bombay in a branch of manufacture which Lancashire has hitherto been able to regard as its own. For some time past occasional assertions have been made by experts who have devoted attention to the subject that finer counts than the 20s. and 30s. ordinarily spun by Indian mills can be produced in this country from Indian-grown cotton, and The Indian Textile Journal declares in its first number that "India is quite capable of spinning good marketable 40s. and 50s. yarns without going out of the country for her raw material. These numbers of yarn are produced largely in England from a class of American cotton, the strength, length, and fineness of which are inferior to several of our best Indian varieties. Already small experiments have proved the possibility of entering into competition on this ground, and it only wants the establishment of a concern with suitable machinery and careful management to follow out the manufacture on a large and profitable scale." No doubt Bombay enterprise will prove itself equal to the effort, and should success be achieved, a marked stimulus will be given to another branch of the cotton industry for which there is a wide sphere in India, namely, weaving. The Indian Textile Journal says on this head:—"There is enormous latent scope in India for the production of fine yarns; the heavier muslin, finer shirting, jaconet, thread, and other similar manufactures only require a supply of suitable yarn to spring into a healthy existence." It is as well, perhaps, in view of this prospect that the Home Government appears inclined to leave to the Indian Legislature a tolerably free hand in regard to alterations in the factory laws. We see from the mail papers received yesterday that the Under-Secretary of State, in promising to lay on the table of the House of Commons the despatch from Lord Cross which accompanied the copy of the Berlin Labour Conference resolutions sent to India, intimated that the action of the Government of India must be spontaneous. That is as it should be. The Government of India is in a much better position to judge of what would be just and reasonable for Indian mills than the Secretary of State assisted by the interested advice of Lancashire millowners and their representatives. The journal from which we have quoted is a new venture, and one which cannot be said to be in advance of its time. The textile manufactures of India have already reached a stage of development in which a representative organ should find a useful rôle to fill, and there is every ground for a hopeful view of their future. The paper will be published monthly at Bombay, and proposes to give special attention to "the spinning and weaving of cotton, jute, wool, and other textiles, cotton agriculture, and machinery, as it is desired to make the journal one of practical rather than of theoretical usefulness."

COTTON DETERIORATION.

(Bombay Gazette.)

Cotton deterioration is a subject that has been prominently before the public lately, and some observations that are made upon it in the report of the Khandeish Experimental Farm for last year will be read with interest by some who have followed the recent, and by no means completed, discussion on the subject. Mr. Ozanne, in his review of the Superintendent's report, notifies that the "question of discouraging short-stapled cotton, and of preventing the increasing malpractices in the cotton trade, which threaten disaster, are forming the subject of a separate report to Government"—an indication that in official circles the evil has attracted as much notice as it already has done in commercial circles, both in England and in Bombay. Mr. Mehta, superintendent of the farm, gives full details of the results of experiments in the growth of a number of varieties of cotton. They included four varieties of new American cotton imported in 1884, and grown on the farm since 1885 from seeds acclimatised in Dharwar, and four Sea Island varieties from seed imported this year by the Government of India. The new American made the best yield, the Dharwari—American cotton acclimatised in Dharwar—producing only a small crop; for, says Mr. Mehta, there is no doubt that old American seed has deteriorated on account of the same seed being sown so long year after year without change. An interesting illustration of the process of deterioration which is going on was shown in the sowing of a small plot with what is known as the Amraoti Bilati, to which the local merchants of Berar are partial, and to which the Bombay merchants attribute the deterioration of Berari cotton. The result was to show sixty-four per cent. of short-stapled "varadi" in the lot, and less than twenty-eight per cent. of the local "bani" seed, the proportion of which, the Superintendent says, will yearly diminish, while that of the intruding "varadi" will increase. The observations which Mr. Mehta makes upon the deterioration that is going on in Indian cotton were written before the discussion of the subject began in Bombay, but he refers in a footnote to the meeting of the Bombay Cotton Trades Association, and finds in the report of that noteworthy discussion ample confirmation of his views as to the malpractices resorted to by the middlemen. As he says the aim of the middleman is to pass off his goods in a certain class anyhow, and the cotton presses at Colaba would have very little to do if they did not work for the export trade by mixing up half-a-dozen samples and producing varieties to order. The whole case, so far as commercial aspects are concerned, is summed up, however, in the observation that "there would be no cry about the deterioration of Indian cotton if the spade were called a spade and sold as such." This is a view of the case which we have insisted upon more than once. Insist upon it that the up-country dealer shall declare on each bale after it has passed through the press that the consignment is to the extent of so many parts a mixture, and the trade will have no reason to complain. It will then be seen, too, that it is no longer possible to plead against proposals for legislation that the trade asks for mixed cotton, and that bad though the article may be, it is a legitimate response to a legitimate demand. Let the method of "calling a spade a spade" be insisted upon for twelve months, and it will be seen what it is that the trade really demands.

BENGAL.

(August 20.)

ONE of the most interesting parts of the report of the Director of Land Records and Agriculture in Bengal is that giving an account of what has been done to encourage emigration from Behar to Burma. The position of the Indian ryot is now here such as to excite enthusiasm, but in Behar it is worse than usual, and the pressure of population seems already to have reached a point above the capacity of the soil to maintain it. The withdrawal of a portion of the population is therefore even more desirable here than in other parts of India, though the actual density per acre may be less. The idea of emigration to Burma was first mooted at the Agricultural Conference held at Delhi two years ago, and in the following year proposals were submitted to the Government of Bengal that a special officer should be deputed, who should visit Burma in company with some of the chief zemindars and cultivators of Behar, and discuss with the authorities the conditions on which land could be allotted. This was done, the deputation being led by Mr. Finucane in person, and including Rai Jai Prakash Lal, the manager of the Dumraon Raj, one of the best conducted estates in India, and Mr. Hudson, the secretary of the Behar Planters' Association. The result was that Rai Jai Prakash Lal obtained a grant of fifteen thousand acres of land in one district, and another Behar gentleman a grant of fifteen thousand acres in another. The mission was thus not sent in vain, though of course the application for land in the new country by two more than ordinarily intelligent landowners is far from being the same as a desire for emigration on the part of the general population. The question of subsidising the steamship company between Calcutta and Rangoon, as a means of encouraging emigration, is also under the consideration of the Government of Bengal, the Government in Burma having already promised a subsidy.

THE following gentlemen have been nominated members of the new Government Leper Asylum Committee:—Mr. Justice H. T. Prinsep, Nawab Abdool Lutef, Bahadur, C.I.E., and Rai Isser Chunder Mitter, Bahadur, on behalf of the District Charitable Society; Mr. H. Lee, C.S., Mr. W. M. Osmond, and Babu Surendra Nath Banerjee, on behalf of the Corporation; Mr. W. J. Simmons, on behalf of the Public Health Society; and Babu Omirtolal Mittra, on behalf of the Permanent Memorial Fund. Mr. J. Lambert, Commissioner of Police, will sit on the committee ex officio, and of the two medical officers to be appointed to complete the committee, one will probably be Dr. W. J. Simpson, the Health Officer. Mr. P. McGuire, Secretary of the District Charitable Society, will act as Secretary to the Committee.

BOMBAY.

(August 22.)

CAPTAIN H. M. ABUD, Acting Third Assistant Political Resident, Aden, has been granted ordinary furlough for one year.

COLONEL T. M. WARD, Acting Superintendent, Deccan Revenue Survey, has been allowed leave on urgent private affairs for six months.

IN place of Mr. M. H. Starling, who proceeds on leave of absence to Europe for three months, Mr. Chitty, barrister-at-law, has been appointed to act as Clerk of the Crown at Bombay.

SIR CHARLES ELLIOT and Colonel Forbes will inspect the Sind Canals during the cold weather, but the visit is not connected with the Irrigation Conference at Bombay, which the Public Works Minister will not attend.

AT an extraordinary meeting of the Western India Turf Club at Poona, on Monday, it was confirmed unanimously by a proposition of the stewards that the expenses in the Greenhalgh case be defrayed by the club.

COLLECTIONS were made at the churches in Bombay on Sunday on behalf of the fund which is being raised to provide an asylum for the lepers of Bombay. At the Cathedral the Ven. Archdeacon Goldwyer Lewis made an eloquent appeal on behalf of the fund, which resulted in the congregation contributing a sum of Rs. 276-13 towards the fund for the provision of the asylum.

THE Municipal Commissioner informed the Standing Committee of the Corporation on Wednesday that a plot of Municipal ground at Matoonga, formerly occupied by a Native Infantry barracks, had been leased to the secretaries, Homeless Leper Relief Fund, from month to month at a nominal rent of one rupee per mensem, to be vacated on a month's notice from the Municipality.

A GOVERNMENT Resolution states that the Governor in Council has read with interest the report of Rao Bahadur R. K. Waidya, Chief Revenue Officer, Kolhapore, and Honorary Secretary of the Chinchli Show of 1890, regarding the Exhibition, and is glad to observe the continued success of this annual show. The exhibits of agricultural implements and machinery constituted an additional attraction.

THE Bombay Municipal Corporation on the 14th inst. went through several important items of business, one of them being the consideration of Mr. Baldwin Latham's report on the "Sanitation of Bombay." It was resolved, on the motion of Mr. P. M. Mehta, that the Municipal Commissioner be requested to furnish the Corporation with his report, accompanied by those of the Executive Engineer and the Health Officer, on the points of Mr. Baldwin Latham's report, and that approximate estimates be submitted at the same time of the cost of carrying out the scheme or such portions of the scheme as might be recommended for adoption by the Corporation.

THE following is a summary of the Bombay Presidency Season reports for the past week:—Rain throughout the Presidency; beneficial to crops and fodder in the districts of the Deccan and Southern Mahratta country, where prospects are greatly improved. More rain still wanted in Sholapore, and a few talukas of eight other districts. Sowing and transplantation progressing in some districts. Young crops generally flourishing, but slightly damaged by rats and tortoises in two talukas of Kurrachee; by locusts and rats in two talukas of Hyderabad; by caterpillars in parts of Panch Mahals, and by excessive rain in parts of Ratnagiri. Fodder sufficient, and agricultural stock healthy, except in a few talukas.

MADRAS.

(August 20.)

NAWAB BYRAM-UD-DOWLAH has, states the Deccan Times, offered to continue the Memorial Cup formerly given by the Salar Jung family, of which he is the present representative, to be competed for annually at the Hyderabad race meeting. He has offered the stewards, through the secretary, a very handsome silver cup of the value of Rs. 500 (of English manufacture) to be run for in November.

THE Secunderabad paper states that Major Afsur Jung, who was deputed to visit Amrabad by the Nizam, has reported favourably on the place as a sanatorium during the great heat in the plains and at Hyderabad, the only drawback being its great distance from the nearest railway station. His Highness has not yet decided whether he will build a summer residence on the elevated plateau in the vicinity, but it is considered very probable that he will do so after what he has been told of the place.

NORTH-WEST PROVINCES AND PUNJAB.

(August 20.)

MR. WALKER, Chief Engineer, East Coast Railway, is expected in Simla immediately.

ONLY eight stables have sent in entries for the Simla Races, and it is highly probable that the coming meeting will fall through.

MR. HORACE BELL left Simla on Monday to take appointment of Consulting Engineer, Guaranteed State Railways, in Calcutta.

CAPTAIN LISTEK, A.D.C. to the Viceroy, dislocated his knee while playing tennis, but is not badly injured.

MR. R. G. MACDONALD, Accountant-General, Public Works Department, Simla, takes one year's furlough next spring.

OF the failures at the last Intermediate Examination the Allahabad University have memorialised the Vice-Chancellor, praying him to take note of their pitiable condition.

AMONG the lectures of the season at the United Service Institution, Simla, will be one by Colonel Deane, the Director of Army Remounts Department, who will deal with the subject of horsing Artillery and Cavalry in India under the latest conditions.

MISS YULE, daughter of Sir Henry Yule, has offered the Municipal Committee of Lahore, through Sir Peter Lumsden, an oil painting of Lord Napier of Magdala, to be suspended in the Lawrence Hall. The Committee have, of course, accepted the gift with cordial acknowledgments.

IT has been decided by the management of the Delhi-Kalka Railway, after their experience in the late floods, to raise the bridge over the Ghagar River by four feet. This alteration will probably postpone the opening of the line for some time.

AFTER a fortnight's interruption through communication was restored on the Oudh and Rohilkhand line between Bareilly and Saharanpur and Bareilly and Aligarh on the night of the 15th. The trains are now carried over a diversion, the breach having been left to be dealt with at leisure hereafter.

THE latest information regarding the attitude of the Government of India towards the proposals for a new line of railway between Moghal Serai and Calcutta is contained in a communication from the Government of the North-West Provinces to the Upper India Chamber of Commerce. The surveys had been completed, but the results have not yet been sufficiently formulated to admit of a decision being arrived at on the merits of the rival schemes. Meanwhile, so far as the facts before the public go, the weight of the argument remains in favour of the project fathered by the Bengal and North-Western Railway.

THE OLD "KOI HAI"

I.

I'm a regular typical old Koi hai,
 As ever you'd wish to see,
 I'm up and alive at half-past five
 For my chota hazaree.
 I've a brandy and s. in the morning,
 To settle the previous night,
 And, if of a "head" I've a warning,
 One more to put things all right.
 A bottle of Bass for breakfast,
 A tiffin—say two or three.
 Then, if I feel strong I can worry along,
 Till it's time to have one for tea;
 Then a "split" with some fellow sinner,
 And a "nip" when mess bugle's near,
 And then to wash down my dinner,
 Just two or three bottles of beer.
 Then three or four brandies and sodas,
 To keep me from getting a "head,"
 And I think I may say that is all for the day,
 With—p'raps one—just to put me to bed;
 For I only drink when I'm really dry,
 I am such a typical old Koi hai.

II.

I'm a regular typical old Koi hai,
 As ever you'd wish to see,
 And if there's a man knows the mild Aryan,
 I reckon that man is me.
 I know how to give them a hookum,
 And see that they do it quick;
 And I've found that they never mistook 'em,
 If helped with a good big stick.
 I've got all their manners and customs
 At the tip of my fingers, off;
 Their ingenuous smiles and their innocent wiles,
 And that sweet interrogative cough.
 Of women I'm loud in the praise,
 Tho' I never would marry a wife;
 For I'm sure that their quaint little ways
 Would worry me out of my life.
 But I've always a bed and cheroots,
 And a welcome to offer a friend,
 And plenty to drink—and my stories, I think,
 Will almost make your hair stand on end.
 So in India I'll live and in India I'll die,
 For I am a typical old Koi hai.

THE LEGAL OATH IN SIAM.

The following oath, reported to be used in Siam, reminds one in its comprehensive character of the famous oath in "Tristram Shandy."

The witnesses are taken out to a Buddhist temple, where the following oath is administered to them:—"I, who have been brought here as a witness in this matter, do now, in the presence of the sacred image of Buddha, declare that I am wholly unprejudiced against either party, and uninfluenced in any way by the opinions or advice of others; that no prospects of pecuniary advantage or advancement to office have been held out to me. I also declare that I have not received any bribe on this occasion. If that I have now to say be false, or if in my further averments I shall colour or pervert the truth so as to lead the judgment of others astray, may Their Holy Existences before whom I now stand, together with the nine glorious Tewedas of the twenty-two firmaments punish me. If I have not seen, and yet shall say I have seen; if I shall say I know that which I do not know, then may I be thus punished. Should innumerable descendants of Deity happen for the regeneration and salvation of mankind, may my erring and migratory soul be found beyond the pale of their mercy. Wherever I go, may I be compassed with dangers and not escape from them, whether murderers, robbers, spirits of the earth, woods or water or air, or all the divinities who adore Buddha; or from the gods of the four elements and all other spirits. May the blood pour out of every pore of my skin that my crime may be made manifest to the world. May all or any of these evils overtake me, within three days, or may I never stir from the spot on which I now stand; or may the lightning cut me in two, so that I may be exposed to the derision of the people; or if I should be walking abroad, may I be torn in pieces by either of the supernaturally endowed lions, or destroyed by poisonous serpents. If on the water of the river or ocean, may supernatural crocodiles or great fish devour me; or may the winds and waves overwhelm me; or may the dread of such evils keep me a prisoner during life, at home, estranged from every pleasure. May I be inflicted with intolerable oppression of my superiors, or may a plague cause my death. After which may I be precipitated into hell, there to go through innumerable stages of torture, amongst which may I be condemned to carry water over the flaming regions in wicker baskets to assuage the heat of thant tertonwan when he enters the infernal hall of justice, and thereafter may I fall into the lowest pit of hell; or if these miseries should not ensue, may I, after death, migrate into the body of a slave and suffer all the pain and hardship attending the worst state of such a being during the period measure by the sand of the sea, or may I animate the body of an animal, or be a beast during five hundred generations or be born a hermaphrodite five hundred times or endure in the body of a dead, dumb, and houseless beggar every species of disease during the same number of generations, and then may I be hurled to narok and there be tortured by Phya Yum."

SUICIDE OF A REPORTER.

Mr. George Edward Watson, chief reporter of the Madras Mail, who had lately arrived from Bombay, where he was reporter to the Bombay Gazette, shot himself at noon to-day at his residence, death ensuing immediately.

At the inquest held this evening deceased's wife and brother-in-law spoke to his having complained of restlessness, but said he was otherwise well. He had breakfast with the family, after which he wrote to the Mail office asking to be excused from work, and then he went upstairs to have, as he said, a good sleep. A few minutes afterwards the report of a pistol was heard. The wife went up and saw her husband lying lifeless on a mattress, with the revolver, purchased four days ago, in one hand and a cigar in the other.

Mr. St. Leger, the manager of the Madras Mail, deposed that deceased had come from Bombay in answer to an advertisement in the Times of India, and joined the Madras Mail as chief reporter on the 18th of last month on a salary of Rs. 250 per mensem. He had excellent testimonials. He had not attended office as he was suffering from fever.

Two reporters of the Madras Mail deposed to having heard the deceased complaining of headache since his arrival in Madras. He told them that while at Baroda, reporting for the Bombay Gazette the Bombay Governor's tour, he slept in a house where a murder had occurred, and there saw a headless woman who asked him to suck her blood. He struggled with her, and next morning saw blood spots on his bed. Deceased seemed thus to be suffering from some mental hallucination.

After other evidence the jury returned a verdict of death by his own hands while under the influence of temporary insanity. Deceased was aged twenty-five years, and was married in Bombay three years ago.—Madras, Aug. 12th.

THE report of the proceedings at the annual meeting of the Alexandra Native Girls' English Institution has just been issued in book form, and contains an encouraging record of the work of the institution during the past year under the able management of Miss Serene Manockjee Cursetjee and Mr. D. N. Wadia.

THE Calcutta Health Society have addressed a letter to the Government of India on the subject of the pollution of the Indian rivers, with special reference to the Benares drainage scheme. They ask that the practice of ejecting crude sewage into the rivers should be discontinued, and that a Rivers' Pollution Prevention Act should be passed, similar to the Acts in Great Britain, and that in the case of Benares the sewage should at least be purified before being discharged into the Ganges.

MR. SAVI, who is in officiating charge of the Kheddah operations, has proved himself a worthy successor to Mr. Sanderson. He had captured no less than 247 elephants. A correspondent, writing to a contemporary, says:—"The last elephant keddah operations under Mr. Savi resulted in the capture of 247 elephants. The base camp was, in consequence of information and advice received from the late officiating superintendent, Mr. Clark, selected at a place called Badlekhatta, near the Garrow Hills, and trackers (called jassooos) were sent out to find the tracks of elephants, on receiving khubber of which Mr. Savi made his arrangements to hunt this part, and did so for six weeks, during which time he succeeded in capturing forty elephants. Being dissatisfied with this, and experience having taught him the uselessness of continuing hunting in that particular spot, Mr. Savi shifted his base camp with very great difficulty, by means of elephants, carts, and steamer, to a place called Fultengunge in the Goolpara district, and, after pitching his camp, proceeded into the hills about nine miles distant, and in five weeks captured no less than 207 elephants. Mr. Savi is confident that there are many elephants in the Garrow Hills. The centre of the Garrow Hills, which has not yet been hunted, is full of them. A pretty clear proof of his knowledge is his very successful catch last season, when it was prophesied that he could get none."

MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

THE war service troops of the Punjab States will assemble at Patiala for the Viceroy's inspection at the end of October. His Excellency will not visit the States separately.

A SPECIAL class for the instruction of officers in the duties of mounted infantry was formed at Poona on Aug. 22, under Captain P. Marling, V.C., 18th Hussars.

LANCE-CORPORAL PRICKETT, Northumberland Fusiliers, has been remanded to the High Court at Lahore on the charge of causing the death of a Native cart-driver, on the Murree-road in April last, who was shot dead by a bullet.

AMONG the lectures of the season at the United Service Institution, Simla, will be one by Colonel Deane, Director of the Army Remount Department, who will deal with the subject of horsing artillery and cavalry in India under the latest conditions.

THE Government of India have decided that a non-commissioned officer appointed sergeant-instructor of Volunteers shall be treated as a regimental non-commissioned officer in regard to passage and messing until he actually joins his new appointment.

THE question of meeting the Commissariat grain supply of Quetta directly from the cultivators who pay their rents in kind is now receiving attention. Captain Wingate of the Department goes shortly to Peshin to see what arrangements are possible.

THE Government of India have sanctioned the grant of compensation to the Native troops and followers composing the late Zaila Field Force for extra wear and tear of clothing and equipments, the force having experienced exceptional difficulties in their march through a country where there were no roads.

THE authorities, according to the Civil and Military Gazette, have decided that Chakrata is unsuitable for a garrison class. It has been determined to leave it as it was, and the quarters which the officers under instruction were to have occupied have been assigned to the married portions of the Kailana Details.

WHAT might have been a very nasty accident took place at Gharial recently. Some soldiers of the Northumberland Fusiliers were repairing a cookhouse, when some of the men outside saw the building shaking. They called to their comrades who were inside, and all ran out just as the building fell in. Four escaped without injury, one was cut about a little and the sixth had his leg broken.

MAJOR-GENERAL GORDON, of the Bengal Staff Corps, succeeds Sir William Lockhart as Assistant Military Secretary at the Horse Guards when the latter vacates his appointment in October to return to India. There were no less than thirty-nine applications, says the Pioneer, for this coveted billet, the last candidates left in with General Gordon being General Hogg, of the Bombay Staff Corps, and Colonel M. Gerard, of the Central India Horse.

THERE is one statement in Mr. Oliver's interesting book, "Across the Border," which requires correction. In a footnote detailing the strength of the Punjab Frontier Force, he states that screw-guns are to be added to the Corps of Guides. There is, says the Pioneer, no intention of doing this, as a mountain battery is a unit in itself, and it would in no case be advisable to change the conditions under which the frontier batteries are now maintained.

IN the organisation of field hospitals it has been laid down for guidance that, out of the eight field hospitals authorised for the lines of communication, one British and one Native field hospital will be detailed for each brigade on the lines of communication (or two British and two Native hospitals for both brigades), the remaining two British and two Native field hospitals being reserved for the sick and wounded returning from the front to the base of operations.

THE first troopship this season, which conveys the 16th Lancers out to India, will reach Bombay on Sept. 29. There will be fourteen arrivals in all, the last being fixed for April 8. Five batteries arrive on Oct. 27; the 1st Battalion King's Royal Rifles on Dec. 22; the 1st Bedfordshire on Jan. 6; and the 2nd Suffolk on Feb. 17. The return voyages extend from Oct. 9, when the 17th Lancers leave, to April 17.

FOR the vacancy on the Bengal establishment which Sir Thomas Baker's departure creates, it is natural that general anticipation should pitch upon Major-General W. K. Elles, the present Adjutant-General. Of all the officers eligible for the appointment he has unquestionably the foremost claims, and having been three and a-half years in his present post presumably he would be willing to exchange it for a command. So far, however, the Horse Guards, with whom the matter lies, have not intimated how their choice will fall.

SIR CHARLES ARBUTHNOT, Commander-in-Chief in Madras, has recently been promoted to full General, a rank seldom attained by an officer on the active list in India, and one which Sir Frederick Roberts himself has not yet reached permanently. General Arbuthnot will, we believe, vacate his command on Feb. 16 next year, by which date he will have served five years as a Presidency Commander-in-Chief, having been appointed first to Bombay in 1886. General Sir Thomas Baker was at one time regarded as a likely successor, but his appointment to the Quartermaster-Generalship at home puts that out of the question.

THE effects of the rise in exchange are very far-reaching. One class of persons who will benefit materially are the Australian shippers of remounts for the Indian Army. It will be remembered that £50 sterling was fixed some years ago as the price of a remount, but when the rupee declined in value the sum was changed to Rs. 650. This at the time caused much reasonable discontent among the shippers, but in the coming season they will score considerably. Taking the rupee at 1s. 8d.—and there is reason to believe that it may be higher than this in a few months—they will get over £54 per horse accepted in India. It is calculated that they will thus clear £1,000 more on every shipload of 400 horses than they could have expected to realise when they made their purchases of stock last spring.

THE Times of Ceylon remarks:—"The Imperial authorities have at length decided to increase the force of artillery stationed in Ceylon by the despatch of another battery of Royal Artillery to augment the force now stationed here. At present there are supposed to be two batteries of artillery here—one at Trincomalie and one at Colombo—but in reality the Trincomalie battery is the 33rd Southern Division, and the one here is the old 9-1 Southern Division, having no existence in the Army List. When the new force, probably consisting of seventy men, reaches Colombo, they will be divided between the two batteries, and will be accompanied by a staff of five officers, the battery now here being numbered according to the new classification. This increase in the force of artillery is to be in addition to the force of Sikh artillery, and will bring up our force of that arm to two batteries of R.A. and two companies of Asiatic artillery (gun lascars)."

THE Pioneer says:—"If the imposition of what he considers an excessive amount of work justifies the soldier in withholding his obedience to the authorities—and this seems to be the accepted view of the relation nowadays—there would probably be, let us say, a strike, in one distinguished cavalry regiment in Bengal at an early date. According to a trooper's account of the matter he has two horses to groom at midday stables every day and three in the evening, and the men with all this labour only get four nights in bed. Considering the time of year and the cost of exertion, this certainly seems an overdue allowance of work; and of course the men cannot help seeing the reason of their having so much to do. It is because there are so few of them. The system of sending men off to the hills for the summer is an excellent one as regards the infantry, but in the case of the mounted branches, where each man who goes increases the work to be done by those who are left behind, it may evidently be carried too far."

ENGLISH FALSEHOODS ABOUT INDIA.

THERE is a newspaper published in London, under the auspices of the Indian National Congress, which we have referred to more than once in these columns as being an organ doing its little best to bring British rule in India into contempt. The paper is called India: a Journal for the Discussion of Indian Affairs. The Editor is Mr. William Digby, C.I.E., secretary to the Congress, and on the British committee of the Congress are the following Englishmen—more than one of whom held office under the Government of India—Sir William Wedderburn, Bart. (Chairman), Messrs. A. O. Hume, C.B., W. S. Caine, M.P., J. E. Ellis, M.P., W. S. B. McLaren, M.P., and Mr. George Yule, a name not unknown in Anglo-Indian mercantile history. Now one and all of these gentlemen may be credited with a sincere desire to let the people of England know the real truth how India is governed under British rule, and if as partisans of the Congress they are inclined to extenuate nothing of shortcomings of that rule, it might be supposed that, as honourable English gentlemen, they would oppose aught being set down in malice. They are not ignorant, as some of the Congress English supporters are, of India itself. Sir William Wedderburn and Mr. Hume have been behind the scenes of the official stage in that country, and Mr. George Yule must have some knowledge as to whether British rule in India is working for good or evil on the whole. This being so, the question is not irrelevant—Do these honourable, honest English gentlemen read the articles which Mr. William Digby, C.I.E., periodically publishes on that British rule? Have they read the number for August 29, and if so, do they wish it to be understood that they adopt the following as applicable to our British system of governing the country:—

"We are crushing manliness, making an honourable self-assertion impossible, and emasculating millions upon millions of people. Added to this, the English character is, in its turn, being corrupted by the exercise of irresponsible power." This is by way of prelude to a long abusive article about the Hyderabad Sowar incident taken from the Hindu, and put by the Editor of India into big type. In another article, to which Editorial prominence is given, a writer, signing himself "G.L.M.," has the following about the administration of justice in India under British rule. It appears to be the second of a series appearing in the Journal, and here are some elegant extracts from it:—

"The Government of India, which is maintained by the Indians, which exists for the Indians, is good and generous to all except to the Indian in his own country. . . . The Government has done all it can to protect European criminals from the effect of their crime. . . . In the case of the European the Government acts the part of a fond parent in his dotage. But how utterly careless about its other children, the poor Indians! In many provinces of India a magistrate may be empowered to send an Indian to prison for seven years; but, as we have seen, he can give only three months to a European convict. It is doting in the case of the European; it is utter heartlessness in the case of the poor Indian."

This is the kind of stuff which Mr. Digby edits and Sir William Wedderburn apparently approves of. But Mr. Digby gives elegant extracts from other papers as well as original matter. He reproduces this, for instance, from a letter sent by a Native gentleman to another journal:—

"Despotism is the principle upon which the Indian Government is based. Talk of a 'paternal government!' Is it a paternal Government when you build railways for military purposes when millions are dying through famine for the want of irrigating canals to moisten the earth to produce harvest? Is it a paternal Government when you convulse the country with the measureless calamity of a foreign war—ruthless and reckless—and waste their earnings to satisfy the cupidity of a guilty and a tottering Cabinet? Is it a paternal Government that while you are building palaces for your tax-collectors millions of the children of the soil are growing up in ignorance, in poverty, and in darkness? Is it a paternal Government which has imposed upon a poor people a salt tax, which reaches the humblest cottage in India? Is it a paternal Government when all the high offices are monopolised by Europeans—most of them underserving—who are kept up at extravagant salaries, when the merit and talent of the Indians are neglected? I ask, and I ask it with shame and sorrow, is it a paternal Government when Indian women are disgraced in public streets by European soldiers who are not even brought before a Court of Justice? Is it a paternal Government when under its rule an Englishman shoots and kicks to death natives of India—as if they were dogs—and his only punishment is a fine of 30s., or nothing at all?"

Mr. Digby is, we believe, the paid servant of the Congress, and therefore may have reasons convincing to himself of the faith he professes? But what about the other English members of the Congress Committee? Are not they, too—honourable—"all honourable" men?
